RULES OF EVIDENCE in CRIMINAL CASES in SOUTH AFRICA

by Jean Campbell

Thesis presented to the University of the Witwatersrand for the degree of Master of Laws

1970
This thesis consists of the printed text of the chapters on the law of evidence in Volume IV of South African Criminal Law and Procedure (formerly Gardiner and Lansdown), now in the press. For this purpose the pages have been re-numbered, the cross-references amended, and special indexes prepared. The printed text generally states the law as at 31st December, 1969, and relevant cases reported in the South African Law Reports, January - July 1970, are annotated in typescript.

My thanks are due to Professor Ellison Kahn, to Professor C. J. R. Dugard, and to Professor P. Q. R. Boberg, of the University of the Witwatersrand, for their generous help, by advice and by example, on matters of technique; and to Messrs. Juta and Co. Ltd., publishers, for kindly making available the specially numbered pages for inclusion in this thesis.

Jean Campbell Bibliography

Principal Works and Journals Cited

For speed of reference books are cited in the text in full without abbreviation.

Baker, R. W. The Hearsay Rule (1950)
Cross, E. Evidence, 3rd ed. (1967)
Fortes, M., and Dieterlen, G. African Systems of Thought (1965)
Hahlo, R. R., and Kahn, Ellison The South African Legal System and its Background (1968)

Hiemstra, V. G. Suid-Afrikaanse Strafproses (1967)

Morgan, E. M. Some Problems of Proof under the Anglo-American System of Litigation (1956)

Morris, H. F. Evidence in East Africa (1958)
O'Dowd, A. F. Law of Evidence in South Africa (1963)

Phipson on Evidence, 10th ed. (1963)

Scrille, C. Norman The Law of Evidence, 3rd ed. (1952)
Thayer, J. B. Preliminary Treatise of Evidence (1898)

Wigmore on Evidence, 3rd ed. (1940)

Periodicals (mode of citation, if not in full, is given in brackets)

Annual Survey of South African Law
Australian Law Journal (Austr. L.J.)
Cambridge Law Journal (Camb. L.J.)
Codicillus
Criminal Law Review (Crim. L.R.)
Harvard Law Review (Harv. L.R.)
Israel Law Review
Law Quarterly Review (L.Q.R.)
McGill Law Journal
Melbourne Law Review
Michigan Law Review
Modern Law Review (Mod. L.R.)
New Zealand Universities' Law Review
Rhodesian Law Journal (Rhod. L.J.)
Tydskrif vir Hedendaags Reënspraak (T.H.R.-H.R.)
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Chapter</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>Nature and Sources of the Law of Evidence</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>The Nature of Legal Evidence</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>Sources of South African Law</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>Illegally Obtained Evidence</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Matters Proved Without Evidence</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>Formal Admissions</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>Judicial Notice</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
<td>Facts judicially noticed</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1.</td>
<td>Local notoriety</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.</td>
<td>Facts notoriously ascertainable</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.</td>
<td>Public matters and affairs of state</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B</td>
<td>Judicial Notice of matters of law</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1.</td>
<td>South African law</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.</td>
<td>Custom</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.</td>
<td>Foreign law</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>Witnesses : Attendance and Competence</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>Introduction</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>Compellability</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>Competence of Persons suffering Mental Impairment</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>IV</td>
<td>Competence of Young Children</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>V</td>
<td>Competence of Judicial Officers</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VI</td>
<td>The Accused as a Witness</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
<td>Unsworn statement</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B</td>
<td>Testimony on oath</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1.</td>
<td>Evidence for the defence</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.</td>
<td>Evidence for the prosecution</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VII</td>
<td>Compellability of Accomplice</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VIII</td>
<td>Competence and Compellability of Accused's Spouse</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>The Manner of Adducing Evidence</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
<td>Introduction</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B</td>
<td>Commission, Interrogatories, Certificates, Affidavits</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C</td>
<td>Real Evidence</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>D</td>
<td>Readings from Instruments</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chapter</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>---------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B. Documentary Evidence</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. Primary and secondary evidence</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Proof of documents</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Proof of handwriting</td>
<td>46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>F. Oral Evidence</td>
<td>47</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. Oath, Affirmation or Admonition</td>
<td>47</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Examination and Rebuttal of Witnesses</td>
<td>48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>a. Evidence in Chief</td>
<td>48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. Impeaching own witness</td>
<td>49</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Refreshing memory</td>
<td>52</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Previous consistent statements</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>b. Cross-examination</td>
<td>52</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. Generally</td>
<td>58</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Cross-examination as to credit</td>
<td>62</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Previous inconsistent statements</td>
<td>65</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>c. Re-examination</td>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>d. Examination by the Court</td>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

5 Relevance and Admissibility

I Relevance | 69 |

II Character of the Accused | 70 |

1. Good and bad character | 73 |

2. Previous convictions | 79 |

3. Previous acquittals | 80 |

III The Rule against Hearsay | 80 |

1. What is hearsay | 80 |

Implied Assertions as hearsay | 83 |

2. Res Gestae and the Hearsay Rule | 86 |

2.1 Statements in issue or relevant to issue | 86 |

2.2 Statements as conduct evidencing treatment | 87 |

2.3 Verbal parts of relevant acts | 88 |

2.4 Statements of physical or mental condition | 89 |

2.5 Declarations of intention to show intention carried into effect | 91 |

2.6 Spontaneous declarations | 92 |

3. Declarations by Deceased Persons | 94 |

3.1 Declarations in the course of duty | 95 |

3.2 Declarations against interest | 97 |

3.3 Dying declarations | 100 |

3.4 Declarations as to pedigree | 102 |

3.5 Declarations as to public rights | 104 |

3.6 Post-testamentary declarations | 106 |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Chapter</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>4. Public Documents</td>
<td>107</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5. Statutory Exceptions to the Hearsay Rule</td>
<td>107</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.1 Bankers' books</td>
<td>110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2 Documents of companies, associations, etc.</td>
<td>110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6. Evidence in Prior Proceedings</td>
<td>112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7. Admissions</td>
<td>116</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.1 Proving admissibility</td>
<td>118</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.2 Freely made without inducement</td>
<td>119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.3 Statements in party's presence</td>
<td>122</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.4 Admissions by conduct</td>
<td>124</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.5 Vicarious admissions</td>
<td>125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.6 Co-criminal admissions common purpose</td>
<td>127</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8. Confessions</td>
<td>128</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.1 What is a confession</td>
<td>128</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.2 Proving admissibility</td>
<td>133</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.3 Conditions of admissibility</td>
<td>134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.3.1 Sound and sober senses</td>
<td>134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.3.2 Free and voluntary, uninduced</td>
<td>135</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.3.3 Made to a peace officer</td>
<td>137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.3.4 Made at a preparatory examination</td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9. Facts discovered from Accused's Statements or Pointings-Out</td>
<td>141</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>IV Opinion and Belief</td>
<td>142</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. General Opinion and Report</td>
<td>142</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Opinion Evidence</td>
<td>142</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.1 Lay opinion</td>
<td>143</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.2 Expert opinion</td>
<td>144</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>V Judgments as Evidence</td>
<td>147</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6 Privilege</td>
<td>148</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I Privilege of Witness</td>
<td>149</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. Privilege of Accused as Witness</td>
<td>149</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Privilege against Self-Incrimination</td>
<td>155</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Professional Privilege</td>
<td>158</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4. Privilege for Income Tax Matters</td>
<td>162</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5. Marital Privilege</td>
<td>163</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II Privileged Information</td>
<td>164</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. Affairs of State</td>
<td>164</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Privilege Protecting Informers</td>
<td>167</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Judicial Disclosures</td>
<td>169</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7 The Burden of Proof</td>
<td>171</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I. General Principles</td>
<td>172</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A. Prima Facie Case</td>
<td>174</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B. Accused's Silence</td>
<td>175</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C. Failure to Call Witness</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>D. Statutory Alterations of the Burden</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>E. Burden of Proving Facts after Verdict</td>
<td>178</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Table of Statutes

South African:

Pre-Union Statutes

- Act No. 11 of 1896 (N)
- Act No. 12 of 1850 (C)

Post-Union Statutes

- Powers and Privileges of Parliament Act, No. 19 of 1911
- Girls and Mentally Defective Women Act, No. 3 of 1916
- Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, No. 31 of 1917
  - Section 273
  - 275
  - 280
  - 286
  - 295
- Justices of the Peace and Oaths Act, No. 16 of 1914
- Companies Act, No. 46 of 1926
- Insolvency Act, No. 24 of 1936
- Motor Carrier Transportation Act, No. 39 of 1930
- General Law Amendment Act, No. 46 of 1935
- Income Tax Act, No. 31 of 1941
- Magistrates Courts Act, No. 32 of 1944
- Stock Exchanges Control Act, No. 7 of 1947
- South African Citizenship Act, No. 44 of 1949
- Privy Council Appeals Act, No. 16 of 1950
- Population Registration Act, No. 30 of 1950
- Suppression of Communism Act, No. 44 of 1950

General Law Amendment Act, No. 32 of 1952

Matrimonial Affairs Act, No. 37 of 1953

Criminal Procedure Act, No. 56 of 1955

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>39</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>109</td>
<td>206</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>156</td>
<td>209</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>157</td>
<td>210</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>169</td>
<td>211</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>183</td>
<td>212</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>186</td>
<td>218</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>189</td>
<td>220</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>206</td>
<td>222</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>209</td>
<td>222</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>210</td>
<td>222</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>211</td>
<td>222</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>212</td>
<td>222</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>218</td>
<td>222</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>220</td>
<td>222</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>222</td>
<td>222</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Section 221
222
226
227
229
229
230 231
232
233 234 235 236
237 238 239
240
241
242
243
244
245 246
247
248
249
251
252 253 254
255
256
257
258
260
261
262
263
263 \textit{bis}
263 \textit{ter}
265
266
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section 267</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>270</td>
<td>110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>271</td>
<td>87, 203</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>276</td>
<td>142, 203</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>277</td>
<td>60</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>280</td>
<td>60</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>283</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>284</td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>285</td>
<td>5, 7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>286</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>287</td>
<td>3, 49, 53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>288</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>289</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>290</td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>291</td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>292</td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>303 bis</td>
<td>3, 4, 13, 17, 31</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>304</td>
<td>39</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>315</td>
<td>41</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>360</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>377</td>
<td>156</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>381</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>383</td>
<td>125, 127</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>393</td>
<td>40, 203</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Official Secrets Act, No.16 of 1956
Incorporation Act, No.25 of 1957
Railways and Harbours Service Act, No.22 of 1960
Children's Act, No.35 of 1960
Evidence Act, No.14 of 1952
Income Tax Act, No.58 of 1962
Foreign Courts Evidence Act, No.80 of 1952
Justices of the Peace and Commissioners of Oaths Act,
No.15 of 1965
Maintenance Act No.23 of 1963
Births, Marriages and Deaths Registration Act,
No.81 of 1963
Powers and Privileges of Parliament Act, No.91 of 1963
Criminal Procedure Amendment Act, No.92 of 1963
General Law Further Amendment Act, No.93 of 1963
Price Control Act, No.25 of 1964
Bantu Labour Act, No.67 of 1964
Shops and Offices Act, No.75 of 1964
General Law Amendment Act, No.80 of 1964
Civil Proceedings Evidence Act, No.25 of 1965
Group Areas Act, No.36 of 1966
General Law Amendment Act, No.62 of 1966
Maintenance Amendment Act, No.19 of 1967
Terrorism Act, No.33 of 1967
Abolition of Juries Act, No.34 of 1969
General Law Amendment Act, No.101 of 1969
English Statutes

