

https://dspace.org/

Cultural Kasi’preneur

Motholo, Dimakatso

2020-07
Arts Research Africa, The Wits School of Arts, University of the Witwatersrand
https://hdl.handle.net/10539/29215

How are a new generation of South African cultural entrepreneurs decolonising the perception of what education/knowledge means as they produce other forms of learning, success and survival in the township? This hybrid presentation will be a performance of the reality of the township experience through a monologue from the play titled Ekasi Lam together with the selling of Retrofontein garments.

Downloaded from a DSpace repository. https://dspace.org/

DOI: https://doi.org/10.17605/OSF.IO/SPGUJ

PERFORMANCE-LECTURE

CULTURAL KASI'PRENEUR

DIMAKATSO MOTHOLO

This article is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International (CC BY 4.0) licence:
https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0

How are a new generation of South African cultural entrepreneurs decolonising the perception of what education/knowledge means as they produce other forms of learning, success, and survival in the township? This hybrid presentation will be a performance of the reality of the township experience through a monologue from the play titled Ekasi Lam together with the selling of Retrofontein garments.

Dimakatso is researching an MA in Cultural Policy and Management in the Wits School of Arts with a focus on cultural entrepreneurship in the township; didimotholo@gmail.com