ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This dissertation is the result of inspiration from African scholars and interests to contribute to the South African peace diplomacy in the continent, particularly in West Africa. I thank David Monyae for introducing me to the South African foreign policy, my mentor Dr Abdul Rahman Lamin for his patience and fine-tuning my work. I would also like to thank Prof Rok Ajulu for imparting to me his immense experience and knowledge of African Affairs. I am also indebted to the department of International Relations at Wits University.

I thank a number of colleagues and friends at the Africa Institute of South Africa (AISA) who helped me with resources to complete this work. Special accolades to Victor Luvhengo and David Ebong Kode for lengthy discussions about African politics as well as their relevant critics.

I would also like to express my profound thanks to my family in Trevignon for their unequivocal support for my work and always wanting the best out of me. I also wish to acknowledge Anne Simon for proof reading my writing, editorial skills and panel-beating my bibliography-you deserve special token of appreciation.

Many thanks to the following family members and friends from ekasi; Tebogo Makhubedu, Sipho Sibeko, Bathusile Sebeela, David and Marcellin Zounmenou, Sanah Manganye, Moses, Ellen, Nuku and John Rametsi. Here, at last, the result of your undying love and support for the time spent away from you.