Criminal Law Procedure Act, 1865 (c. 18)  49, 64, 65
Interpretation Act, 1899 (c. 63)  13
Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (c. 36)  149, 163
Evidence Act, 1938 (1 & 2 Geo. V, c. 28)  83
Criminal Evidence Act, 1965 (c. 20)  83, 95
Criminal Justice Act, 1967 (c. 80)  6
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case</th>
<th>Reference</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A v. A and B</td>
<td>1908 T.L. 188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
<td>1952 (3) S.A. 212 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
<td>1959 (3) S.A. 498 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
<td>1962 (4) S.A. 679 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A &amp; B.C. Cheving Gum, Ltd. [1967]</td>
<td>3 W.L.R. 495</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abdoolia 1957 (1) S.A. 251 (E)</td>
<td>43, 144, 147</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abdoorham 1954 (3) S.A. 163 (N)</td>
<td>184, 185</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abdul 1905 T.S. 119</td>
<td>101, 102</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abdul 1930 T.P.D. 346</td>
<td>191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abel 1947 (2) S.A. 776 (O)</td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abel 1948 (1) S.A. 654 (A.D.)</td>
<td>202</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abelson 1933 T.P.D. 227</td>
<td>165</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abraham 1927 T.P.D. 240</td>
<td>73</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abraham, ex parte 1937 E.D.L. 197</td>
<td>180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Abbey 1959 (2) S.A. 76 (E)</td>
<td>122, 123</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adam 1960 (2) S.A. 86 (S.W.A.)</td>
<td>187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adams (1900) 17 S.C. 544</td>
<td>13, 14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adams v. McMillan (1900) 23 S.C. 343</td>
<td>159</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adams, in re [1922] P. 240</td>
<td>98</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adams 1946 C.P.D. 288</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adamstein 1937 C.P.D. 331</td>
<td>55, 72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adanathwaite v. Sympson (1916) 4 Camp. 371</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adenauer Municipality v. Satskorn 1960 (4) S.A. 65 (E)</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adkins 1955 (4) S.A. 242 (G.W.)</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adrianto 1965 (3) S.A. 436 (A.D.)</td>
<td>68</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>African Guarantee &amp; Indemnity Co., Ltd. v. Honi</td>
<td>1935 S.A. 524</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>African 1949 (3) S.A. 627 (O)</td>
<td>136, 139, 141</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Agassiz v. London Tramway Co., Ltd. (1872)</td>
<td>27 L.R. 492</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ahmed 1940 A.D. 333</td>
<td>93</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ahmed 1958 (3) S.A. 331 (T)</td>
<td>26, 132, 184</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alexander 1915 T.P.D. 561</td>
<td>83, 197</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alexander 1925 T.S. 14</td>
<td>126</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ajaati v. Controller of Customs [1954] 2 W.L.R. 1405 (P.B.)</td>
<td>33, 15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alacon (1926) 47 N.L.R. 506</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alcock v. Royal Exchange Insurance Co. (1849)</td>
<td>13 Q.B. 292</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alexander 1915 T.P.D. 561</td>
<td>84, 86</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alexander 1964 (3) S.A. 823 (O)</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alexander (1) 1965 (2) S.A. 769 (A.D.)</td>
<td>23, 137, 160</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alexander (2) 1965 (2) S.A. 818 (O)</td>
<td>112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Algar [1954] 1 Q.B. 379 (C.C.A.)</td>
<td>52</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alkon (1926) 47 N.L.R. 102</td>
<td>76</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alper 1931 T.P.D. 429</td>
<td>65</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Amad 1958 (2) S.A. 558 (K)</td>
<td>62</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Amor v. Barton [1912] 1 K.B. 40</td>
<td>90</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Amorias 1963 (3) S.A. 686 (S.R.)</td>
<td>119, 120, 137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anderson, Inhabitants of (1846) 9 Q.B. 663</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anderson v. Whalley (1852) 3 Car. &amp; L. 54</td>
<td>52</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anderson (1929) 12 Cr. App. 178</td>
<td>66</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anderson v. Anderson 1942 W.L.D. 86</td>
<td>180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Case Title</td>
<td>Year</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anderson v. The Master</td>
<td>1949</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anderson v. Sunber</td>
<td>1915</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anderson v. Minister of Justice</td>
<td>1954</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Andrews 1920 A.D. 200</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Andrews 1964 (4) S.A. 805 (C)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anglia (1918) 39 N.I.R. 147</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Annapurna v. Chetty</td>
<td>1946</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anscharta 1946 C.P.D. 4</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Antrobus (1835) 2 Ad. &amp; E. 788</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aprilis 1965 (4) S.A. 173 (C)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apter 1941 O.P.D. 161</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aquadro 1934 O.P.D. 36</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aranow 1908 T.S. 656</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Armstrong [1922] 2 K.B. 555</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Arndt &amp; Co. (Pty.) Ltd. 1947 (3) S.A. 32 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Artman 1968 (3) S.A. 339 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Arthur v. Beuzidenhout &amp; Meisy</td>
<td>1962</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Artman 1968 (3) S.A. 339 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Atkinson v. Morris</td>
<td>1897</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Austin v. Rayner [1958] 3 All E.R. 566</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ayton v. Kinnaird (1805) 6 East 188</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ayresford Peerage (1886) 11 App. Cas. 1 (R.L.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Azar, ex parte 1952 O.P.D. 107</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B 1933 O.P.D. 139</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B v. Attorney-General [1965] 1 All E.R. 62</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bartman 1960 (3) S.A. 533 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bapoollal 1952 (4) S.A. 731 (N)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baxtell v. Durban Corp. (1927) 40 N.I.R. 284</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bayas 1952 (1) S.A. 437 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bagley v. Cole 1915 C.P.D. 776</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baker (1877) 12 K. &amp; Rob. 53</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B a l e e r [1895] 1 Q.B. 997</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baker v. Christiane 1920 W.L.D. 14</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baldwin [1925] 1 All E.R. 402</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Balfour 1918 O.P.D. 386</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ballin 1905 (1) P.H., H. 18</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beloi 1949 (1) S.A. 491 (T)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bamberg (1872) 1 Ross. 8</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Berling 1969 (4) S.A. 208 (N)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barkhan 1917 T.P.D. 35</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barkly West Bridge Co., Ltd. v. Colonial Govt.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(1908) 25 S.C. 49</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barlin 1926 A.D. 459</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barnes 1965 (2) P.A., H. 150 (N)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barnett 1926 T.P.D. 464</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barney (1932)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barnicot v. Minister of Justice</td>
<td>1931</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Banxie 1959 (1) P.H., H. 22 (O)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barson 1946 O.P.D. 479</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Bass 1953 1 G.B. 680 (G.C.A.)
Bassier 1943 C.P.D. 475
Basson v. Attorneys etc. Fidelity Guarantee Fund 1957 (3) S.A. 490 (q)
Basson 1965 (1) S.A. 697 (q)
Bates 1927 E.D.L. 453
Bay 1944 (4) S.A. 427 (r)
Bayat 1947 (4) S.A. 128 (q)
Baytopp (1912) 33 N.L.R. 28
Beattie 1927 W.L.D. 156
Beattie 1932 G.W.L. 40
Beattie 1967 (2) P.R., H. 318 (q)
Becker's Estate v. Eaton Robins Ltd. 1924 C.P.D. 42
Becker 1929 A.D. 167
Becker 1956 (1) S.A. 18 (c)
Bedfordshire (1855) 4 EL & Bl. 535
Bedi 1946 C.P.D. 242
Bedingfield (1879) 14 Cox C. 341
Beech v. Jones (1849) 5 C.B. 696
Beedingsham [1921] 3 E.B. 464
Behrman 1957 (1) S.A. 435 (q)
Belinsky 1925 A.D. 363
Bel 1929 C.P.D. 478
Bell v. Hogg 1967 J.J. 47
Bellinger 1955 (2) S.A. 566 (A.D.)
Belliss [1966] 1 All E.R. 552 (C.C.A.) Ben 1925 E.D.L. 89
Bednarek 1946 G.W.L. 9
Bene 1961 (2) P.R., H. 252 (S.R.)
Benest (1918) 34 N.L.R. 344
Benefit Cycle Works v. Atmore 1927 T.P.D. 525
Bengt 1965 (1) S.B. 298 (N.)
Beringfield v. Durban Corp. (1897) 18 N.R.R. 31
Benjamin v. Benjamin (1881) 1 E.D.C. 273
Benjamin (1885) 3 E.D.C. 357
Benjamin (1913) 8 Gr.App.Hep. 146 (C.C.A.)
Benjamin 1914 T.P.D. 27
Bennett 1940 G.W.L. 1
Bennett 1941 G.W.L. 28
Bennison v. Cartwright (1864) 58 & S. 1
Bensusan 1910 T.P.D. 1218
Berger (1894) 1 Q.E. 823
Bergstadt 1955 (4) S.A. 186 (A.D.)
Berkeley Pearsage (1811) 4 Camp. 402
Berkowitz v. Pretoria Municipality 1925 T.P.D. 113
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case Name</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Law</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Berman</td>
<td>1915</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>279</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bernardus</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>287</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Herrand</td>
<td>1971</td>
<td>P.C. App.</td>
<td>252</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Besser v. Stern</td>
<td>1977</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>265</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bester</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>432</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beukman</td>
<td>1950</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>261</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bezuidenhout</td>
<td>1922</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>206</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bezuidenhout</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bezuidenhout</td>
<td>1964</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>651</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bhatia v. Ban N.O.</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>560</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bhengu</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>673</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bhola</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>695</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bhula</td>
<td>1910</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>70</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bhyst</td>
<td>1930</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Biggin</td>
<td>1920</td>
<td>K.B.</td>
<td>213</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Biggs v. Jennings</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>N.L.R.</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bill</td>
<td>1910</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>298</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Birch v. Rigby</td>
<td>1858</td>
<td>F. &amp; F.</td>
<td>270</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Birch</td>
<td>1924</td>
<td>C.R.App.</td>
<td>26</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Birch-Moncrieff</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>425</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Birmingham &amp; Midland Motor Omnibus Co. v. London &amp; N.W.Railway Co.</td>
<td>1913</td>
<td>K.B.</td>
<td>850</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Birrell v. Dryer</td>
<td>1884</td>
<td>App.Cas.</td>
<td>345</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bishop v. Inspector of Nuisances</td>
<td>1914</td>
<td>N.L.R.</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bishop</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>P.H., H.134</td>
<td>163</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bitterbosch</td>
<td>1885</td>
<td>H.G.G.</td>
<td>495</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Biya</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>514</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Blauw</td>
<td>1917</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>391</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Biso</td>
<td>1927</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>445</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Black</td>
<td>1923</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>388</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Blackpool Corp. v. Locker</td>
<td>1948</td>
<td>K.B.</td>
<td>349</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Blady [1912]</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>K.B.</td>
<td>89</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Blake and Tye</td>
<td>1844</td>
<td>S.B.</td>
<td>126</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Blanchard</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>All E.R.</td>
<td>114</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bland &amp; Son v. Peinke</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>E.D.L.</td>
<td>26</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Blandy-Jenkins v. Dunraven</td>
<td>1899</td>
<td>Ch.D.</td>
<td>121</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Elasto</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>469</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bliden's Estate v. Sarif</td>
<td>1933</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>275</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bliss</td>
<td>1837</td>
<td>Ad. &amp; E.</td>
<td>550</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bloem</td>
<td>1864</td>
<td>H.C.G.</td>
<td>432</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bloemfontein Board of Executors v. Richnay</td>
<td>1950</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Blom</td>
<td>1939</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bloom &amp; Bailey's Trustees v. Fourie</td>
<td>1922 T.P.D. 248</td>
<td>66</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-----</td>
<td>-----------------</td>
<td>----</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Blyth</td>
<td>1940 T.P.D. 355</td>
<td>134, 186, 188, 189, 192</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beal</td>
<td>[1965] Q.B. 402 (G.A.)</td>
<td>26</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boardman</td>
<td>1933 (4) S.A. 457 (T)</td>
<td>91</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boesigo</td>
<td>1956 (1) S.A. 234 (A.D.)</td>
<td>82, 144, 178</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bolan in re, ex parte Minister of Justice</td>
<td>1941 A.D. 345</td>
<td>138, 172, 176, 177</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bondarete v. City View Investments (Pty.) Ltd.</td>
<td>1969 (1) S.A. 134 (N)</td>
<td>144</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bondi</td>
<td>1962 (4) S.A. 671 (A.D.)</td>
<td>127, 128</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bond</td>
<td>[1968] 2 All E.R. 644 (G.A.)</td>
<td>173</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bontheuys</td>
<td>1922 T.P.D. 446</td>
<td>4, 33</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boogden</td>
<td>(1856) Z.L.B.R. 203</td>
<td>47</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Booc Jones</td>
<td>(1908) E.D.C. 44</td>
<td>196</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boed</td>
<td>1932 C.P.D. 398</td>
<td>29</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boed</td>
<td>1964 (1) S.A. 224 (B)</td>
<td>62, 191</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boon v. Vaughan &amp; Co Ltd.</td>
<td>1919 T.P.D. 77</td>
<td>44</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Booy</td>
<td>(1888) 3 E.D.C. 227</td>
<td>38</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Booy Oliphant</td>
<td>(1885) 5 E.D.C. 331</td>
<td>193</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bosch</td>
<td>1949 (1) S.A. 458 (A.D.)</td>
<td>61</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boschoff v. Marais</td>
<td>1933 T.P.D. 55</td>
<td>169</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boschoff v. Manack</td>
<td>1937 H.P.D. 192</td>
<td>51</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bostander</td>
<td>(1889) 5 H.O.G. 496</td>
<td>136</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Botes v. Grobbelaar</td>
<td>1924 O.P.D. 90</td>
<td>46</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Botes</td>
<td>1958 (1) F.H., N. 75 (O)</td>
<td>199</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Botes v. Van Deventer</td>
<td>1966 (3) S.A. 182 (A.D.)</td>
<td>5, 32, 103, 126, 127</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Botha</td>
<td>1917 T.P.D. 360</td>
<td>125</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Botha N.O. v. Tunbridge N.O.</td>
<td>1933 E.D.L. 95</td>
<td>66</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bottonley</td>
<td>(1903) 30 J.S.R. 311</td>
<td>101</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bottonley [1909] 2 K.B. 14</td>
<td>49</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bower v. Masendo</td>
<td>(1928) 49 N.L.R. 62</td>
<td>10</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bower</td>
<td>1964 (4) S.A. 58 (G)</td>
<td>5, 32, 103</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bowden</td>
<td>1930 T.P.D. 512</td>
<td>77</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boxer</td>
<td>1945 A.D. 243</td>
<td>192</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boye</td>
<td>1952 (3) S.A. 574 (O)</td>
<td>172</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brucequidale v. Bailey</td>
<td>(1859) 1 F.&amp; F. 537</td>
<td>58</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Breau v. Proctor</td>
<td>(1843) 11 H.&amp; W. 773</td>
<td>96</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brand v. Minister of Justice</td>
<td>1959 (2) S.A. 712 (A.D.)</td>
<td>176</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Breed v. Breed</td>
<td>1946 B.D.L. 27</td>
<td>109</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brewis</td>
<td>1945 A.D. 251</td>
<td>74</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brill v. Mutual Life Insurance Co.</td>
<td>(1905) 22 S.C. 421</td>
<td>158, 159</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Case</td>
<td>Reference</td>
<td>Pages</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-----------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>--------------------</td>
<td>-------</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colcraft v. Guest [1898]</td>
<td>1 Q.B. 759 (C.A.)</td>
<td>161</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Caldwell v. Western Assurance Co.Ltd. 1916 W.L.D. 111</td>
<td></td>
<td>160</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Call v. Dunning (1903)</td>
<td>4 East 53</td>
<td>46</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cally v. Gunn [1964]</td>
<td>1 Q.B. 495</td>
<td>5, 141</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cameron 1925 i.B. 570</td>
<td></td>
<td>141</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cawell v. [1922]</td>
<td>2 K.B. 122</td>
<td>56</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Campbell [1956]</td>
<td>2 All E.R. 272 (C.C.A.)</td>
<td>190</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cape Coast Exploration Co.Ltd. v. Scholtz 1933 A.L. 56</td>
<td></td>
<td>53, 173, 180</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cape Govt. v. Balmoral Diamond Co.Ltd. 1908 T.E. 681</td>
<td></td>
<td>15</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cape Indian Congress v. Transvaal Indian Congress 1948</td>
<td></td>
<td>181</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carl-Beiss-Stiftung v. Bayner and Keeler Ltd. (No.2)</td>
<td>[1966] 2 All E.R. 536 (K.B.)</td>
<td>12</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carneson 1962 (3)</td>
<td>S.A. 437 (R)</td>
<td>156, 157</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carroll v. Carroll 1947 (4)</td>
<td>S.A. 37 (D)</td>
<td>58, 60, 72</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carson 1926 A.D. 419</td>
<td></td>
<td>113, 137</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carter-Johnson 1967 (1)</td>
<td>P.R., R.184 (R)</td>
<td>138</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cash Wholesalers Ltd. v. Hogan 1953 N.P.D. 117</td>
<td></td>
<td>90</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cave v. Johnson N.G. 1949 (1)</td>
<td>S.A. 72 (T)</td>
<td>20, 161</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cede 1943 A.D. 123</td>
<td></td>
<td>185</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cede 1959 (1) S.A. 245 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>23, 24, 25, 187</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cede 1960 (1) S.A. 292 (D)</td>
<td></td>
<td>276</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cede 1965 (1) S.A. 82 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>100, 118, 120, 132, 139, 141</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cede 1966 (1) P.R., R.97 (D)</td>
<td></td>
<td>140</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gellier 1950 (2) P.R., R. 125 (S.W.A.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>198</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cheisa 1947 (2) S.A. 195 (S.R.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>169</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chamane 1962 (2) S.A. 428 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>26</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chambers v. Bernasconi (1834) 1 G.M. &amp; R.347</td>
<td></td>
<td>97</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chandrssekera [1937] A.C. 220 (K.E.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>84, 100</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chan Wai Keung [1967] 2 A.C. 160 (P.C.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>123</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chapman (1838)</td>
<td>6 G &amp; P. 558</td>
<td>51</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chapman (1969)</td>
<td>2 W.L.R. 1004 (G.A.)</td>
<td>84</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Charlie 1865</td>
<td>3 K.O.G. 492</td>
<td>36</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chatterton v. Secretary of State for India [1895]</td>
<td></td>
<td>164, 165</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chester 1922 T.P.D. 435</td>
<td></td>
<td>136</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chenoweth, in re [1902] 2 Ch.488</td>
<td></td>
<td>13, 14</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chester v. Oldman 1914 T.P.D. 67</td>
<td></td>
<td>61</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chetty 1951 N.P.D. 534</td>
<td></td>
<td>167, 160</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chetty 1943 A.D. 614</td>
<td></td>
<td>204</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chiang 1962 (4) S.A. 142 (S.R.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>195, 200</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chidota 1986 (3) S.A. 428 (B.A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>47</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reference</td>
<td>Year</td>
<td>Authority</td>
<td>Volume</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-----------</td>
<td>------</td>
<td>-----------</td>
<td>--------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chinane</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td>S.A. 588</td>
<td>(R.A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chipa</td>
<td>1953</td>
<td>S.A. 602</td>
<td>(S.R.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chippe</td>
<td>1914</td>
<td>C.P.D. 991</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chippe</td>
<td>1915</td>
<td>B.D.L. 14</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chipote</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S.A. 690</td>
<td>(R.A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chiu Nang Hong v. Public Prosecutor [1964] 1 W.L.R. 1279 (P.G.)</td>
<td>199</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chizah</td>
<td>1959</td>
<td>S.A. 292</td>
<td>(C)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chizah</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>S.A. 435</td>
<td>(A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chivo</td>
<td>1968</td>
<td>S.A. 353</td>
<td>(R.A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Choudi</td>
<td>1933</td>
<td>C.P.D. 267</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Christians</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>S.P.D. 668</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Christie</td>
<td>[1914]</td>
<td>A.C. 545</td>
<td>(H.L.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Christo</td>
<td>1917</td>
<td>T.P.D. 420</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Christopoulou</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>S.A. 269</td>
<td>(B)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gilliers</td>
<td>1937</td>
<td>A.D. 273</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Githa</td>
<td>1920</td>
<td>T.P.D. 115</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Claremont Union College v. Cape Town C.C. 1935 C.P.D. 419</td>
<td>159</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Clark</td>
<td>[1955]</td>
<td>R.S. 907</td>
<td>(C.C.A.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Clever</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>S.A. 256</td>
<td>(R.A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Clifford</td>
<td>v. Clifford [1961] 3 All E.R. 231</td>
<td>63, 64</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Clough v. Attorney-General [1963] 2 W.L.R. 343</td>
<td>162</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Coch v. Lichtenstein 1930 A.D. 178</td>
<td>172</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Coetzee</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>W.L.D. 297</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cohen</td>
<td>1933</td>
<td>T.P.D. 126</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cohen</td>
<td>1934</td>
<td>T.P.D. 398</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cohen</td>
<td>1942</td>
<td>T.P.D. 266</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cokar</td>
<td>[1960] 2 All E.R. 175 (C.C.A.)</td>
<td>150</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Collett v. Priest 1931 A.D. 290</td>
<td>4</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Commissioners of Customs &amp; Excise v. Harz [1967] 1 All E.R. 177 (E.L.)</td>
<td>119</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Comptroller of Customs v. Western Lectric Co.Ltd. [1966] A.C. 367 (P.C.)</td>
<td>117</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cook</td>
<td>[1959] 2 Q.B. 340 (C.C.A.)</td>
<td>155</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cooper</td>
<td>1920</td>
<td>E.D.L. 574</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cooper</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>A.D. 54</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Corris</td>
<td>1931</td>
<td>T.P.D. 471</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Courten v. Touse (1607) 1 Camp. 42</td>
<td>49</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cox &amp; Hailton (1884) 14 Q.B.D. 153</td>
<td>161</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Crane v. Johannesburg Stock Exchange Committee 1949 (4) S.A. 835 (A.D.) 162, 163, 165
Granfield v. Hoey 1932 C.P.D. 265 179
Cranshaw v. Colloway (1867) 5 S.C. 292 64
Crans v. Barrett (1835) 1 C.H.R. 319 99, 105, 106
Creery v. Carr (1837) 5 C.& P. 54 58
Crainhold 1926 O.P.D. 151 18, 21
Crippen 1967 (3) S.A. 450 (R.A.M.) 124
Croili v. Clerk of the Peace, Durban (1887) 8 N.L.R. 71 79
Crons 1945 O.P.D. 309 179
Cullinan v. Union Govt. 1922 C.P.D. 35 127
Cummings [1948] 1 All E.R. 551 (S.A.) 57
Currie and May N.H.O., ex parte, 1963 (2) S.A. 104(E) 86, 107
Currie 1961 (4) S.A. 395 (E) 42
Curtis 1926 C.P.D. 365 192, 193
Curtis' Estate v. Granningsaeter 1942 C.P.D. 33 90
Cumings 1948 (1) All B.E. 15 (C.A.) 120, 137

D
D 1942 C.P.D. 193 163, 191
D 1951 (4) S.A. 450 (A.D.) 30, 200
D 1954 (2) S.A. 462 (T) 40
D 1956 (2) S.A. 322 (T) 196
D 1956 (4) S.A. 364 (A.D.) 71, 192, 193
D 1961 (2) S.A. 341 (N) 135
D 1967 (2) S.A. 537 (D) 7

Dalas 1921 C.P.D. 544 46
Dalgleish v. Israel 1909 T.H. 229 44
Daniell v. Central S.A. Railways 1904 T.H. 224 159
Daniel 1913 S.R. 134 204
Darby v. Cassely (1866) 1 H.A. N. 1 145
David 1962 (3) S.A. 305 (S.R.) 142, 153
Davidson 1962 (1) S.A. 192 (P) 6
Davis 1966 (2) S.A. 52 (A.D.) 131
Davis 1921 C.P.D. 562 165, 166
Davis 1925 A.D. 30 168
Day v. Minister of Justice 1913 T.P.D. 853 50
Day v. Schwartz 1933 C.P.D. 583 146
Deale 1929 T.P.D. 259 197
Debelo 1951 (1) S.A. 421 (E) 21, 57, 197, 198
De Beer 1930 T.P.D. 653 77
De Beer 1935 N.P.D. 30 138
De Beer 1949 (3) S.A. 740 (A.D.) 201
Debelo 1956 (4) S.A. 570 (A.D.) 10, 62
De Bruin 1967 (2) P.R., H. 325 (A.D.)
Deitch 1939 A.D. 178
De Keppe 1950 (3) S.A. 583 (C)
De Klerk 1915 E.D.L. 42
De Klerk 1930 A.D. 303
De Lange v. Radium 1928 E.D.L. 439
De Lame 1927 O.P.D. 276
De Leeuw v. Springs Town Council 1945 T.P.D. 128
Domingo, in re, ex parte Minister of Justice 1951 (1) S.A. 36 (A.D.)

De Mecker 1927 C.P.D. 567
Deecin 1963 (2) R.H. 546 (P.C.)
De Souza 1955 (1) S.A. 32 (T)
De Stadler (1904) 2 R.G. 258
De Villiers 1944 A.D. 493
De Vos 1964 (2) R.H. O.20 (G.W.)
De Vos 1968 (2) R.H. H.272 (G.W.)
De Vries 1950 C.P.D. 78
De Wael 1958 (2) S.A. 109 (G.W.)
De Wet (Estate) v. De Wet 1924 C.P.D. 341
De Wet 1933 T.P.D. 68
De Veyne 1821 4 D. & Ald. 243
Dhsapandi (1924) 45 N.L.R. 95
Dhladha 1946 N.P.D. 404
Dhlamini 1905 T.S. 331
Dhlamini 1905 T.S. 418
Dhlamini 1943 N.P.D. 312
Dhlamini 1945 N.P.D. 50
Dhlamini 1949 (3) S.A. 967 (T)
Dhlamini 1952 (2) S.A. 693 (T)
Dhlamini 1986 (4) S.A. 149 (N)
Dhlunwayo 1943 (2) S.A. 677 (A.D.)
Diamond 1933 N.P.D. 380
Dickie v. Colonial Govt. (1909) 26 S.C. 347
Dickinson v. Fisher's Executors 1914 A.D. 424
Diet 1915 A.D. 299
Diedrich (1925) 3 H.C.S. 359
Dietz v. Curlewis (1834) 1 Menzies 42
Difford 1937 A.D. 380
Dikant 1946 (1) S.A. 693 (O)
Disco 1946 N.P.D. 449
Distillers Korporasie (S.A.) Bpk. v. Kotze 1956 (1) S.A. 357 (A.D.)
Ditch (1959) 53 Cr.App. Rep. 627
Ditshego 1932 O.P.D. 164
Ditz v. Attorney-General 1936 N.P.D. 345

11, 119, 138, 147, 156, 159, 160, 162, 169, 170
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Volume</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Dladla (1) 1961 (3) S.A. 918 (A.D.)</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>918</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dladla 1961 (1) F.H., H.130 (A.D.)</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>F.H.</td>
<td>130</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dladla 1962 (1) S.A. 307 (A.D.)</td>
<td>1962</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>307</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dlakuru 1948 (3) S.A. 1202 (A.D.)</td>
<td>1948</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>1202</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dlalibomba. 1925 B.D.L. 179</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>B.D.L.</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dlamini 1965 (1) S.A. 859 (A.D.)</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>859</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dlambi 1960 (1) F.H., H. 128 (A.D.)</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>F.H.</td>
<td>128</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dlima 1951 (2) S.A. 185 (C)</td>
<td>1951</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>185</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dlihe (1899) 13 E.D.L. 130</td>
<td>1899</td>
<td>E.D.L.</td>
<td>130</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Debrin v. Debrin's Trustees 1932 W.L.D. 195</td>
<td>1932</td>
<td>W.L.D.</td>
<td>195</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Doe v. Banning v. Griffin (1812) 15 East. 293</td>
<td>1812</td>
<td>East.</td>
<td>293</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Doe v. France v. Andrews (1850) 15 Q.B. 756</td>
<td>1850</td>
<td>Q.B.</td>
<td>756</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Doe v. Gilbert v. Ross (1840) 7 H.&amp; W. 102</td>
<td>1840</td>
<td>H.&amp; W.</td>
<td>102</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Doe v. Jenkins v. Davies (1847) 10 Q.B. 315</td>
<td>1847</td>
<td>Q.B.</td>
<td>315</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Doe v. Pattershall v. Turford (1832) 8 B.&amp; A. 890</td>
<td>1832</td>
<td>B.&amp; A.</td>
<td>890</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Doe v. Williams v. Lloyd (1840) 1 H.&amp; G. 671</td>
<td>1840</td>
<td>H.&amp; G.</td>
<td>671</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dollie 1916 E.D.L. 196</td>
<td>1916</td>
<td>E.D.L.</td>
<td>196</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dollie 1960 (1) P.H., H. 27 (C)</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>P.H.</td>
<td>27</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dominic 1913 T.P.D. 582</td>
<td>1913</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>582</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Douglas', The (1882) P.D.151 (C.A.)</td>
<td>1882</td>
<td>P.D.</td>
<td>151</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Downing (1922) 43 H.L.R. 139</td>
<td>1922</td>
<td>H.L.R.</td>
<td>139</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dray 1925 A.D.553</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>553</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Drinkwater v. Porter (1835) 7 Car. &amp; P. 181</td>
<td>1835</td>
<td>Car. &amp; P.</td>
<td>181</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Drug Club v. Lysol Ltd. 1924 T.P.D. 614</td>
<td>1924</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>614</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Drummond (1784) 1 Leach 337</td>
<td>1784</td>
<td>Leach</td>
<td>337</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Droxy 1906 T.S. 640</td>
<td>1906</td>
<td>T.S.</td>
<td>640</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dube 1915 A.D.557</td>
<td>1915</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>557</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dube 1929 A.D. 46</td>
<td>1929</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Duff Development Co.Ltd. v. Govt. of Kelantan (1924)</td>
<td>1924</td>
<td>Govt. of Kelantan</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A.C. 797 (H.L.)</td>
<td>1924</td>
<td>A.C.</td>
<td>797</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Duma 1958 (3) S.A. 882 (W)</td>
<td>1958</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>882</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dumezweni 1961 (2) S.A. 751 (A.D.)</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>751</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Duminy 1902 T.S. 190</td>
<td>1902</td>
<td>T.S.</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Duncan 1912 C.P.D. 553</td>
<td>1912</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>553</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Duncan, in re [1968] 2 All E.B.395</td>
<td>1968</td>
<td>All E.B.</td>
<td>395</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dunjae 1934 A.D.223</td>
<td>1934</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>223</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dunjae 1939 A.D. 7</td>
<td>1939</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dunkley [1927] 1 K.B. 323</td>
<td>1927</td>
<td>K.B.</td>
<td>323</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dunraven v. Llewellyn (1850) 15 Q.B. 791</td>
<td>1850</td>
<td>Q.B.</td>
<td>791</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Case</td>
<td>Year</td>
<td>Source</td>
<td>Pages</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
<td>-----------------</td>
<td>-------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Du Plessis v. Triggaard</td>
<td>1918</td>
<td>E.D.L. 175</td>
<td>53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Du Plessis</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>T.P.D. 103</td>
<td>175</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Du Plessis</td>
<td>1942</td>
<td>E.D.L. 9</td>
<td>212</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Du Plessis</td>
<td>1944</td>
<td>A.D. 314</td>
<td>205</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Du Plessis</td>
<td>1950</td>
<td>S.A. 297 (0)</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Du Plessis</td>
<td>1957</td>
<td>F.E., H. 86 (0)</td>
<td>59</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Du Plessis</td>
<td>1935</td>
<td>E.D.L. 10</td>
<td>138, 149</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Du Plessis</td>
<td>1943</td>
<td>A.D. 562</td>
<td>150, 152, 155</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Durham v. Beaumont (1609)</td>
<td></td>
<td>1 Camp. 207</td>
<td>49</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hurl v. S.A.R. &amp; H.</td>
<td>1917</td>
<td>C.P.D. 284</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Du Toit v. Lydenburg Municipality</td>
<td>1909</td>
<td>T.S. 527</td>
<td>105</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Du Toit</td>
<td>1947</td>
<td>S.A. 184 (0)</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Duvenage v. Duvenage</td>
<td>1936</td>
<td>E.D.L. 147</td>
<td>167, 168</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dysart Peerage (1881)</td>
<td></td>
<td>6 App.Cas. 489 (H.L.)</td>
<td>52, 97</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Duvenage</td>
<td>1930</td>
<td>F.H., E. 68 (2)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>East London Municipality v. Van Zyl</td>
<td>1959</td>
<td>S.A. 514 (2)</td>
<td>41</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Eshab v. Essap</td>
<td>1905</td>
<td>T.S. 59</td>
<td>128</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Eidelman</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>N.P.D. 1</td>
<td>199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Elton v. Hilton (1)</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>S.A. 705 (A.D.)</td>
<td>91</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Elmsdale Trading Co Ltd v. Mia</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>S.A. 162 (W)</td>
<td>48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Eleanor</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>E.D.L. 466</td>
<td>130</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Elgin Engineering Co. (Pty.) Ltd v. Hillview Transport</td>
<td>1961 (4)</td>
<td>S.A. 450 (D)</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ellis (1910)</td>
<td></td>
<td>2 K.B. 746</td>
<td>150, 151</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ellis v. Home Office (1953)</td>
<td></td>
<td>2 All R. 149 (C.A.)</td>
<td>166</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Elijah</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>S.A. 86 (S.R.)</td>
<td>36, 52, 59</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ellis (5)</td>
<td>1949</td>
<td>S.A. 649 (W)</td>
<td>61, 82</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ellis (1965)</td>
<td></td>
<td>A.D. (unreported)</td>
<td>178</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ely, Inhabitants of (1850)</td>
<td></td>
<td>15 Q.B. 827</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Homanally</td>
<td>1941</td>
<td>N.P.D. 333</td>
<td>66</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Engel v. Race Classification Appeal Board</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>166 (2)</td>
<td>117</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>S.A. 298 (0)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Epstein</td>
<td>1951</td>
<td>S.A. 288 (0)</td>
<td>177, 178</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Erasmus v. Sifman</td>
<td>1909</td>
<td>T.S. 1026</td>
<td>56, 126</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Erasmus</td>
<td>1918</td>
<td>C.P.D. 253</td>
<td>116</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Erasmus</td>
<td>1931</td>
<td>C.P.D. 51</td>
<td>191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Erasmus v. Erasmus</td>
<td>1940</td>
<td>T.P.D. 377</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Erasmus</td>
<td>1941</td>
<td>C.P.D. 270</td>
<td>21, 197, 198</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Erasmus</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>C.P.D. 50</td>
<td>71, 78, 174, 176, 182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Erasmus (2)</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S.A. 688 (0)</td>
<td>56</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Erickson</td>
<td>1917</td>
<td>C.P.D. 392</td>
<td>57</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Keith (1807)</td>
<td></td>
<td>8 East 539</td>
<td>102</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Esher</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>P.H., E. 145 (D)</td>
<td>192</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Case Name</td>
<td>Year</td>
<td>Volume</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>---------------------------------</td>
<td>--------</td>
<td>---------</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Essa v. Miller</td>
<td>1964</td>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Evans v. Taylor</td>
<td>1838</td>
<td>7</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Handford v. H.</td>
<td>1907</td>
<td>1</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Herter</td>
<td>1869</td>
<td>4</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case Name</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Volume</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Evans v. Barrow</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Faithfull and Gray v.</td>
<td>1907</td>
<td>T.S. 1077</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Falkenstein v.</td>
<td>1929</td>
<td>W.I.D. 227</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pakiri</td>
<td>1938</td>
<td>C.D. 237</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fan v. Fan</td>
<td>1931</td>
<td>E.D.L. 283</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fennecoff</td>
<td>1940</td>
<td>G.P.D. 270</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Farnes v. McMillan</td>
<td>1905</td>
<td>T.H. 134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Faithwa</td>
<td>1930</td>
<td>T.P.D. 526</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Faure, Needham &amp; Co. v. Beyers</td>
<td>1895</td>
<td>S.C. 438</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feltelau</td>
<td>1922</td>
<td>T.P.D. 240</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feldt v. Bailey</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>S.A. 545 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Full v. Colonial Government</td>
<td>1890</td>
<td>W.L.R. 11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Full v. Fall</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>C.P.D. 293</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Farnes v. London &amp; S.E. Railway Co.</td>
<td>1872</td>
<td>I.R. 7</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case Name</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Volume</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Pennessy</td>
<td>1907</td>
<td>T.S. 74</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ferguson</td>
<td>1949</td>
<td>S.A. 69 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fielden v. Christie</td>
<td>1855</td>
<td>Searle 15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fijfer</td>
<td>1918</td>
<td>C.P.D. 501</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Filantus</td>
<td>1916</td>
<td>T.P.D. 415</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Filipi</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>P.H., H. 206 (F.C.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Finiasi</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>T.H., H. 152 (S.R.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Finn</td>
<td>1918</td>
<td>E.D.L. 2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fish v. Tsai</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>G.W.L. 32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fisher v. Fisher</td>
<td>1911</td>
<td>W.L.W. 71</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fisher v. Malherbe</td>
<td>1912</td>
<td>W.L.D. 15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fitzgerald v. Green</td>
<td>1911</td>
<td>G.D.L. 432</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case Name</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Volume</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Fitzwalter Peerage</td>
<td>1843</td>
<td>10 Cl. &amp; Fin. 193</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Flack</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td>W.L.R. 237 (S.A.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Flange Engineering Co. (Pty.) Ltd. v. Flandes Steel</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hills (Pty.) Ltd.</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td>W.L.D. 201 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fles</td>
<td>1947</td>
<td>S.A. 593 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fleet Motors (Pty.) Ltd. v. Epsom Motors (Pty.) Ltd.</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>S.A. 401 (D)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fleet, in re</td>
<td>1917</td>
<td>S.A. 339</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Forbes</td>
<td>1962</td>
<td>S.A. 964 (G)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case Name</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Volume</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Fletcher</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 639 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Faber v. Barrow</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>(1) S.A. 422 (S.R.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Faithfull and Gray v.</td>
<td>1907</td>
<td>T.S. 1077</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Falkenstein v.</td>
<td>1929</td>
<td>W.I.D. 227</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pakiri</td>
<td>1938</td>
<td>C.D. 237</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fan v. Fan</td>
<td>1931</td>
<td>E.D.L. 283</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fennecoff</td>
<td>1940</td>
<td>G.P.D. 270</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Farnes v. McMillan</td>
<td>1905</td>
<td>T.H. 134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Faithwa</td>
<td>1930</td>
<td>T.P.D. 526</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Faure, Needham &amp; Co. v. Beyers</td>
<td>1895</td>
<td>S.C. 438</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feltelau</td>
<td>1922</td>
<td>T.P.D. 240</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feldt v. Bailey</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>S.A. 545 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Full v. Colonial Government</td>
<td>1890</td>
<td>W.L.R. 11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Full v. Fall</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>C.P.D. 293</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Farnes v. London &amp; S.E. Railway Co.</td>
<td>1872</td>
<td>I.R. 7</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case Name</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Volume</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Pennessy</td>
<td>1907</td>
<td>T.S. 74</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ferguson</td>
<td>1949</td>
<td>S.A. 69 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fielden v. Christie</td>
<td>1855</td>
<td>Searle 15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fijfer</td>
<td>1918</td>
<td>C.P.D. 501</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Filantus</td>
<td>1916</td>
<td>T.P.D. 415</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Filipi</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>P.H., H. 206 (F.C.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Finiasi</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>T.H., H. 152 (S.R.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Finn</td>
<td>1918</td>
<td>E.D.L. 2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fish v. Tsai</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>G.W.L. 32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fisher v. Fisher</td>
<td>1911</td>
<td>W.L.W. 71</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fisher v. Malherbe</td>
<td>1912</td>
<td>W.L.D. 15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fitzgerald v. Green</td>
<td>1911</td>
<td>G.D.L. 432</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case Name</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Volume</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Fitzwalter Peerage</td>
<td>1843</td>
<td>10 Cl. &amp; Fin. 193</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Flack</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td>W.L.R. 237 (S.A.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Flange Engineering Co. (Pty.) Ltd. v. Flandes Steel</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hills (Pty.) Ltd.</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td>W.L.D. 201 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fles</td>
<td>1947</td>
<td>S.A. 593 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fleet Motors (Pty.) Ltd. v. Epsom Motors (Pty.) Ltd.</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>S.A. 401 (D)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fleet, in re</td>
<td>1917</td>
<td>S.A. 339</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Forbes</td>
<td>1962</td>
<td>S.A. 964 (G)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Ford & Langham, ex parte 1953 (4) S.A. 338 (N)
Fosseman (1) 1952 (1) S.A. 423 (S.R.)
Fosseman (2) 1952 (1) S.A. 426 (S.R.)
Fouman 1922 W.T.D. 266
Fowadick v. Additional Magistrate, Durban 1938 N.P.D. 437
Fortune 1941 C.P.D. 287
Foster (1834) 6 C. & P. 325
Foster 1922 E.D.L. 166
Fouches 1953 (1) S.A. 440 (W)
Fouches 1958 (3) S.A. 767 (T)
Foutrie v. Smith (1902) 19 S.C. 263
Foutrie 1937 A.D. 31
Foutrie 1947 (2) S.A. 972 (E)
Foutrie ex parte 1956 (4) S.A. 523 (O)
Fowke v. Berrington (1914) 2 Ch. 306
Fox v. General Medical Council [1960] 3 All E.R. 225 (P.G.)
Francis 1912 T.P.D. 283
Frankel 1940 T.P.D. 159
Franks 1950 A.D. 430
Fraser v. Berkeley (1836) 7 C. & P. 625
Fraser v. Sivewright (1885) 5 S.C. 375
Friedman & Zacks v. Penny 1911 W.T.D. 228
Frostie 1913 T.P.D. 758
Frenkel Ltd. v. Liquidators Jacobs & Co. Ltd. 1923
F.W.I. 182
Friedlander v. Modes 1944 C.P.D. 169
Fuchs & Towning v. F.B.Municipality 1944 E.D.L. 254
Fuwane 1956 (4) S.A. 761 (F.G.)

G 1956 (2) P.R., H.266 (A.D.) 198
G and F v. Commissioner of Taxes 1960 (4) S.A. 163 (S.R.) 4
Galbraith 1955 T.P.D. 45
Gade's Assignees v. Weijer 1917 A.D. 463
Gaiace 1911 C.P.D. 76
Galeni 1943 E.D.L. 291
Gelperowitz 1941 A.D. 485
Gama 1916 E.D.L. 34
Gannan 1933 O.P.D. 196
Garie 1967 (4) S.A. 263 (N)
Gannon 1906 T.S. 114
Gardner's Will Trusts in re [1936] 3 All E.R. 958
Garment Workers' Union v. De Vries [1949(1) S.A.1110 (W) 82
Gebbe 1961 (1) P.H., H.103 (O)
Gcaba 1956 (4) S.A.325 (N)
Gcaba 1965 (4) S.A.325 (N)
Gebe 1968 (1) P.H., H.18 (O)
Gebetshe (1904) 16 B.D.C. 67
Gee v. Ward (1857) 7 El. & Bl. 509
Goldenhuyse 1957 (1) P.H., H. 84 (O)
General Life Assurance Corp. Ltd. v. Goldberg 1912 T.P.D. 494
General Life Assurance Co. v. Moyle 1919 A.D.I 11
George 1915 B.D.C. 399
George 1922 T.P.D. J.S.311
George 1953 (1) S.A. 382 (A.D.)
Gercke 1941 S.P.D. 211
Gibson 1910 T.P.D. 450
Gibson 1953 A.D.132
Givagnoli v. Di Meo 1960 (3) S.A.393 (D)
Gibson (1887) 18 Q.B.D.537
Gibson 1916 T.P.D. 137
Gill v. Balcombe's Estate 1937 E.D.L. 269
Gill 1950 (4) S.A. 199 (O)
Gillingham v. Gillingham 1904 T.S. 126
Gilmore (1899) 16 S.C. 448
Gimingham 1946 E.D.L. 156
Gin 1967 (1) P.H., H.135 (A.D.)
Giribegu 1959 (4) S.A.266 (E)
Gleneagles Farm Diary v. Schoombee 1947 (4) S.A. 66(E) 91, 127
Gleneagles Farm Diary v. Schoombee 1947 (4) S.A.830(A.D)176
Gloes 1956 (2) P.H., H.226 (S.R.)
Gluckman v. Schneider 1936 A.D.151
Goeda 1969 (1) P.H., H.35 (E)
Gokool 1965 (5) S.A.461 (N)
Goldberg (1885) 5 B.C.C. 61
Gold [1960] 1 W.L.R. 1169 (C.A.)
Gold [1960] 3 All E.R.457 (C.A.)
Goldfields Confectionery v. Norman Adam (Pty.) Ltd.
1950 (2) S.A.763 (T)
Goldstein (1882) 2 S.C. 164
Goldstein 1929 A.D.173
Goldstuck v. Nappin & Webb Ltd. 1927 T.P.D. 723
Goliath 1941 O.P.D. 3
Goliath 1946 E.D.L. 310
Goodrich v. Goodrich 1946 A.D. 390
Goodright v. Stevens v. Moss (1777) 2 Gomp. 591
Gogel v. Gladwell 1919 T.P.D. 53
Gooympushad (1914) 35 W.L.R. 87
Goosen 1962 (1) F.H., E.117 (A.D.)
Gordon v. Tarnow 1947 (2) S.A. 525 (A.D.)
Goschalt v. Boscow N.O. 1966 (2) S.A. 476 (G)
Gotze v. Estate Van der Westhuizen 1935 A.D. 300
Gouws 1935 E.D.L. 395
Gouws 1967 (4) S.A. 527 (E)
Gouws 1968 (4) S.A. 354 (G.W.)
Gouws N.O. v. Montrose Township & Investment Corp.
1964 (3) S.A. 609 (T)
Gowender 1967 (2) S.A. 121 (N)
Gouve 1925 C.P.D. 262
Gouve 1929 O.P.D. 58
Gouwana 1919 E.D.C. 194
Guabi 1964 (2) S.A. 261 (T)
Grant v. S.A. National Trust and Assurance Co.Ltd.
1948 (3) S.A. 59 (W)
Greep v. Verreaux 1804 I.M. 151
Green 1911 C.P.D. 623
Green 1962 (3) S.A. 886 (A.D.)
Green 1962 (3) S.A. 899 (E)
Greenough v. Gaskell 1833 1 M & K. 98
Grieve 1947 (2) S.A. 264 (T)
Groesbeek 1969 (4) S.A. 375 (O)
Grosskopf 1913 E.D.L. 295
Grubb v. Nouton N.O. 1958 (1) S.A. 463 (T)
Gu v. Willcock 1916 E.D.L. 371
Guile 1935 T.P.D. 401
Gumede 1942 A.D. 398
Gumede 1948 (2) S.A. 12 (E)
Gumede 1949 (3) S.A. 749 (A.D.)
Gumede v. Daines N.O. 1952 (2) S.A. 315 (G)
Gumede 1963 (2) S.A. 549 (E)
Gunkal 1939 E.D.L. 57
Gutenberg 1905 T.S. 207
Gwvah 1961 (4) S.A. 536 (N)
Gwia 1960 (2) P.H., E.327 (G)

H 1937 N.E.D. 1
H 1948 (4) S.A. 154 (T)
H 1955 (2) S.A. 258 (E)
Hassbroek 1969 (2) S.A. 624 (A.D.)
Haskwell 1965 (2) S.A. 388 (S.R., A.D.)
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case Title</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Volume</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hadebe v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>488</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hafiejee v. A.D.</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>345</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Haines v. Guthrie (1844)</td>
<td>1844</td>
<td>14 Q.B.</td>
<td>918</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hair v. A.D.</td>
<td>1927</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Halim v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1949</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>274</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hall v. Theron (1927)</td>
<td>1927</td>
<td>2 B.D.L.</td>
<td>417</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hamangile v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1931</td>
<td>3 B.D.L.</td>
<td>371</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hampshire v. Else (1884)</td>
<td>1884</td>
<td>2 B.C.G.</td>
<td>439</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hampshire v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1959</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>711</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hancock v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>602</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hanger v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1928</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>459</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hardy (1794)</td>
<td>1794</td>
<td>26 New St. Tr.</td>
<td>815</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hardy (1903)</td>
<td>1903</td>
<td>26 New St. Tr.</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hartley v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>195</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Harris v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1931</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>169</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Harris v. Minister of Interior (1952)</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>457</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Harris v. Devan (1930)</td>
<td>1930</td>
<td>2 B.D.L.</td>
<td>265</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hartley v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>219</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hassim v. Han (1952)</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>331</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heemann v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1935</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>51</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Haymann v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1957</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>86</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Healy (1907)</td>
<td>1907</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>719</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heard v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1937</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>401</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heathcote v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1958</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>391</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hector v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heidberg v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1905</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>219</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heilbronn v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1922</td>
<td>2 T.P.D.</td>
<td>99</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heilbrott v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1928</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hedges v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1934</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>538</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Henderson v. Metal Co.</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>2 A.D.</td>
<td>560</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Notes:
- B.C.G. stands for British Cases (Great Britain).
- B.C.S. stands for British Cases (London).
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case References</th>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hennessey v. Wright (1888)</td>
<td>21 Q.B.D.</td>
<td>509</td>
<td>164</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>'Henry Conon', The (1878)</td>
<td>3 P.</td>
<td>156</td>
<td>96, 97</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hepworth</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>255</td>
<td>1, 19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Herbert</td>
<td>1929</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>51</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Herbert</td>
<td>1965 (2)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>385 (B.R., A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Herholdt</td>
<td>1956 (2)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>717 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Herholdt</td>
<td>1957 (3)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>236 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Herlihy</td>
<td>1910</td>
<td>W.L.D.</td>
<td>51</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Herron</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>W.L.H.C.A.</td>
<td>80</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hermans v. Anguille</td>
<td>1936</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>386</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hewertson</td>
<td>1937</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>103</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heyman</td>
<td>1966 (4)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>598 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heyne v. Fischel &amp; Co. (1913)</td>
<td>30 T.I.R.</td>
<td>190</td>
<td>108</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heyne</td>
<td>1956 (1)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>607 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heyne</td>
<td>1956 (1)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>612 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heystek v. Alges</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hewitt</td>
<td>1958</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>484</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hickman v. Berens</td>
<td>1895</td>
<td>2 Ch.</td>
<td>658</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hiddingh's Estate ex parte</td>
<td>1940</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>121</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Higgins (1829)</td>
<td>Car. &amp; P.</td>
<td>603</td>
<td>116, 177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Higham v. Ridgway</td>
<td>1808</td>
<td>10 East</td>
<td>109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hilarius</td>
<td>1949 (2)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>278 (B)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hill</td>
<td>1851</td>
<td>2 Den.</td>
<td>254</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hlavovich v. Estate Hlavovic</td>
<td>1951 (2)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>156 (C)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hind v. Boswell Bros. Circus (Pty.) Ltd.</td>
<td>1952 (2)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>158 (B)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hinds</td>
<td>1932</td>
<td>2 K.B.</td>
<td>644 (C.A.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hine</td>
<td>1910</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>371</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hirschfield v. Malem</td>
<td>1943</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>47</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hitchcock (1847) 1 Ex.</td>
<td>31</td>
<td>63, 64, 65</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hitchcock v. Germanhuis</td>
<td>1967 (4)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>279 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hitchens v. Chapman</td>
<td>1932</td>
<td>N.P.D.</td>
<td>255</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hitchens v. Umfolozi Co-op. Sugar</td>
<td>1929</td>
<td>50 N.L.R.</td>
<td>117</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hitehe v. African Guarantree &amp; Indemnity Co. Ltd.</td>
<td>1923</td>
<td>168, 169</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>W.L.D.</td>
<td>25</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hladi</td>
<td>1958 (2)</td>
<td>P.H., R.</td>
<td>27 (D)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hlakula</td>
<td>1964 (1)</td>
<td>P.H., K.A. (N)</td>
<td>111</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hlangua</td>
<td>1922</td>
<td>43 N.L.R.</td>
<td>398</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hlofps</td>
<td>1965 (4)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>439 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hlokandi</td>
<td>1964 (4)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>429 (B)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hlongwane</td>
<td>1959 (3)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>337 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hlope</td>
<td>1947 (2)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>453 (N)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hoare</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>2 All R.R.</td>
<td>846 (C.A.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hodges</td>
<td>1836</td>
<td>7 C. &amp; P.</td>
<td>298</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hoffmann</td>
<td>1906</td>
<td>2 Nach. App.</td>
<td>342</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Inyanga 1962 (2) P.H., H.136 (S.H.)
Ioannou v. Demetrou [1952] A.C. 84 (P.C.)
Irish Society v. Derry (1846) 12 Cl. & Fin. 641
Isaacs 1916 T.P.D. 390
Isaacs v. Sachstein 1925 O.P.D. 123
Isaacs & Sons Ltd. v. Cook [1925] 2 K.B. 391
Isaacs 1954 (1) S.A. 266 (H)
Isaacs 1969 (1) P.H., H. 93 (A.D.)
Ismail v. Stradling 1931 T.P.D. 426
Ismail 1932 N.I.R. 609
Ismail 1943 C.P.D. 418
Ismail 1952 (1) S.A. 204 (A.D.)
Ismail 1964 (1) P.H., H. 66 (W)
Ismail 1965 (1) S.A. 445 (H)
Ismail 1965 (1) S.A. 452 (H)
Ismail v. Registrar of Asiatics 1911 T.P.D. 1180
Israelohn v. Power N.O. 1953 (2) S.A. 499 (W)
Issroff 1927 E.D.L. 101
Ivy’s Trial (1684) 10 St. Tr. 555

J 1958 (3) S.A. 699 (S.R.)
J 1966 (1) S.A. 86 (S.R., A.D.)
Jabavu 1969 (2) S.A. 465 (A.D.)
Jackerson 1917 A.D. 556
Jackson v. Thomson (1861) 1 B.& S. 745
Jacobs in re (1885) 3 H.C.S. 294
Jacobs v. Heming 1927 T.P.D. 325
Jacobs 1954 (2) S.A. 520 (A.D.)
Jacobs v. Auto Protection Insurance Co.Ltd. 1964 (3)
S.A. 379 (W)
Jafa 1936 C.P.D. 485
Jefferches 1931 O.P.D. 39
Jahoro 1966 (2) S.A. 350 (R.A.D.)
Jahahal (1883) 3 B.D.C. 224
Jamba 1947 (4) S.A. 228 (G)
Jimar (1954) C.R.L. 55
Jenoo 1936 T.P.D. 10
Jansen 1937 C.P.D. 294
Janjies v. Juma Pipe Co.Ltd. 1950 (3) S.A. 679 (G)
Jartze (1865) 3 E.D.C. 215
Jasper 1940 A.D. 9
Jawa 1957 (2) S.A. 187 (E)
Jayasena [1970] 1 All E.R. 219 (P.C.)
Jeggels 1962 (5) S.A. 704 (6)
Jelsa 1960 (3) S.A. 172 (S.R.)
Jenion, in re [1952] Ch. 454
Jenkins (1904) 21 S.C. 253
Jenkinson 1926 E.D.L. 281
Jennings v. Parag 1955 (1) S.A. 290 (T)
Jensen v. Williams, Hunt & Clymer Ltd. 1959 (4)
S.A. 503 (0)
Jewish Colonial Trust, ex parte, in re Nathan's Trust 1967 (4) S.A. 397 (W)
Jigo (1909) 30 N.L.R. 426
Jigre (1894) 11 S.C. 367
Joffee 1950 (3) S.A. 251 (T)
Jogi 1916 C.P.D. 45
John 1929 W.L.D. 50
John 1945 T.P.D. 295
John 1955 (2) S.A. 62 (R)
John Dell & Co. Ltd. v. Esselen 1954 (1) S.A. 147 (A.D.)
Johnson (1847) 2 Car. & K. 354
Johnson & Irwin v. Mayston N.O. (1909) 30 N.L.R. 396
Jokl v. Alexander 1947 (5) S.A. 542 (W)
Jones (1885) 5 E.D.C. 528
Jones 1908 E.D.C. 44
Jones 1928 T.P.D. 520
Jones (1928) 39 T.L.R. 457
Jones (P.D.P. [1962] 2 W.L.R. 575 (H.B.)
Jood 1949 (1) S.A. 290 (G.W.)
Juwalaaway 1947 (2) S.A. 1175 (S.R.)
Jordan 1918 E.D.L. 8
Julissen 1956 (4) S.A. 837 (C)
Justin v. Arnold & Sons (1915) 84 L.J.K.B. 2214

K 1951 (3) S.A. 150 (S.W.N.A.) K 1951 (4) S.A. 49 (0)
K 1964 (2) S.A. 579 (F)
Kahn 1926 C.P.D. 328
Kahn v. Time Inc. 1955 (2) S.A. 560 (W)
Kaiser 1927 W.L.D. 278
Kali 1964 (1) S.A. 237 (0)
Kama v. Estate Kama (1902) 17 E.D.C. 39
Kamfer 1969 (4) S.A. 250 (3)
Kanichovsky 1922 S.W.A. 23
Kanemeyer 1958 (3) S.A. 56 (0)
Kanemeyer 1958 (1) P.R., S.J.48 (C)
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Reference</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Journal</th>
<th>Page(s)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Kant</td>
<td>1933</td>
<td>W.D.L.</td>
<td>128</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kanti</td>
<td>1932</td>
<td>E.D.L.</td>
<td>209</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kaplan</td>
<td>1942</td>
<td>O.P.D.</td>
<td>232</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Karmazit</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>A.C.</td>
<td>257</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Karien v. Latif</td>
<td>1910</td>
<td>O.P.D.</td>
<td>154</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Karrie</td>
<td>1917</td>
<td>N.L.R.</td>
<td>259</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kasa</td>
<td>1936</td>
<td>O.P.D.</td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kassim</td>
<td>1950</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>522 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Katola</td>
<td>1909</td>
<td>T.S.</td>
<td>1029</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Katz v. Webb</td>
<td>1930</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>700</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Katz</td>
<td>1959</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>408 (G)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Katz</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>71</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Katzenburg</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>425 (M)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kautumani</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>E.H., F.</td>
<td>154 (S.W.A.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kawula</td>
<td>1929</td>
<td>N.L.R.</td>
<td>49</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kearney</td>
<td>1964</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>495 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Keeton</td>
<td>1906</td>
<td>E.D.L.</td>
<td>56</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kafasi</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>346 (S.R., A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kennedy and Browne</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>L.J.</td>
<td>223</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Keller</td>
<td>1915</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>98</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kellerman v. Minister of the Interior</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kellner</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>435 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kelly v. S.A.R. &amp; H.</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>671</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kelly</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>S.R.</td>
<td>344</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kemp v. Bryant</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>E.D.L.</td>
<td>416</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kennele</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>E.D.L.</td>
<td>18</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kerwin v. Jones</td>
<td>1957</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>181 (S.R.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kewelram</td>
<td>1922</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>215</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Keyser</td>
<td>1951</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>512 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kgadiepe</td>
<td>1922</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>121</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kgadili</td>
<td>1943</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>255</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Khan</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>23 (N)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Khan</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>340 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Khan</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>897 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Khan</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>P.H., H.</td>
<td>173 (N)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Khan</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>324 (N)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Khan</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>673 (F)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Khotatso</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>O.P.D.</td>
<td>269</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Khoza</td>
<td>1964</td>
<td>P.H., H.</td>
<td>2 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Khumalo</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>P.H., H.</td>
<td>259 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kibi</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>E.D.L.</td>
<td>197</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kiddle v. Murray</td>
<td>1924</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>229</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kumihi</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>250 (C)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Etag v. Lane & Co. Ltd. (1912) 33 N.L.R. 325 126
King 1943 B.D.L. 191 72, 203
King 1952 (4) S.A. 621 (T) 129, 131
King [1968] 3 W.L.R. 391 (P.O.) 5, 141
Kirkstall Brewery Co. v. Furness Railway Co. (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 468 126
Kirsten 1950 (3) S.A. 659 (G) 22, 47
Kisi 1950 (4) S.A. 552 (A.D.) 55
Klassen v. Benjamin 1941 T.P.D. 80 173, 174
Kleinbooi 1917 T.P.D. 86 118, 136, 137
Kleiboooy (1886) 5 E.D.C. 328 119
Kleyhaus v. Van den Berg 1953 (2) S.A. 503 (T) 48
Klisner and Rosenberg 1949 (3) S.A. 807 (M) 113, 114, 117, 152, 155
Knight [1966] 1 All E.R. 647 (C.A.) 200
Knettszv. Nei 1946 S.W.L. 20 65
Knoife 1916 T.P.D. 472 150
Koala 1950 (5) S.A. 705 (O) 182
Kooh 1952 (3) S.A. 26 (M) 42
Kock v. S.K.F. Laboratories 1962 (3) S.A. 764 175
 Köhler (1861) 9 H.L.C. 654 105
Kola 1949 (1) P.H., H. 100 (A.D.) 201
Komana 1928 B.D.L. 425 55
Konza 1934 C.P.D. 10 113
Koro 1950 (3) S.A. 797 (O) 120
Korsten v. Guyler (1829) 1 Manz. 450 100
Kotsco 1918 B.D.L. 91 205
Koto 1911 B.D.L. 141 204
Kosza 1958 (1) P.H., H. 166 (O) 188
Kramer 1929 T.P.D. 173 180
Kramer 1950 (2) S.A. 475 (A.D.) 14, 170
Kristesamy 1947 (4) S.A. 768 (M) 41
Kritzinger 1952 (2) S.A. 401 (M) 193
Kruger 1941 C.P.D. 33 47
Kruger v. Ludick 1947 (3) S.A. 23 (A.D.) 36, 41, 42
Kruger 1951 (4) S.A. 37 (M) 11
Kubusse 1945 A.D. 189 194
Kifuzwineyi 1950 (4) S.A. 31 (S.R.) 189
Kikubula 1958 (3) S.A. 698 (S.R.) 90
Kula 1958 (4) S.A. 675 186
Kumalo 1918 A.D. 500 71
Kumalo 1930 A.D. 193 42, 54, 129, 175
Kumalo 1949 (1) S.A. 620 (A.D.) 130
Kumalo 1952 (3) S.A. 223 (T) 79
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case Name</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Court</th>
<th>Reference</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Kunamo</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>P.H., H.220</td>
<td>(2)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kunamo</td>
<td>1962</td>
<td>S.A. 432</td>
<td>(1)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kunane</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>S.A. 62 (T)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kupse v. Swart</td>
<td>1924</td>
<td>A.D. 616</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kupse</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>S.A. 443 (E)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kupes</td>
<td>1957</td>
<td>S.A. 399 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kusuma [1955]</td>
<td>A.C.</td>
<td>197 (P.C.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kutsbossien</td>
<td>1930</td>
<td>G.P.D. 191</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kuyper</td>
<td>1915</td>
<td>T.P.D. 308</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kizwayo</td>
<td>1949</td>
<td>S.A. 761 (A.D.)</td>
<td>(3)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kizwayo</td>
<td>1964</td>
<td>S.A. 55 (E)</td>
<td>(3)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kwenja</td>
<td>1942</td>
<td>G.P.D. 273</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kwezi</td>
<td>1957</td>
<td>S.A. 663 (E)</td>
<td>(3)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>L ex parte</td>
<td>1947</td>
<td>S.A. 50 (E)</td>
<td>(3)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>L ex parte</td>
<td>1951</td>
<td>S.A. 614 (A.D.)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>L ex parte</td>
<td>1955</td>
<td>S.A. 575 (T)</td>
<td>(1)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Laberslot</td>
<td>1927</td>
<td>T.P.D. 279</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Labson</td>
<td>1968</td>
<td>S.A. 108 (E)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Labee</td>
<td>1941</td>
<td>E.D.L. 251</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lakatula</td>
<td>1919</td>
<td>A.D. 362</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lakhoo</td>
<td>1943</td>
<td>G.W.L. 10</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lala's Estate v. Mahomed</td>
<td>1944</td>
<td>A.D. 324</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lambat</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>S.A. 734 (S.R.)</td>
<td>(1)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lamla [1882]</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>E.D.L. 585</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lamprecht v. Varkevisser</td>
<td>1932</td>
<td>G.P.D. 388</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Landers v. Vogel [1906]</td>
<td>27</td>
<td>W.L.R. 590</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Langa</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>S.A. 941 (E)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Langa</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>S.A. 941 (E)</td>
<td>(4)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Langham v. Milne v.</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>S.A. 611 (E)</td>
<td>(1)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Leibacher</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>A.D. 276</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Laurens v. Laurens [1915]</td>
<td>36</td>
<td>W.L.R. 428</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lazarus</td>
<td>1922</td>
<td>G.P.D. 293</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Leach [1912]</td>
<td>A.C.</td>
<td>305 (H.I.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Leach</td>
<td>1939</td>
<td>E.D.L. 28</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Leboe</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>S.A. 837 (A.D.)</td>
<td>(2)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lechuduf</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>A.D. 796</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lee [1911]</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>C.R. App. Rep. 31</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lee [1931]</td>
<td>W.L.D.</td>
<td>154</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lee [1949]</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A. 1334 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lee [1952]</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>S.A. 57 (T)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lee [1962]</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>P.H., H.70 (T)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Legge</td>
<td>1910</td>
<td>E.P.D. 450</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Lobell [1957] 1 Q.B. 547 (C.A.) 173
Lombard 1967 (3) S.A. 541 (A.D.) 237
London & S.A. Exploration Co.Ltd. v. Beaconsfield (1885) 3 H.C.C. 182 166
Long v. Long 1946 N.L.D. 353 44
Longthorne v. E.T.C. [1959] 2 All E.R. 32 139
Loof 1952 (3) S.A. 798 (A) 50, 51
Lord Mayor of London (1885) 16 Q.B.D. 772 32
Lotter 1964 (1) S.A. 229 (O) 138, 140
Lettering ex parte 1936 T.P.D. 29 109
Lowe (1904) 21 S.C. 36 203
Louv v. Louw 1953 C.P.D. 407 179
Loysa Estate (1885) 10 App.Cas. 763 (H.L.) 102, 103, 104
Lavo (1891) 6 E.D.C. 186 196
Lucas 1968 (2) S.A. 592 (B) 42
Lucy & Co.Ltd. v. Dassal 1927 T.P.D. 842 56
Lukelo 1927 E.D.L. 42 70
Lutoli 1927 E.D.L. 42 20, 54, 122
Luwazi 1945 E.D.L. 147 11, 187
Luyt 1927 C.P.D. 278 159
Luwane 1966 (2) S.A. 433 (B.D.) 4, 30, 135, 157
Lyell v. Kennedy (1889) 14 App.Cas. 437 (H.L.) 10, 108
Lynes v. International Trade Developers (1922) 43 N.L.R. 301 43
Lyons (1891) 6 E.D.C. 196 196

M 1941 N.P.D. 372 196, 198
M 1946 A.D. 1023 59
M 1947 (4) S.A. 469 (A) 199, 200
M 1959 (1) S.A. 434 (A.DL) 55, 56, 57
M 1963 (3) S.A. 182 (D) 77, 201
M 1965 (4) S.A. 577 (D) 10, 200
Maartens 1969 (1) E.R., H. 70 (T) 20
Mabala 1947 (2) S.A. 335 (B) 8, 10
Mabane v. Bondalia Assurance Corp. of S.A.Ltd. 1969 41
Mabena v. Bondalia Assurance Corp. of S.A.Ltd. 1969 (2) S.A. 254 (W) 172
Mabenci (1905) 22 S.C. 632 92
Mabaso 1952 (3) S.A. 321 (A.D.) 44
Mabena v. Brakpan Municipality 1956 (1) S.A. 182 (T) 94
Mabithela v. Yorkshire Insurance Co.Ltd. 1961 (3) S.A. 820 (W) 5
Mabuya 1927 C.P.D. 181 185, 199, 200
Macaub 1939 A.D. 66 53
Meadow & Co. v. J.C.L. Co.Ltd. 1923 T.P.D. 318 53
Macgillivray's Estate in re [1946] 2 All E.R. 301 (G.A.) 106
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Page(s)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hacket 1969</td>
<td></td>
<td>55</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mackay Bros. v. Bradford 1908</td>
<td></td>
<td>46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mackay v. Bradford 1927</td>
<td></td>
<td>113, 114</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mackay v. Assistant Magistrates, Empangeni 1963 (1)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hadden v. Cattensch (1851)</td>
<td></td>
<td>48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Madiba 1947</td>
<td></td>
<td>184</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malidi 1961</td>
<td></td>
<td>135, 136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Medlala 1959</td>
<td></td>
<td>175</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Medobi (1963)</td>
<td></td>
<td>101</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meduna 1946</td>
<td></td>
<td>81</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Medvedzo 1964</td>
<td></td>
<td>189</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meduna 1961</td>
<td></td>
<td>181</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Magona 1947</td>
<td></td>
<td>131</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Magotlock 1959</td>
<td></td>
<td>119, 120</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Magomsholo 1948</td>
<td></td>
<td>29</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makaloka 1953</td>
<td></td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maharaj (1910)</td>
<td></td>
<td>81</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maharaj (1912)</td>
<td></td>
<td>147</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maharaj 1935</td>
<td></td>
<td>191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maharaj 1960</td>
<td></td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maharaj 1947</td>
<td></td>
<td>194, 196</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maharaj 1969</td>
<td></td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mahala 1967</td>
<td></td>
<td>133, 140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mahlala (1869)</td>
<td></td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mahlamanzi (1895)</td>
<td></td>
<td>196</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mahlali, 1922</td>
<td></td>
<td>113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mahobes (1898)</td>
<td></td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mahomed 1921</td>
<td></td>
<td>132</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mahomed 1940</td>
<td></td>
<td>83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mahomed 1942</td>
<td></td>
<td>58</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Majja 1961</td>
<td></td>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Majola 1954</td>
<td></td>
<td>167</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Majola 1966</td>
<td></td>
<td>135</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Majolo 1943</td>
<td></td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Majoro 1915</td>
<td></td>
<td>51</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Majosi 1956</td>
<td></td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Majosi 1964</td>
<td></td>
<td>136, 139</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makanyaka 1948</td>
<td></td>
<td>24, 28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makatshana 1939</td>
<td></td>
<td>151</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makaula 1947</td>
<td></td>
<td>168</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makaula 1961</td>
<td></td>
<td>58</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makaula 1964</td>
<td></td>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makay 1948</td>
<td></td>
<td>35, 36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makwana 1961</td>
<td></td>
<td>13, 14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makwanyana 1963</td>
<td></td>
<td>21, 43, 197, 198</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Case</td>
<td>Year</td>
<td>Volume</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
<td>--------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makubu v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1894</td>
<td>A. S.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malini v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1894</td>
<td>A. S.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makubu v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makanbee v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Makwambasa v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1962</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malekeng v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malele v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1928</td>
<td>C. P. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malele v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>T. P. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malele v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malema v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1940</td>
<td>W. I. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malelake v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>T. P. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malete v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1907</td>
<td>T. H.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malete v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1944</td>
<td>W. I. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malgas v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1913</td>
<td>E. D. L.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malika v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1953</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malina v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>E. D. C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malindi v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1968</td>
<td>P. H., H. 2 (Q)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malingga v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malingga v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1953</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mall v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mall v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mallasie v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1932</td>
<td>N. P. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maloi v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1939</td>
<td>W. I. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Manabola v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>P. H., H. 370 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Manakale v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1932</td>
<td>W. I. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Manana v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>C. P. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mensa v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1951</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Manasia v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Manqalade v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>A. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Manjona v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Manqa v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1958</td>
<td>C. P. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Manley v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1933</td>
<td>L. B.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mansell v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1959</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Manuel v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>C. P. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Manyana v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1931</td>
<td>A. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mapatessa v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1912</td>
<td>T. P. D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maphega v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1908</td>
<td>S. C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maphumalo v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maphumalo v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mapheya v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1899</td>
<td>N. I. R.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marais v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marais v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marais v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marais v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marais v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marais v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marais v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marais v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marais v. Attorney-General for N.S.W.</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S. A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Year</td>
<td>Case Name</td>
<td>Reference</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------</td>
<td>----------------------------------------------</td>
<td>-------------------------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1934</td>
<td>Marcele v. De Kock</td>
<td>T.P.D. 59</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1947</td>
<td>Margau v. De Kock</td>
<td>S.A. 318 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1964</td>
<td>Marcolina v. De Kock</td>
<td>S.A. 579 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1916</td>
<td>Martinowitz v. Grundling</td>
<td>G.P.D. 587</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1890</td>
<td>Marks v. Beyns</td>
<td>25 Q.B.D. 494 (C.A.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1935</td>
<td>Marks v. Ingg</td>
<td>W.L.D. 135</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1962</td>
<td>Maresa v. City Council</td>
<td>1 P.H., H.81 (H)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1946</td>
<td>Marquard v. City Council</td>
<td>C.P.D. 474</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1894</td>
<td>Martsa v. City Council</td>
<td>15 N.L.R. 326</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1966</td>
<td>Massu Ali v. City Council</td>
<td>1 Q.B. 698</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1950</td>
<td>Massax v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 488 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1910</td>
<td>Massone v. City Council</td>
<td>E.D.L. 383</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1928</td>
<td>Massow v. City Council</td>
<td>T.P.D. 356</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1950</td>
<td>Mashabane v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 193 (C)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1944</td>
<td>Mashelele v. City Council</td>
<td>A.D. 570</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1962</td>
<td>Masion v. City Council</td>
<td>1 P.H., H.95 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1962</td>
<td>Masion v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 541 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1968</td>
<td>Masilela v. City Council</td>
<td>P.H., H. 265 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1958</td>
<td>Masebana v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 616 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1879</td>
<td>Massey v. Allen (1879)</td>
<td>13 Ch.D. 598</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1909</td>
<td>Maswana v. City Council</td>
<td>E.D.C. 552</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1947</td>
<td>Matlabane v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 717 (O)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1962</td>
<td>Matambo v. City Council</td>
<td>P.H., H. 253 (R.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1923</td>
<td>Matanwa v. City Council</td>
<td>A.D. 475</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1941</td>
<td>Matemba v. City Council, in re, Ex parte Minister of Justice</td>
<td>A.D. 75</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1969</td>
<td>Mathews v. City Council</td>
<td>2 P.H., H.143 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1915</td>
<td>Mathias v. Pietermaritzburg Corporation</td>
<td>35 N.L.R. 346</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1950</td>
<td>Mathlaka v. City Council</td>
<td>P.H., H.144 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1951</td>
<td>Mathlala v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 40 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1960</td>
<td>Masi v. City Council</td>
<td>P.H., H. 14 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1921</td>
<td>Matilwa v. Molushe</td>
<td>T.P.D. 343</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1924</td>
<td>Matsaba v. City Council</td>
<td>E.D.L. 199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1956</td>
<td>Masetso v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 418 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1956</td>
<td>Masahe v. City Council</td>
<td>P.H., H. 254 (R)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1962</td>
<td>Matsiase v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 708 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1942</td>
<td>Matsibane v. City Council</td>
<td>A.D. 215</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1950</td>
<td>Matsoso v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 178 (O)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1947</td>
<td>Matthews v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 50 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1950</td>
<td>Matthews v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 671 (R)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1960</td>
<td>Matthews v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 752 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1926</td>
<td>Matyila v. Mkatu</td>
<td>E.D.L. 178</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1961</td>
<td>Mazibuko v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 113 (R)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1947</td>
<td>Mazibuko v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 321 (R)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1950</td>
<td>Mazibuco v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 572 (C)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1984</td>
<td>Mabuza v. City Council</td>
<td>S.C. 381</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1982</td>
<td>Mabasa v. City Council</td>
<td>2 P.H., H. 497</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1979</td>
<td>Mabone v. City Council</td>
<td>1 Q.B. 698</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1976</td>
<td>Mabuya v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 708 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1957</td>
<td>Mabuya v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 178 (O)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1961</td>
<td>Mabuya v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 178 (O)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1947</td>
<td>Mabuya v. City Council</td>
<td>S.A. 321 (R)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Indexes:
- 1950 (2): S.A. 193 (C) 136, 141, 152
- 1950 (4): S.A. 321 (R)
- 1910 (2): S.A. 541 (A.D.) 135, 136
- 1941 (A.D.) 75: 5, 40, 41, 132
- 1969 (2): P.H., H.143 (T) 13, 14
- 1915 (A.D.) 5: 44
- 1950 (4): S.A. 178 (O) 175, 176
- 1947 (4): S.A. 50 (A.D.) 198, 225, 77, 78
- 1950 (3): S.A. 671 (R) 126
- 1960 (1): S.A. 752 (A.D.) 125
- 1926 (E.D.L. 178): 115
- 1961 (3): S.A. 113 (R) 15, 19
- 1947 (4): S.A. 321 (R) 138
- 1934 (4): S.A. 579 (T) 42
- 1916 (G.P.D. 587): 169
- 1890 (25 Q.B.D. 494 (C.A.): 167, 169
- 1935 (W.L.D. 135): 159
- 1969 (3): S.A. 227 (A.D.) 146
- 1962 (1): P.H., H.81 (H) 199
- 1946 (C.P.D. 474): 59
- 1894 (15 N.L.R. 326): 102
- 1966 (1 Q.B. 698): 41
- 1950 (2): S.A. 488 (A.D.) 281
- 1910 (E.D.L. 383): 101, 102
- 1928 (T.P.D. 356): 191, 192
- 1950 (S.A. 193 (C): 130
- 1944 (A.D. 570): 54, 123
- 1962 (1): P.H., H.95 (A.D.) 116
- 1962 (2): S.A. 541 (A.D.) 135, 175
- 1968 (2): P.H., H. 265 (A.D.) 37
- 1958 (1): S.A. 616 (A.D.) 126
- 1879 (13 Ch.D. 598): 56
- 1909 (E.D.C. 552): 119
- 1947 (3): S.A. 717 (O) 47, 48, 61
- 1962 (2): P.H., H. 253 (R.) 124
- 1923 (A.D. 475): 125
- 1941 (A.D.) 75: 5, 40, 132
- 1969 (2): P.H., H.143 (T) 13, 14
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Reference</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Mbandele</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>B.D.L. 177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mbanjwa</td>
<td>1916</td>
<td>A.D. 469</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vathia</td>
<td>1903</td>
<td>S.A. 476</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mbele</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>P.E., H. 162</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mbele</td>
<td>1964</td>
<td>S.A. 401</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mbidi</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>B.D.L. 179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mbiti</td>
<td>1951</td>
<td>S.A. 110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mhina</td>
<td>1923</td>
<td>B.D.L. 248</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mhina</td>
<td>1930</td>
<td>B.D.L. 16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mhoka</td>
<td>1910</td>
<td>T.P.D. 445</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>McIaghe</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>S.A. 55</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mhembambi</td>
<td>1957</td>
<td>S.A. 232</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mhongwe</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>S.A. 1016</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mbowo</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>S.A. 182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mhulele</td>
<td>1921</td>
<td>W.I.D. 59</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>McCauley</td>
<td>1924</td>
<td>45 N.L.R. 258</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>McDonald</td>
<td>1927</td>
<td>A.D. 110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>McIntyre</td>
<td>1904</td>
<td>T.S. 204</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>McLean</td>
<td>1901</td>
<td>S.C. 1470</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>McWilliam</td>
<td>1958</td>
<td>P.H., H. 335</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>McNeil</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>T.P.D. 287</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>M'Naughtan</td>
<td>1843</td>
<td>10 Cl. &amp; F. 200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Muncie</td>
<td>1962</td>
<td>S.A. 375</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>McWilliam</td>
<td>1958</td>
<td>S.A. 243</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Head</td>
<td>1824</td>
<td>2 B. &amp; 6. 506</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heath</td>
<td>1936</td>
<td>3 Yrig. (B.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mechanical &amp;</td>
<td>1935</td>
<td>A.O. 346</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>General</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Inventions</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Co.Ltd. v.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Austin</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meer</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td>S.A. 586</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mchelape</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>S.A. 29</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mchlowakula</td>
<td>1922</td>
<td>T.P.D. 305</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meier</td>
<td>1936</td>
<td>W.I.L. 291</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mesano</td>
<td>1959</td>
<td>S.A. 600</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meller v.</td>
<td>1905</td>
<td>2 Cl. 164</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Walmsley</td>
<td></td>
<td>(S.A.) 97</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mellozani</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>S.A. 639</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mellozani</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>S.A. 639</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mensa</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>P.H., H. 7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meser v.</td>
<td>1905</td>
<td>2 Ch. 538</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Denne</td>
<td></td>
<td>(S.A.) 95</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Merrick v.</td>
<td>1838</td>
<td>6 A.A. &amp; E. 171</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Walsley</td>
<td></td>
<td>109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Messina Bros.</td>
<td>1912</td>
<td>C.P.D. 127</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>v. Kirsten M.</td>
<td></td>
<td>153</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meyer's</td>
<td>1911</td>
<td>T.P.D. 559</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Trustee v.</td>
<td></td>
<td>51</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Malan</td>
<td></td>
<td>127</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meyer v.</td>
<td>1919</td>
<td>40 N.L.R. 92</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Estate Rudolph</td>
<td></td>
<td>57, 61, 74, 149</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meyer</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>T.P.D. 390</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meyer</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>T.P.D. 472</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meyer</td>
<td>1953</td>
<td>S.A. 26</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Meyers</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>A.D. 57</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Case Title</td>
<td>Year</td>
<td>Volume</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>--------</td>
<td>--------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mgotywa v. Additional Magistrate, Johannesburg</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Michael v. Minister of Pensions</td>
<td>1947</td>
<td>2 All E.R.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Miller v. Magennis</td>
<td>1924</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mils v. Minister of Pensions [1947]</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Miller [1952]</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mils and Lemon [1947]</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Milne v. Minister of Pensions [1947]</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mitchell v. Priest</td>
<td>1930</td>
<td>A.C.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Miranda v. Arizona</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>U.S.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mitchell v. Buckner</td>
<td>1896</td>
<td>N.L.D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mitchell v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Miya v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1962</td>
<td>P.H.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mhatile v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1939</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mkize v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mkoza v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mkwavisi v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1935</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mkwasana v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mkwezi v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mkhize v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mkwena v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1939</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mlalo v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1939</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mloci v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1935</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mzansi v. Mitchell</td>
<td>1968</td>
<td>P.H.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Case</td>
<td>Year</td>
<td>Page Numbers</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
<td>--------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mnata</td>
<td>1937</td>
<td>C.P.D. 105</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mucwango</td>
<td>1942</td>
<td>N.P.D. 125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moko</td>
<td>1949</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 95</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Modasa</td>
<td>1948</td>
<td>(1) S.A. 1157</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Modibe</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>(2) P.E., H. 357 (G.W.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mogane</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>(3) S.A. 649 (O)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moffat v. S.A. Breweries Ltd.</td>
<td>1912</td>
<td>W.L.D. 104</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mofokeng</td>
<td>1928</td>
<td>A.D. 132</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mofokeng</td>
<td>1958</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 652 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mogago</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>(1) P.H., H. 117 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mogate</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 1 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moloca</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 624 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Molgedi</td>
<td>1968</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 335 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mokhachane v. Hendricks</td>
<td>1935</td>
<td>E.P.D. 26</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mokhelyane</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>G.P.D. 140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mokoena</td>
<td>1932</td>
<td>C.P.D. 79</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mokoena</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>(3) S.A. 81 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mokoena</td>
<td>1958</td>
<td>(2) S.A. 212 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mokoena</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>(3) S.A. 440 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mokwena</td>
<td>1940</td>
<td>C.P.D. 129</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Molahoe</td>
<td>1940</td>
<td>G.P.D. 255</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Molai</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>(2) P.H., H. 204 (O)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Molalesane</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>T.P.D. 290</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Molotseane</td>
<td>1962</td>
<td>(2) S.A. 182 (E)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moller v. Kelmoes School Committee</td>
<td>1911</td>
<td>A.D. 635</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Molo</td>
<td>1953</td>
<td>(2) S.A. 129 (E)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moloke</td>
<td>1957</td>
<td>(2) P.H., H. 203 (E)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Monileke</td>
<td>1955</td>
<td>C.P.D. 23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Monkoe</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>(1) P.H., H. 15 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Monkton v. Attorney-General</td>
<td>1831</td>
<td>2 Huss. &amp; M. 146</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Monzie</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td>(1) P.H., H. 119 (N)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Montaione</td>
<td>1932</td>
<td>G.W.L. 79</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Montiso</td>
<td>1934</td>
<td>G.P.D. 31</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moodie</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 752 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moola</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td>(3) S.A. 745 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mooliah</td>
<td>1913</td>
<td>34 H.R. 208</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moolman v. Estate Moolman</td>
<td>1927</td>
<td>C.P.D. 27</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moolman</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>C.P.D. 136</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| Moor v. Moor                              | 1954 | [2 All E.R. 456 (C.A.)]
| Moore (1852)                              | 2 Den 522 |
| Moos                                      | 1918 | E.P.D. 65    |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Volume/Year</th>
<th>Pages</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hoosen 1963 (2) S.A. 340 (N)</td>
<td></td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Motebeni v. Murohuney (1919) 40 N.L.R. 402</td>
<td></td>
<td>49, 51</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morala 1947 (3) S.A. 147 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>146</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morgan v. Beydnes (1818) 2 Stenz. 313</td>
<td></td>
<td>59</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morgan 1939 C.P.P. 453</td>
<td></td>
<td>114</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moriarty v. London Chatham etc. Rly. Co. (1870)</td>
<td></td>
<td>63, 125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morosi 1950 (2) S.A. 351 (S.R.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>82</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morris v. Davies (1837) 5 G.&amp; F. 167</td>
<td></td>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morris 1946 C.W.L. 55</td>
<td></td>
<td>184</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morrison 1933 E.P.D. 741</td>
<td></td>
<td>37</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mosala 1968 (3) S.A. 523 (T)</td>
<td></td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mosali 1969 (1) S.A. 650 (0)</td>
<td></td>
<td>158, 159</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mosaly v. Davies (1822) 11 Price 162</td>
<td></td>
<td>105</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mosili v. Mosescakumo 1954 (3) S.A. 919 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Motama 1963 (2) S.A. 579 (T)</td>
<td></td>
<td>130</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Motebeni 1949 (2) S.A. 547 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>59</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Motlhe 1960 (2) F.H., H. 350 (O)</td>
<td></td>
<td>112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Motlhe 1965 (4) S.A. 484 (T)</td>
<td></td>
<td>112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Motlilo 1944 T.P.D. 40</td>
<td></td>
<td>69</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Motjolo 1952 (2) S.A. 197 (T)</td>
<td></td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moutt v. Ballday (1898) 1 Q.B. 125</td>
<td></td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mouttford v. Makumudzi 1969 (2) S.A. 56 (R.A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mouton 1934 T.P.D. 101</td>
<td></td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moyo 1967 (4) S.A. 613 (R)</td>
<td></td>
<td>144</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mphapitse (1915) 36 E.L.R. 197</td>
<td></td>
<td>79, 254</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mphapitse 1915 A.D. 348</td>
<td></td>
<td>73, 92</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mphapitse 1946 E.D.L. 58</td>
<td></td>
<td>31</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mphoko 1942 E.D.L. 153</td>
<td></td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mpondo 1958 (4) S.A. 471 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>194, 196, 200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mpuza (1909) 30 N.L.R. 464</td>
<td></td>
<td>18</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mputi 1960 (1) S.A. 785 (W)</td>
<td></td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mputi 1966 (1) F.H., H. 186 (O)</td>
<td></td>
<td>136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mshehwe 1920 E.D.L. 196</td>
<td></td>
<td>131</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Msonti 1957 (1) S.A. 206 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Msonti v. Dingindohe 1927 A.D. 255</td>
<td></td>
<td>136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mteku 1941 E.D.L. 7</td>
<td></td>
<td>133, 134, 135</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mthabelu 1958 (1) S.A. 264 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>139, 140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mthembu 1962 (1) P.E., H. 108 (N)</td>
<td></td>
<td>117, 119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mthembu 1949 (3) S.A. 137 (O)</td>
<td></td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mthembu 1950 (1) S.A. 670 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>172</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mtila v. Kayakias 1919 E.D.L. 51</td>
<td></td>
<td>181</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mtondini 1965 (2) P.H., H. 112 (O)</td>
<td></td>
<td>141</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mthlongo 1949 (2) S.A. 552 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
<td>122, 124</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Case Title</td>
<td>Year</td>
<td>Source</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
<td>--------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mtunum</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>E.D.L. 527</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mudaly (1911)</td>
<td>32 N.L.R. 362</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mukama 1934</td>
<td>T.P.D. 154</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mulla 1932</td>
<td>W.L.D. 16</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Muller 1934</td>
<td>T.P.D. 9</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Muller v. Mel 1942</td>
<td>C.P.D. 337</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Munchin 1917</td>
<td>T.P.D. 549</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Murano 1931</td>
<td>O.P.D. 143</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Murdoch v. Taylor [1965]</td>
<td>1 All E.R. 406 (H.L.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Murray 1924</td>
<td>T.P.D. 511</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Murtan (1862)</td>
<td>5 F.A. 492</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Muruvaay (1913)</td>
<td>39 N.L.R. 29</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mugekiwa 1965 (5)</td>
<td>S.A. 529 (S.R., A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mutoke 1946</td>
<td>A.D. 874</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mutilba 1944</td>
<td>A.D. 23</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mutekiwana 1915</td>
<td>C.P.D. 89</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mazari 1962 (1)</td>
<td>F.H., H. 31 (S.R.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Myala 1914</td>
<td>E.D.L. 12</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Myulha 1965 (4)</td>
<td>S.A. 113 (0)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Myataza 1952</td>
<td>E.D.L. 108</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Myers 1907</td>
<td>T.S. 760</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Myeza 1936</td>
<td>T.P.D. 580</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naimha 1942</td>
<td>W.L.D. 82</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mabo (1930)</td>
<td>15 F.H., H. 33 (m)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mwalana 1941</td>
<td>E.D.L. 5</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Magonde (1917)</td>
<td>1 K.B. 359 (C.A.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naidoo 1965 (2)</td>
<td>S.A. 919 (N)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naidoo 1966 (1)</td>
<td>S.A. 594 (N)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naidoo 1969 (2)</td>
<td>P.H., H. 163 (N)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naidoo (1901)</td>
<td>22 N.L.R. 420</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naidoo 1909</td>
<td>T.S. 43</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naidoo v. Tumaili 1955</td>
<td>H.P.D. 227</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naidoo 1962 (2)</td>
<td>S.A. 625 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naidoo 1965 (1)</td>
<td>P.H., H. 104 (N)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naidoo 1966 (4)</td>
<td>S.A. 519 (N)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naidoo v. Pillay's Trustee 1923</td>
<td>A.D.471</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naidoo v. Sassim 1952</td>
<td>S.A. 362 (S.R.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Note: The table entries are placeholders for the actual content of the page. The page seems to contain a list of legal cases and references, possibly for a legal or academic context.
Bakedie 1942 O.P.D. 162
Badi 1947 (2) S.A. 161 (C)
Bala 1955 (4) S.A. 360 (A.D.)
Nalana 1907 T.S. 407
Nani 1930 E.D.L. 12
Nara Sammy 1956 (4) S.A. 629 (T)
Naran Sammy 1945 A.D. 618
Naran 1954 (1) S.A. 509 (S.B.)
Naran 1963 (1) S.A. 652 (A.D.)
Narasimman (1914) 35 W.L.R. 458
Narotam v. Madhav 1955 (4) S.A. 65 (W)
Natal Law Society v. Button (1882) 3 W.L.R. 67
Natal Building Society, in re (1926) 47 W.L.R. 178
Mathew v. Anderson N.O. 1939 W.L.D. 13
Mathewson 1959 (3) S.A. 124 (A.D.)
National Bank v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co.ltd. 1917
W.L.D. 100
Naylor v. Wheeler 1947 (2) S.A. 681 (S)
Nkanana 1948 (4) S.A. 599 (A.D.)
Nokhabeleng 1941 A.D. 502
Nokasaneke 1915 E.D.L. 133
Nokwani 1959 (2) S.A. 630 (E)
Nhama 1961 (1) S.A. 16 (E)
Nkhalose 1946 N.P.D. 549
Nklangisa 1946 A.D. 111
Nkholu 1945 A.D. 369
Nkholu 1950 (4) S.A. 574 (W)
Nkholu 1954 (4) S.A. 482 (W)
Nkholu 1965 (3) S.A. 590 (W)
Nkhamanga 1913 C.P.D. 708
Nkwanza v. Hofmeyr 1937 A.D. 229
Nkoyana 1958 (2) S.A. 562 (W)
Nel 1913 E.D.L. 320
Nel 1946 W.L.D. 406
Nel 1960 (2) S.A. 486 (S)
Nel 1960 (4) S.A. 692 (O)
Nel 1967 (2) R.H. 349 (G.W.)
Nelson v. Whittal (1817) 1 B.& Ad. 19
Nelson 1936 S.R. 121
Nepgen N.O. v. Van Dyk N.O. 1940 E.D.L. 123
Netherlands Bank v. Le Roux N.O. 1965 (1) S.A. 681 (T)
Neubauer, ex parte 1947 (3) S.A. 736 (O)
Newcastle v. Broxtowe (1832) 4 B & Ad. 273
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Place</th>
<th>Year(s)</th>
<th>Reference</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ngaiwana</td>
<td>1898</td>
<td>E.D.C. 32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngca</td>
<td>1911</td>
<td>E.B.L. 162</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngcobo</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>A.D. 561</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngcobo</td>
<td>1928</td>
<td>A.D. 372</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngcobo v. Ngcobo</td>
<td>1929</td>
<td>A.D. 233</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngcobo</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>(2) P.H., H. 13 (R)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngema</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>(2) S.A. 263 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngidi</td>
<td>1932</td>
<td>E.B.L. 22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngidi</td>
<td>1959</td>
<td>(1) S.A. 411 (N)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngobese</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 96 (N)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngobese</td>
<td>1963</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 479 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngobo</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>(1) P.H., H. 49 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngombe</td>
<td>1964</td>
<td>S.A. 816 (S.R., A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngomta</td>
<td>1921</td>
<td>E.B.L. 109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nguhane</td>
<td>1934</td>
<td>A.D. 215</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nguhane</td>
<td>1961</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 377 (N)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nguthane</td>
<td>1952</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 608 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngwane</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>(2) P.H., H. 175</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngwanya</td>
<td>1962</td>
<td>(3) S.A. 690 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngxatvenga</td>
<td>1969</td>
<td>(5) S.A. 537 (R.A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngwemga</td>
<td>1955</td>
<td>(2) S.A. 182 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngwemga</td>
<td>1966</td>
<td>(1) S.A. 550 (N)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngxuru</td>
<td>1909</td>
<td>E.B.L. 235</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nklaasha</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>(3) S.A. 568 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nhleko</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 567 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nhleko</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>(4) S.A. 712 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nhlapo</td>
<td>1953</td>
<td>(1) P.H., H. 11 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nhlapo</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>(2) P.H., H. 229 (B)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nicholls v. Dowding</td>
<td>1815</td>
<td>1 Stark 61</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nicholls v. Nichols</td>
<td>1923</td>
<td>C.P.D. 401</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nicholls</td>
<td>1931</td>
<td>S.P.D. 577</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nigel Town Council v. Ah Yat</td>
<td>1990</td>
<td>(2) S.A. 182 (W)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngcina</td>
<td>1951</td>
<td>(2) S.A. 183 (C)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ngkanerjana</td>
<td>1921</td>
<td>E.B.L. 234</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nkone</td>
<td>1965</td>
<td>(1) S.A. 225 (S.R., A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nkone</td>
<td>1914</td>
<td>E.B.L. 241</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nkosí</td>
<td>1942</td>
<td>E.B.L. 76</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nkosí</td>
<td>1968</td>
<td>(2) P.H., H. 181 (N)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nkstilela</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>(3) S.A. 543 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nkstilela</td>
<td>(1922)</td>
<td>45 K.L.R. 77</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nkumalo</td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>(1) P.H., H. 254 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ncoanda</td>
<td>1944</td>
<td>E.B.L. 250</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Holan v. Barnard 1903 T.S. 142
Holan v. Fowlel 1953 (2) S.A. 202 (S.R.) 96, 97
Hontwna 1961 (4) S.A. 147 (E.) 45, 108
Noorbhai 1945 A.D. 58 52
Noor Mahomed [1949] A.C. 182 (P.C.) 1, 77, 78
Hopakova 1920 E.D.L. 66 76
Norcoott [1917] 1 K.B. 347 (C.C.A.) 191
Overman 1956 (3) S.A. 700 (F.C.) 57, 58
North Cheshire & Manchester Brewery Co.Ltd. v.
Manchester Brewery Co.Ltd. [1899] A.C. 83 (E.L.) 195
Worton [1910] 2 K.B. 496 (S.A.) 122, 123
Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society Ltd. v. Tutt 1962 (5)
S.A. 993 (A.D.) 182
Hoosworthy (1865) 4 Sw.& Tr. 45 106
November (1907) 24 S.C. 512 194
Nqantwini 1959 (1) P.H., H. 38 (A.D.) 192, 193
Nqantwini 1959 (1) S.A. 694 (A.D.) 194
Nqanwini 1960 (2) S.A. 178 (S.R.) 144
Nqybika 1950 (2) S.A. 365 (T) 23
Ncholeng 1952 (3) S.A. 396 (O) 143
Ntshangela 1961 (4) S.A. 592 (A.D.) 96, 197
Ntshini 1956 (3) S.A. 641 (E) 72
Ntuli 1957 (4) S.A. 42 (N) 114
Ntuli 1967 (4) S.A. 349 (E) 163
Nzimba v. Nzimba (1922) 45 S.L.R. 441 181
Nzisela 1966 (2) P.H., H. 289 (N) 131
Nzululo 1939 A.D. 1 29, 30
Nzululo 1939 A.D. 580 182
Nyasasoka 1948 (4) S.A. 427 (S.R.) 24
Nyangeni v. Minister of Bantu Education 1961 (1) S.A.
547 (E) 165
Nyati 1916 A.D. 317 175
Nyati 1961 (1) P.A., H. 88 (N) 124
Nydox v. Wangtas 1965 (1) S.A. 1 (A.D.) 178
Nyede 1951 (3) S.A. 151 (E) 50
Nyemeni 1969 (3) S.A. 361 (N) 187
Nyoko 1965 Pro. L.R. 214 (E.A.D.) 82
Nzimba 1959 (1) S.A. 20 (0) 184
Nzobi 1932 V.L.D. 98 101, 102
Nzobu 1963 (3) S.A. 633 (A.D.) 112, 116
O  1964 (4) S.A. 245 (S.E.)

Oberay 1946 E.D.L. 238
Oberholzer v. Eidelberg 1932 O.P.D. 120
Ocean Accident & Guarantee Corp. Ltd. v. Koch 1963 (4) S.A. 147 (A.D.)
Ochberg v. Ochberg's Estate 1941 C.P.D. 15
O'Connor v. Marjordanks (1842) 4 M & G 435
Oddy 20 L.J.E. 0
Odendaal v. Hanekom 1955 C.P.D. 92
Odendaal (1875) 5 Birch. 172
Odiijk 1965 (1) P.H., H. 73 (S.R.)
Oelope v. Grundling 1952 (1) S.A. 358 (G)
Ohlson's Cape Breweries v. Muller 1940 C.P.D. 371
Olia 1935 T.P.D. 213
Oliphant 1937 (2) P.H., H. 191 (T)
Olive [1965] 3 All E.R. 116 (C.C.A.) Oliver 1945 O.P.D. 10
Olivier 1945 O.P.D. 10
Omelund v. Barkar (1744) Wilkes 539
O'Neill (1950) 54 Cr.App.Rep. 105
Opperman v. Owens 1924 E.D.L. 94
Ozi 1963 (2) P.H., H. 165 (2)
O'Rourke v. Darbishire [1920] A.C. 561 (H.L.)
Osborne [1905] 1 K.B. 551
Otter 1947 (4) S.A. 573 (S.A.) O'Donovan 1946 C.P.D. 498
Osman 1944 C.W.L. 10
Ovelli [1969] 1 Q.B. 17 (C.A.)
Owen 1942 A.D. 389
Owen 1957 (2) S.A. 458 (A.D.)

P  1955 (2) S.A. 561 (A.D.)
P  1957 (3) S.A. 444 (A.D.)
P  1967 (2) S.A. 487 (R)
Pakken 1955 T.P.D. 1
Paklies 1956 (2) S.A. 145 (E)
Pali 1927 E.D.L. 69
Paluszak 1938 T.P.D. 427
Pandilew 1942 C.P.D. 145
Pasha v. Hughes (Pty.) Ltd. 1956 (2) S.A. 587 (W)
Payendick v. Bridgewar (1855) 5 M & G 166
Pennington v. Transvaal Board, peri-urban Areas 1969 (2) S.A. 66 (T)
Pienaar 1916 T.P.D. 288
Pierce 1956 (1) S.A. 183 (G)
Piercy 1912 T.P.D. 1140
Piet (1989) 5 E.C.G. 888
Pieterson's Executors v. Pieterse 1931 E.D.L. 214
Pieterse 1950 (4) S.A. 21 (0)
Pietersen 1944 C.P.D. 340
Pietersen 1947 (1) S.A. 56 (G.W.)
Philip v. Spencer's Motor Co.Ltd. 1931 W.L.D. 66
Pike (1829) 3 Can.& P. 598
Pillai 1953 (2) S.A. 173 (N)
Pillay v. Chief Constable (1923) 44 N.L.R. 123
Pillay 1942 N.P.D. 252
Pillay 1944 N.P.D. 314
Pillay & Co., ex parte Minister of Justice 1945
A.D. 653
Pillay v. Krishna 1946 A.D. 946
Pincus v. Solomon (1) 1942 W.L.D. 237
Pitcher v. Secretary for the Interior 1968 (4)
S.A. 238 (G)
Pitt 1912 E.D.L. 41
Plant v. Taylor (1961) 7 H.& N. 211
Platini Cafe (Pty.) Ltd. v. Vassamopoulos 1942
W.L.D. 169
Plumer (1814) Russ. & Ry. 264
Plumstead v. Bristoe (1847) 11 Q.B. 46
Podbry 1948 (2) S.A. 161 (G)
Podl. ex parte 1935 W.L.D. 14
Pogrund 1961 (3) S.A. 868 (T)
Policansky Bros.Ltd. v. Policansky 1935 A.D. 87
Polini v. Gray (1979) 3 Ch.D. 411
Poose v. Dickens (1935) 1 Bing. (N.C.) 649
Poonah (1915) 36 N.L.R. 479
Poswa v. Christie 1934 N.P.D. 178
Potgieter 1916 C.P.D. 211
Potgieter v. Minty & Sons 1929 T.P.D. 745
Potgieter v. Cape Dairy & General Auctioneers 1942
W.L.D. 130
Potgieter 1958 (2) P.H., E.322 (G)
Potololo 1940 O.P.D. 280
Potter v. South British Insurance Co.Ltd 1963 (3)
S.A.5 (W)
Pound (1882) 2 B.C. 2
Powell ex parte 1 Oh.D. 506
Povys 1945 N.P.D. 177
Preen v. Preen 1935 N.P.B. 138
Preen 1923 O.P.D. 310
Pretoria Timber Co. (Pty.) Ltd. 1949 (4) S.A. 368 (T)
Pretoria Timber Co. (Pty.) Ltd. 1950 (3) S.A. 163 (A.D.)
Pretoria Stadraad v. Administrateur 1962 (4) S.A. 467 (T) 160
Pretorius 1912 C.P.D. 928
Pretorius 1930 N.P.B. 352
Pretorius 1934 T.P.D. 76
Price v. Torrington (1705) 1 Dalb. 285
Prinsloo 1918 E.D. 284
Prometheus Printers & Publishers (Pty.) Ltd. 1960 (4) S.A. 857 (E)
Publications Control Board v. William Heinemann Ltd. 1965 (4) S.A. 137 (A.D.)

Qgolta 1957 (2) S.A. 191 (E)
Qolo 1965 (1) S.A. 174 (A.D.)
Qongwana 1959 (2) S.A. 227 (A.D.)
Quarts Hill & Co. in re 1882 21 O.D. 642 (C.A.)
Queen's Case 1829 2 B.& B. 284
Quirin and Bloom [1962] 2 Q.B. 245
Qwabe 1939 A.R. 255

R 1935 N.P.B. 582
R 1955 (4) S.A. 364 (T)
R 1961 (1) S.A. 29 (T)
R 1965 (2) S.A. 465 (T)
Radebe 1960 (4) S.A. 131 (E)
Radebe 1966 (2) P.E., H. 349 (A.D.)
Radebe 1968 (4) S.A. 410 (E)
Redemeyer v. Attorney-General 1955 (1) S.A. 144 (T)
Redov 1957 (4) S.A. 47 (N)
Redziv. (1902) 19 S.C. 195
Rehlis. 1916 37 B.L.R. 20
Railway Maintenance Dept. v. Hughes (1883) 3 E.D.C. 295
Rannie 1943 N.P.D. 160
Reinsford v. African Banking Corp. 1912 0.P.D. 729
Raisman & Pether 1947 (2) S.A. 881 (T)
Rajah 1955 (3) S.A. 256 (A.D.)
Raghooole 1947 (4) S.A. 536 (T)
Rama 1966 (2) S.A. 395 (A.D.)
Ramakok 1919 T.P.D. 305
Ramane 1965 (4) S.A. 472 (C)
Ramam 1952 (1) S.A. 397 (A.D.)
Ramesale 1931 O.P.O. 25
Ramol Einya 1946 W.L.D. 36
Ramesey 1954 (2) S.A. 491 (A.D.)
Ramesey v. Attorney-General 1937 W.L.D. 70
Rank v. Union Mercantile Co. Ltd. 1922 A.D. 312
Ramlee Bros. & Hudson Ltd. v. Estate Heron 1936
W.D. 193
Ranikalo 1954 (3) S.A. 255 (O)
Rathlano 1965 (3) S.A. 814 (O)
Rappolt (1911) 18 Cr.App.Rep. 156
Rascher v. Minister of Justice 1930 T.P.D. 810
Rasgol 1927 T.P.D. 73
Rasebol 1932 N.P.D. 112
Reiner 1910 T.P.D. 1310
Rattenbach 1949 (1) S.A. 135 (A.D.)
Razack 1917 C.P.D. 255
Beda [1922] All E.R. 355
Redelinghuys v. Geidal 1965 (4) S.A. 912 (W)
Regina 1958 (1) P.R., K. 152 (A.D.)
Renaud v. Chief Constable (1925) 44 K.L.R. 120
Rensburg v. Rayman (1892) 1 S.C. 356
Ressoto Dairy (Pty.) Ltd. v. Auto Protection Insurance Co.
Lind. 1962 (2) S.A. 406 (C)
Bief v. Du Plessis 'Estate 1929 A.P.D. 387
Reynolds [1950] 1 K.B. 606 (C.A.)
Rhodesian Corp. v. Globe & Phoenix G.M. Co.Ltd. 1934
A.D. 293
Rice [1963] 1 Q.B. 837 (C.A.)
Rich v. Pierpont (1852) 3 F. & F. 35
Richards 1965 (3) S.A. 471 (F.C.)
Richardson v. Mallish (1824) 2 Bing. 229
Richardson (1823) 3 F. & F. 693
Richardson [1966] 3 W.L.R. 15 (C.A.)
Richardson in re, ex parte Attorney-General 1931 O.F.D. 44
Riley [1887] 19 Q.B.D. 461
Ripley in re (1858) 1 Sw. & Tr. 68
Richston v. Nesbitt (1844) 2 Hill Rob. 554
Richston v. Risston 1912 T.P.D. 718
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Reference</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Page(s)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Roberts</td>
<td>1916</td>
<td>495</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Roberts</td>
<td>1932</td>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Roberts [1936]</td>
<td></td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Roberts [1942]</td>
<td></td>
<td>187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Robinson v. Benson</td>
<td>1918</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Robinson v. Randfontein Estates Gold Mining Co. Ltd.</td>
<td>1918</td>
<td>420</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>37</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Roche</td>
<td>1947</td>
<td>67 (D)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Roots</td>
<td>1954</td>
<td>512 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rogers v. General Imports (Pty.) Ltd.</td>
<td>1948 (1)</td>
<td>1216 (3)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rogers v. Wood</td>
<td>1831</td>
<td>245</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rolston</td>
<td>1907</td>
<td>661</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Roos</td>
<td>1912</td>
<td>605</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hooi</td>
<td>1946</td>
<td>83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hazeney</td>
<td>1931</td>
<td>139</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Roopasirh</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>509 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Roos</td>
<td>1917</td>
<td>617</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Roos</td>
<td>1936</td>
<td>259</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rose</td>
<td>1915</td>
<td>145</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rose (1906)</td>
<td></td>
<td>359</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ross</td>
<td>1937</td>
<td>467</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bosun</td>
<td>1915</td>
<td>239</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ross</td>
<td>1927</td>
<td>378</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bouson</td>
<td>1948</td>
<td>69 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reur v. Redhouse</td>
<td>1908</td>
<td>98</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reur</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>259 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reur v. Assistant Magistrate, Pretoria</td>
<td>1925</td>
<td>361</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Howton</td>
<td>1865</td>
<td>520</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bowland [1910]</td>
<td></td>
<td>459 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Royal Hotel v. Liquor Licensing Board</td>
<td>1966 (2)</td>
<td>39</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>661 (D)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ramping v. D.P.P.</td>
<td>[1962]</td>
<td>256 (H.L.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ramsey v. Union Govt.</td>
<td>1912</td>
<td>1012</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ruskin J.O., v. Thiergen</td>
<td>1962 (3)</td>
<td>737 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Patland v. Engelbrecht</td>
<td>1956 (2)</td>
<td>579 (4)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Auto Flour Ellis Ltd. v. Adelson</td>
<td>1958 (4)</td>
<td>235 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Auto Flour Ellis (Pty.) Ltd. v. Adelson</td>
<td>1958 (4)</td>
<td>311 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ryzen</td>
<td>1933</td>
<td>166</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
S 1948 (4) S.A. 419 (G.V.) 57, 198
S 1950 (3) S.A. 712 (G) 59
S 1954 (3) S.A. 523 (A.D.) 58, 76
S.A. Associated Newspapers Ltd. v. Yutar 1967 (3)
S.A. 445 (A.D.)
S.A. Breweries Ltd. v. Murial (1905) 26 N.L.R. 362 72
S.A. Defence & Aid Fund v. Minister of Justice 1967 (1)
S.A. 31 (C)
Sancho (1905) 2 Buch.App.Cas. 347 166
Sasco 1958 (2) S.A. 349 (W) 192
Sarah 1931 T.F.D. 188 282
Saffy 1944 A.D. 391 61, 63
Sagye 1932 N.P.D. 236 79
Seheb 1960 (1) P.E., E. 119 (E) 19
Salaman (1949) 86 S.A.L.J. 133 146
Salepi 1919 T.F.D. 110 51
Salzmann v. Holness 1914 A.D. 471 36
Sando 1965 (1) S.A. 640 (S.R., A.D.) 65, 184
Sahands 1943 A.D. 606 116, 134
Samuels 1950 C.P.D. 67 132, 143
Sandig 1957 A.D. 296 82, 84, 72
Sandos 1952 A.D. 315 265
'Sapporo Mura' v. 'Statue of Liberty' [1969]
1 W.L.R. 739 175
Sqwasha 1930 A.D. 437 41, 42
Sax 1918 C.P.D. 346 50, 51
Saterdien 1963 (2) S.A. 425 (G) 26
Sevan v. A.A. Mutual Insurance Co.Ltd. 1952 (1)
S.A. 110 (C) 125
Saydies v. Tzavropoulou 1942 W.L.D. 401 160
Schadewijk 1938 A.D. 543 359, 160
Schaepiro v. Schapero 1904 T.S. 673 164
Schmidt v. Kufier 1969 (1) P.E., E. 54 (A.D.) 16
Schierbout v. Union Govt. 1927 A.D. 94 118, 133
Schlechtin v. Schlechtin (1875) 5 Buch. 24 60
Schollow 1965 (2) P.E., E. 150 (T) 192
Schlesinger v. C.I.R. 1964 (3) S.A. 389 (A.D.) 19
Schmidt in re, Ex pars Commissioner of Child Welfare 1956 (4) S.A. 787 (T) 15
Schmitt 1965 (1) S.A. 666 (G) 203
Schneider v. Jaffe 1916 C.P.D. 596 132
Schneider v. Cloughly 1917 T.F.D. 512 16
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Source</th>
<th>Page(s)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Shoeman</td>
<td>1959</td>
<td>P.H., H. 94</td>
<td>13, 14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shoeman</td>
<td>1959</td>
<td>P.H., H. 314</td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scholz</td>
<td>1983</td>
<td>S.C. 267</td>
<td>30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Schmidt in re, Ex parte Commissioner of Child Welfare</td>
<td>1956</td>
<td>S.A. 787</td>
<td>43</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Schumacher</td>
<td>1986</td>
<td>3 Off.Rep. 11</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Schwalbe'</td>
<td>1859</td>
<td>Swab. 461</td>
<td>53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scole</td>
<td>1958</td>
<td>S.A. 667</td>
<td>36, 37</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scott</td>
<td>1959</td>
<td>S.A. 786</td>
<td>120</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Screach</td>
<td>1967</td>
<td>S.A. 407</td>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Serogwe</td>
<td>1914</td>
<td>T.P.D. 128</td>
<td>38</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seabrook v. B.T.C. [1959]</td>
<td></td>
<td>2 All E.R. 15</td>
<td>161</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seaman v. Netherlifit</td>
<td>1876</td>
<td>2 Com.H.Div. 53 (C.A.)</td>
<td>63</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seaville v. Colley</td>
<td>1891</td>
<td>S.C. 39</td>
<td>13, 148</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seaward</td>
<td>1950</td>
<td>S.A. 704</td>
<td>144</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sebastian v. Gonsalves</td>
<td>1939</td>
<td>T.P.D. 172</td>
<td>168, 169</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sebeso</td>
<td>1943</td>
<td>A.D. 196</td>
<td>77</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seboko v. Soil</td>
<td>1949</td>
<td>S.A. 537</td>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Secretary of State for India [1941]</td>
<td></td>
<td>2 F.B. 169</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sedi</td>
<td>1950</td>
<td>S.A. 695</td>
<td>34, 27, 35</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seber</td>
<td>1948</td>
<td>S.A. 1036</td>
<td>164</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seeset</td>
<td>1942</td>
<td>P.D. 189</td>
<td>160</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seetharan</td>
<td>1957</td>
<td>P.H., H. 199</td>
<td>184</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Safanyane</td>
<td>1955</td>
<td>P.H., H. 223</td>
<td>169</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Segal</td>
<td>1949</td>
<td>S.A. 67</td>
<td>112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Segale</td>
<td>1947</td>
<td>S.A. 641</td>
<td>165</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sekute</td>
<td>1953</td>
<td>S.A. 120</td>
<td>71, 76</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Selonana</td>
<td>1957</td>
<td>S.A. 384</td>
<td>134, 138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Selepe</td>
<td>1919</td>
<td>T.P.D. 105</td>
<td>133</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seligman</td>
<td>1908</td>
<td>T.S. 390</td>
<td>202</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Senela</td>
<td>1962</td>
<td>S.A. 706</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sear</td>
<td>1958</td>
<td>P.H., H. 355</td>
<td>133</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sequeira</td>
<td>1945</td>
<td>A.D. 1077</td>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sebobe</td>
<td>1968</td>
<td>S.A. 420</td>
<td>112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bethodi</td>
<td>1962</td>
<td>P.H., H. 55</td>
<td>112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sethren</td>
<td>1915</td>
<td>T.P.D. 257</td>
<td>132</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sewpani</td>
<td>1949</td>
<td>S.A. 978</td>
<td>43</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shebusowitz</td>
<td>1915</td>
<td>T.P.D. 439</td>
<td>126</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shapiro v. S.A. Savings &amp; Credit Bank</td>
<td>1949</td>
<td>S.A. 985</td>
<td>50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sherif v. Aazad [1966]</td>
<td></td>
<td>3 All E.R. 785</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Case Title</td>
<td>Year</td>
<td>Volume/Section</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
<td>----------------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shedden v. Patrick (1860)</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>Sw. &amp; Tr.</td>
<td>170</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shekelele 1953 (1)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>636</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shenton v. Tyler [1939]</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>All E.R.</td>
<td>827</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shepard v. U.S. (1933)</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>550</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shepard 1966 (4)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shepard 1967 (4)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>E.D.L.</td>
<td>70</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>She 1925</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>P.H.</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>She 1932</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>P.H.</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sherrin 1913</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>474</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sherwin-Wildor 1916</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>617</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shields v. Boucher (1846)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>De G. &amp; Sm.</td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sheil v. Milner 1937</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>101</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shoko 1966 (1)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>59</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shrewsbury Peerage (1898)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>H.L.C.</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shinda 1964 (4)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>252</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shinda 1969 (2)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>345</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shibi v. Brouns (1913)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>K.L.E.</td>
<td>511</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sidayi 1957 (2)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>P.H., E.</td>
<td>262</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sideropoulos 1910</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sidmouth (1840)</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>Beav.</td>
<td>147</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sigwaha 1967 (4)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>566</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shili 1966 (3)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>148</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sikakana 1940</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>A.P.</td>
<td>555</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sikosana 1960 (4)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>723</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sikurilite 1963 (E)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>58</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Silangwe 1965 (2)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>P.H., H.</td>
<td>271</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Silber 1940</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>A.D.</td>
<td>187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Silver v. Silver 1937</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>P.H.</td>
<td>129</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Silverlock [1894]</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>Q.B.</td>
<td>766</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simelane 1941</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>N.P.D.</td>
<td>515</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simelane 1958 (2)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>302</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simmons v. Gilbert Hamer &amp; Co. Ltd. 1962 (2)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>487</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simon 1925</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>297</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simon 1929</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>T.P.D.</td>
<td>338</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simon v. Simon [1936]</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>P.17</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simons (1834)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>540</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simpson 1942</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>E.D.L.</td>
<td>79</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simo [1946]</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>E.R.</td>
<td>531</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Singh 1916</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>C.P.D.</td>
<td>541</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Singh 1948 (3)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>669</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sinkankana 1963 (2)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>551</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sivane 1968 (4)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>251</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sitole 1968 (2)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>P.H., H.</td>
<td>387</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sithole 1962 (4)</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>60</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Case Title</td>
<td>Year, Source</td>
<td>Notes</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----------------------------------</td>
<td>--------------</td>
<td>-------</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sitole</td>
<td>1927, N.L.R. 85</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sitole</td>
<td>1945, E.P.D. 198</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sitole</td>
<td>1946, P.H. H. 59 (T)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sitoo (1904)</td>
<td>25 N.L.R. 330</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sitweyi (1961)</td>
<td>S.R. 536 (2)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simi (1951)</td>
<td>S.A. 703 (0)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Skef (1958)</td>
<td>P.E. E. 347 (0)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Slabbert and Prinsloo (1944)</td>
<td>T.P.D. 328</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Slabbert and Prinsloo (1945)</td>
<td>A.B. 137</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Slade (1928)</td>
<td>T.P.D. 220</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Slatterie v. Pooley (1940)</td>
<td>6 E.A. W. 666</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sliew v. Couzyn (1927)</td>
<td>P.F.J. 438</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smale (1949)</td>
<td>S.A. 1210 (N)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Small (1954)</td>
<td>S.A. 454 (S.A.)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Small (1968)</td>
<td>S.A. 561 (R.A.Li.)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smith (1887)</td>
<td>4 H.C.G. 431</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smith (1902)</td>
<td>9 H.C.G. 269</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smith (1932)</td>
<td>C.P.D. 150</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smith (1949)</td>
<td>S.A. 782 (3)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smith v. Strydom (1953)</td>
<td>S.A. 799 (2)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smith (1959)</td>
<td>2 All E.R. 193</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smith (1961)</td>
<td>3 All E.R. 972</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smith (1969)</td>
<td>S.A. 143 (3)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Snyman v. Popees (Pty.) Ltd. (1938)</td>
<td>C.P.D. 572</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Snyman (1968)</td>
<td>S.A. 582 (A.B.)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Snyman (1968)</td>
<td>P.H. H. 169 (A.B.)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Soboteshe v. Bosse (1918)</td>
<td>N.L.R. 143</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sogokomarine (1956)</td>
<td>S.A. 142 (E)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Solomons (1939)</td>
<td>E.P.D. 71</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Somara (1965)</td>
<td>3 All E.R. 808 (C.A.)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sonner (1954)</td>
<td>S.A. 641 (6)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sonklaan (1900)</td>
<td>E.D.G. 394</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Southey v. Pretoria (1906)</td>
<td>S.A. 973 (N)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Southey v. Hoonah (1937)</td>
<td>E.P.D. 312</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Souyer v. Wetney (1954)</td>
<td>C.P.D. 203</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Southall (1921)</td>
<td>S.P.D. 403</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Speakes (1964)</td>
<td>A.G. 964 (P.C.)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spence (1964)</td>
<td>N.P.D. 696</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spence (1966)</td>
<td>W.E. W. 102</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spillo (1944)</td>
<td>T.P.D. 55</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Spilsbury (1835) 7 Car.2.P. 187
'S.S.Hillmore' v. Beckett (1902) 23 S.C. 450
'S.S.Minton' in re 1958 C.P.D. 257
Stalander 1949 (3) S.A. 951 (T)
Standard Bank v. Minister of Bantu Education 1966 (1) S.A. 229 (W)
Stapylton v. Clough (1853) 1 E. & B. 933
Steenkamp (1881) 1 S.D.R. 256
Steenkamp v. Street 1923 T.P.D. 208
Steenkamp 1947 (1) S.A. 714 (S.W.A.) Stun 1908 T.S. 616
Stephen 1962 (3) S.A. 727 (S.R.)
Stevens (1869) 16 S.C. 280
Stevens 1951 (3) S.A. 516 (0)
Stevenson 1934 E.L.I. 45
Steyn 1954 (1) S.A. 324 (A.D.)
Steyn 1965 (1) S.A. 797 (W)
Still v. Norton (1841) 3 Hons. 390
St.Maurice (1951) 16 S.B. 906
Stobart v. Dryden (1836) 1 E.& W. 615
Stoffels 1948 (2) S.A. 809 (G)
Stollery in re [1926] Ch.234 (O.A.)
Storey 1925 W.D.J. 38
Storey (1968) 0rim.L.R. 387 (O.A.) Storr 1935 E.D.L. 14
Strong 1922 C.P.D. 469
Strode 1927 T.P.D. 281
Stydom (1860) 1 S.C. 60
Stydom v. Griffin Engineering Co. 1927 O.P.D. 47
Stydom 1946 E.D.L. 382
Stuart v. Grant (1905) 24 N.R. 416
Sturle v. Preece (1890) 5 App. Cas. 623 (H.L.)
Stuttford & Co.Ltd. v. Parker 1921 C.P.D. 581
Stuzin 1938 O.P.D. 112
Subramian v. Public Prosecutor [1956] 1 W.L.R. 965(PG)
Sudani (1925) 44 N.L.R. 38
Sudde v. Lord St.Leonards [1876] L.R. 1 P.D.154(GA)
Suleman (1923) 44 N.L.R. 223
Sulzen 1923 A.J. 659
Sungur 1964 (3) S.A. 761 (S.R., A.D.)
| Sunnyheek Private Residential Hotel v. Shields | 1953 (1) S.A. 439 (T) |
| Supra 1958 (1) S.A. 474 (T) |
| Surgeon [1940] 2 All B.R. 249 (C.A.) |
| Sumon v. Sumon 1925 A.D. 47 |
| Sumon 1927 E.P.L. 224 |
| Supace 1968 (1) P.E., H. 30 (O) |
| Sussex Peerage (1844) 11 G.L. & Fin. 64 (H.L.) |
| Tusman 1959 O.P.D. 68 |
| Suttor v. Brown 1926 A.D. 155 |
| Swan 1946 N.P.D. 98 |
| Swart 1937 T.P.D. 158 |
| Swart 1965 (3) S.A. 454 (A.D.) |
| Swartz 1914 T.P.D. 626 |
| Swartz 1954 (2) F.H., H. 107 (O) |
| Swartz 1946 C.W.L. 57 |
| Swartz 1966 (2) S.A. 333 (O) |

| T 1937 T.P.D. 385 |
| T 1958 (2) S.A. 676 (A.D.) |
| T 1955 (1) S.A. 484 (A.D.) |
| Tager 1944 A.D. 359 |
| Taljaard 1950 N.I.D. 194 |
| Tamehwar [1977] A.C. 476 |
| Tandunzi 1915 A.D.L. 6 |
| Tangi 1931 (2) S.A. 648 (C) |
| Tanayena 1961 (2) P.H., H. 260 (S.R.) |
| Tepeta 1964 (3) S.A. 771 (S.R., A.D.) |
| Tepeta 1965 (2) S.A. 751 (S.R., A.D.) |
| Tzuma 1974 E.D.L. 22 |
| Taylor v. Barclay (1828) 2 Sim. 213 |
| Taylor v. Witham (1876) 3 Ch.D. 505 |
| Taylor v. Dudd 1932 A.D. 326 |
| Taylor 1961 (3) S.A. 616 (D) |
| Tebthe 1959 (2) S.A. 357 (D) |
| Teke 1960 (1) P.H., H. 171 (B) |
| Tengani 1967 (1) P.H., H. 193 (O) |
| Tepet [1952] A.D. 480 |
| Tener 1962 (2) P.H., H. 256 (A.D.) |
| Thietke 1918 A.D. 373 |
| Thomas v. David (1836) 6 &amp; 8. 350 |
| Thomas v. Jenkins (1837) 6 Ad. &amp; H. 525 |
| Thomas 1926 E.I.L. 402 |
| Thono 1969 (1) S.A. 385 (A.D.) |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case Title</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Citation</th>
<th>Notes</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Thompson v. Trevanian (1695)</td>
<td></td>
<td>Skirmer 402</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thompson v. Thompson (1917)</td>
<td></td>
<td>E.D.L. 179</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thompson v. Thompson (1918)</td>
<td></td>
<td>A.C. 221</td>
<td>(K.B.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thompson v. Trevanian (1695)</td>
<td></td>
<td>E.D.L. 179</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thorn v. Worthing Skating Rink Company (1876)</td>
<td></td>
<td>L.R. 6 Ch.D.45</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thorne v. Jackson (1846)</td>
<td></td>
<td>3 O.B. 661</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Trubel v. Pretorius (1961)</td>
<td></td>
<td>S.A. 506 (T)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thulo 1958 (1)</td>
<td></td>
<td>F.R., H. 90</td>
<td>(A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thurstn v. 1966 (3)</td>
<td></td>
<td>S.A. 284</td>
<td>(A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tickle v. Tickle (1968)</td>
<td></td>
<td>1 W.L.R. 937</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tidk 1919 E.D.L. 19</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tiny Tim 1914 T.P.D. 509</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tides (1907)</td>
<td></td>
<td>24 S.C. 437</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tidale 1924 T.P.D. 545</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tom 1914 T.P.D. 317</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tension's Track &amp; Car Co. Ltd. v. Odendaal 1956</td>
<td></td>
<td>S.A. 794 (0)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tonjani 1931 C.P.D. 346</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tooch v. Greenaway 1922 C.P.D. 331</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Toohey v. Metropolitan Police Commissioner 1965</td>
<td></td>
<td>A.C. 595</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Torcher v. McGregor (1844)</td>
<td></td>
<td>1 C.C. &amp; E. 320</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Topea (1868)</td>
<td></td>
<td>5 Cape L.J. 110</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Touwa v. Toowei 1966 (1)</td>
<td></td>
<td>S.A. 423 (T)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tracy Payaga (1845)</td>
<td></td>
<td>10 T.L.A. P. 154</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Transkei Territories General Council v. Ngubuza</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1928 E.D.L. 256</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tranter v. Attorney-General 1907 T.S. 415</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Treacy (1944)</td>
<td></td>
<td>2 All B.A. 223</td>
<td>(S.C.A.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Treasury v. Heph 1919 A.D. 50</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Trizzie v. Godard 1937 A.D. 1</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>4, 179, 179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Trelawney v. Coleman (1827)</td>
<td></td>
<td>1 Bing. 376</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Trosse 1920 A.D. 466</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tuffy v. 1947 (1)</td>
<td></td>
<td>S.A. 612 (S.S.A.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Twitt (1975)</td>
<td></td>
<td>Crim.L.R. 643</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Traysa 1930 A.D. 58</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Truber (1891)</td>
<td></td>
<td>6 H.C.S. 94</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tsetane 1966 (1) T.P.D., H. 21 (B.R.)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tshabalala 1942 T.P.D. 27</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tshimbhandi 1960 (4)</td>
<td></td>
<td>S.A. 589</td>
<td>(A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sibakwe 1924 O.P.D. 97</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tucker v. Oldbury U.D.C. 1912</td>
<td></td>
<td>2 K.B. 317</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tucker 1943 A.D. 790</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Tuge 1964 (4) S.A. 565 (J.D.)
Tunishole Bereng 1949 A.C. 233 (P.O.)
Turner in re 1885 L.R. 29 Ch.L. 985
Turner 1910 J.B. 346 (G.A.)
Turner v. Underwood 1948 2 K.B. 204
Tuini 1953 (4) S.A. 406 (A.D.)
Tuini 1957 (4) S.A. 553 (G.A.) Twelstunga 1903 20 S.C. 425
Tweedie 1930 R.D.L. 113
Twetison 1964 (2) P.R. R. 144 (S.R.)

Udal v. Witfontein Fruit Farms Ltd. 1922 A.D. 127
Udhlalo (1904) 25 H.L.R. 264

Umgakwe 1885 5 B.D.L. 84

Umtigala 1940 B.D.L. 107
Union Govt. v. Lubbe 1927 S.P.D. 455
Union Govt. v. Shni 1955 (1) S.A. 298 (G.)
Union Govt. v. Sykes 1913 A.D. 105

United States Shipping Board v. 'St. Albans' [1931]
A.C. 632 (P.C.)

United Tobacco Co. (South) Ltd. v. International Tobacco Co. of S.A. Ltd. 1953 (1) S.A. 66 (T)

Upington v. Saul, Solomon & Co. (1979) 9 South. 240

Uranyi 1949 (4) S.A. 217 (B.R.)

Uys & Uys 1940 T.P.D. 405

v 1958 (3) S.A. 474 (G.N.)
v 1961 (4) S.A. 264 (D.)
v 1962 (3) S.A. 365 (D.)

Vahed 1945 N.P.D. 237
Vahed 19245 A.D. 826

Vallab 1942 C.P.D. 95

Valkin v. Baggafontein Mines Ltd. 1960 (3) S.A. 507 (G.)

Van Ha 1941 A.D. 361
Van Aswegen v. De Oliphant 1960 (4) S.A. 875 (A.D.)
Van Blerk 1919 C.P.D. 66
Van Boom 1934 N.P.D. 368

Van Colier 1953 (4) S.A. 116 (G.)

Van Heerden 1964 (5) S.A. 239 (G.)

Van der Horst v. Colonial Govt. [1903] 20 S.C. 578

Van der Linde 1953 (4) S.A. 507 (G.)
Van der Linde v. Colitz 1967 (2) S.A. 239 (A.D.)

Van der Merwe (1902) 19 S.C. 437
Van der Merwe v. Hoffman 1925 C.P.D. 295
Van der Merwe 1950 (4) S.A. 17 (O)
Van der Poel 1941 T.P.D. 319
Van der Spuy ex parte 1965 (4) S.A. 336 (T)
Van der Westhuizen 1932 C.P.D. 171
Van der Walt 1958 (2) P.E., H. 162 (A.D.)
Van der Westhuizen 1908 B.D. 468
Van der Westhuizen 1929 C.P.D. 484
Van der Westhuizen 1933 N.P.D. 459
Van der Westhuizen v. Claynhaus 1969 (3)
    S.A. 174 (0)
Van deventer v. Hanoko and Mosama 1903 T.S. 401
Van Dyk 1949 (3) S.A. 118 (I)
Van Eezen v. Naude 1966 (1) P.E., J. 12 (0)
Van Hekeden v. S.A. Pulp and Paper Industries Ltd.
    1954 (2) P.H., J. 14 (W)
Van Heerdien 1950 (2) S.A. 405 (T)
Van Jeansveld 1958 (1) P.H., H. 25 (0)
Van Lill 1969 (2) P.E., H. 219 (T)
Van Lingen v. Marnewick 1921 B.D. 330
Van Luttieveld v. Engels 1959 (2) S.A. 699 (A.D.)
Van Niekerk v. Ncgen (1897) 14 S.C. 50
Van Niekerk 1964 (1) S.A. 729 (C)
Van Reenen v. Union Govt. 1931 C.P.D. 34
Van Rensburg 1949 (2) S.A. 276 (2)
Van Rensburg 1958 (2) S.A. 522 (T)
Van Rooyen 1950 (3) S.A. 70 (A.D.)
Van Rooyen 1953 (3) S.A. 293 (A.D.)
Van Rooyen v. Humphrey 1957 (3) S.A. 392 (A.D.)
Van Schalkwyk 1938 A.D. 543
    4, 167, 168
Van Schalkwyk 1948 (2) S.A. 1000 (0)
Van Tonder 1929 T.P.D. 355
Van Tonder 1952 T.P.D. 90
Van Tonder 1967 (2) P.E., H. 352 (G.S.)
Van Veren, 1918 T.P.D. 218
Van Vreden v. Bourhill 1913 T.P.D. 67
Van Vreden 1969 (2) S.A. 361 (W)
Van Vuurten v. Van Vuurten 1931 G.W.L. 42
Van Wyhe (1925) 46 N.L.R. 273
Van Wyk v. Lewis 1924 A.D. 438
Van Wyk v. Attorney-General 1932 T.P.D. 359
Van Wyk 1950 (3) S.A. 712 (0)
Van Wyngaardt 1965 (1) P.H., H. 64 (0)
Van Zyl v. S.A.N.T.A.N. Bpk. 1948 (2) S.A. 615
Van Zyl 1964 (2) S.A. 113 (A.D.)
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case Name</th>
<th>Volume</th>
<th>Page Numbers</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Venchila v. Vantha 1947 (4)</td>
<td>S.A.</td>
<td>267 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vetha v. 1961 (1)</td>
<td>P.H., H.</td>
<td>(A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VCC 1950 (1)</td>
<td>P.H., H.</td>
<td>167 (T)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vende 1929 T.P.D.</td>
<td>447</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Veltge v. Williams 1929 B.D.L.</td>
<td>501</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Veil 1929 (1)</td>
<td>P.H., H.</td>
<td>49 (A.D.)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Venter v. Mahoo 1963 (3)</td>
<td>S.A. 225 (D)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Venter v. Venter 1932 H.P.D.</td>
<td>89</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vere-Wardale [1949]</td>
<td>P.395</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vermaak v. Parity Insurance Co.Ltd. 1966 (2)</td>
<td>S.A. 312 (W)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Verolla [1963] 2 Q.S. 285</td>
<td>32</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Versi 1963 (1)</td>
<td>C. A. 9 (D)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vivianini Ferro-Concrete Pipes (Pty.) Ltd. v.</td>
<td>Union Gov.</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vernon 1947</td>
<td>S.A. 26 (C)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vilagozi 1929</td>
<td>T.P.D. 295</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Viljoe 1957 (3)</td>
<td>S.A. 223 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Viljoen 1941</td>
<td>A.D.366</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Viljoen 1946 (2)</td>
<td>P.H., H. 268 (C)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Viljoen 1947 (2)</td>
<td>S.A. 56 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Viiiers 1939</td>
<td>T.P.D. 402</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vlok 1951 (1)</td>
<td>S.A. 26 (C)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vlok 1954 (1)</td>
<td>S.A. 203 (S.W.A.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Voisin 1918</td>
<td>1 K.B. 531 (C.O.A.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Volk 1967 (1)</td>
<td>P.H., H. 83 (N)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Volks 1936 (1)</td>
<td>P.H., H. 29 (C)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Von Kleist 1923 T.P.D.</td>
<td>52</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vonsteen 1939 T.P.D.</td>
<td>107</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vorster 1940 O.P.D.</td>
<td>168</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vosloo 1941 E.D.L.</td>
<td>58</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vulcan Rubber Works (Pty.) Ltd. v. S.A.R.H. 1958 (3)</td>
<td>S.A. 236 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wamba 1964 (1) S.A. 642 (B)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>W 1947 (2)</td>
<td>S.A. 703 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>W 1949 (3)</td>
<td>S.A. 772 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>W 1960 (3)</td>
<td>S.A. 247 (B)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>W 1963 (3)</td>
<td>S.A. 120 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>W 1963 (3)</td>
<td>S.A. 516 (A.D.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Waddeil v. Eykes N.O. 1959 T.P.D. 198
Wagner in re, Ex parte Minister of Justice 1965 (4)
S.A. 507 (A.O.)

Weinwright (1875) 13 Cox 0.C.171
Wakelvord v. Wakeford's Estate 1952 E.D.L. 246
Wald 1952 C.P.D. 14
Waldman 1952 Cr.App. Rep. 204
Walker 1953 E.D.L. 275
Wapad 1952 C.W.L. 56
Ward v. Steenberg 1951 (1) S.A. 395 (T)
Warren v. Warren 1909 T.B. 304
Warrington v. Warrington 1966 W.I.D. 24
Warwickshire (1783) Leach 263
Waterhouse v. Shielde 1924 C.P.D. 155
Watersmeet (Pty.) Ltd. v. De Kock 1960 (4) S.A. 734(B) 7
Watson (1817) 32 How. St.T. 100
Watson (1893) 2 E.D.C. 23
Wattam (1952) 16 Cr.App. Rep. 72
Watson (1919) 40 N.W.R. 108
Waugh (1950) A.O. 205 (F.C.)
Webb (1954) 1 All E.R. 91
Weber 1965 (1) P.H., H.1 (T)
Weinberg 1916 T.P.D. 653
Weinberg 1939 A.D. 71
Weinberg 1966 (4) S.A. 661 (A.D.)
Weiner's Estate v. Weisholtz 1939 A.D. 95
Weintraub v. Oxford Brick Works (Pty.) Ltd. 1948 (1)
S.A. 1090 (T)
Weienli v. Winter & Co. 1940 E.D.L. 159
Wells 1918 T.J. 254
Wepener 1950 (1) P.H., H. 73 (G.W.)
Wessels 1966 (4) S.A. 69 (G)
Westberry (1932) 175 C.A. 115
Westermeyer (1911) 32 N.W.R. 197
Weston-super-Mare Justices [1958] 3 All E.R. 225
Wheeler v. Le Marchant (1881) 7 Ed.3 675 (O.A.)
Wheeler [1917] 1 K.B. 263 (O.C.A.)
Whitaker [1914] 3 K.B. 1263 (O.C.A.)
White 1944 N.P.D. 189
White 1962 (4) S.A. 153 (F.C.)
Whitelocks v. Baker (1807) 73 V.S.Jun. 510
Whyman v. Garth (1853) 8 Ex. 804
Wildebeest v. Taldenhuys 1911 T.P.D. 1050
Wilding v. Sanderseon (1897) 76 L.R. 346
Wildman 1968 (2) P.H., R. 356 (A.D.)
Wilhelm v. Barkly East D.C. 1914 E.D.C. 519
Wilkins 1962 (2) P.H., E. 203 (2)
Wilkins 1962 (4) S.A. 382 (2)
Wilkinson v. Clark [1916] 2 K.B. 536
Wilkinson v. Estate Steyn 1947 (2) S.A. 740 (6)
Wills 1908 T.S. 537
William 1963 (1) S.A. 431 (8)
Williams v. Shaw (1884) 4 E.D.C. 105
Williams 1907 E.D.C. 38
Williams 1927 C.P.D. 321
Williams 1931 E.D.L. 205
Williams T.O. T. Bury Star Insurance Co., Ltd. 1961 (2)
S.A. 531 (O.A.)
Williams 1965 (2) S.A. 567 (6)
Willis [1960] 1 All E.R. 351 (O.A.)
Wilson (1913) 9 Cr.App.Rep. 1241
Wilson (1967) 2 Q.B. 406 (C.A.)
Winteyoal 1949 (1) S.A. 442 (9)
Wintfield [1939] 4 All K.B. 164 (C.A.)
Wintfield 1958 (3) S.A. 45 (S.R.)
Wintshaw 1929 C.P.D. 494
Witser (1866) 14 L.T. 567
Wishart v. Horth 1932 W.P.D. 530
Withoold 1960 (1) P.H., E. 100 (2)
Withnell v. Gartham (1795) 1 Esp. 322
Wittsek v. Wittsek v. 1948 (1) S.A. 826 (7)
Wita v. Additional Magistrates 1931 W.I.D. 180
Wlperst ex parte 1917 W.I.D. 96
Wood v. Dersley (1882) 2 E.D.C. 200
Wood v. Van Reesburg 1921 E.P.D. 38
Wood 1933 E.D.L. 15
Wood 1936 (4) S.A. 188 (H.A.D.)
Woodcock 1 Lossel C.C. 500
Woodward v. Houlstone (1866) 11 App.Cas. 469 (H.L.)
Woodridge 1957 (1) S.A. 5 (S.R.)
Worcester Municipalities v. Colonial Govt. (1909)
S.A. 56
Worth (1843) 4 Q.B.D. 132
Wortham 1940 N.P.D. 540
Wright d. Iyman v. Idtiller (1761) 5 Burr. 1244
Wright v. Doe d. Tatham (1837) 7 Ad. & E. 311
Wright (1866) P.P.T. 967
Wright's Executors v. Iyman 1908 E.D.J. 68
Wynne 1966 (2) S.A. 372 (6)
S.A. 144

24
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Y</th>
<th>1959 (2) S.A. 116 (W)</th>
<th>201</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Yassen v. Yassen</td>
<td>1965 (1) S.A. 438 (N)</td>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Yezini</td>
<td>1964 (1) P.R., B. 9 (E)</td>
<td>191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Yeo [1951]</td>
<td>1 All E.R. 264</td>
<td>32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Yibe</td>
<td>1964 (3) S.A. 502 (E)</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Yolelo</td>
<td>1958 (3) B.L.R. 136</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Yorkshire Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Standard Bank</td>
<td>1928</td>
<td>112, 113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>W.L.D. 223</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Young</td>
<td>1936 T.P.R. 263</td>
<td>33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Young</td>
<td>1949 (2) S.A. 1169 (B)</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tousry (1914)</td>
<td>11 Cr.App.Rep. 15</td>
<td>65, 66</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Z</th>
<th>1959 (2) P.R., E. 226 (S.B.)</th>
<th>57</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Zafirou</td>
<td>1943 W.P.D. 135</td>
<td>116</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zakayu</td>
<td>1957 (3) S.A. 198 (P.C.)</td>
<td>63</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zand</td>
<td>1957 S.P.D. 263</td>
<td>193</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zanug v. Barvathie N.C.</td>
<td>1962 (3) S.A. 672 (D)</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zawala</td>
<td>1957 A.B. 342</td>
<td>26, 76, 132, 153</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zeeland</td>
<td>1890, 8 Cape L.J. 235</td>
<td>21</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zeckie</td>
<td>1952 (1) S.A. 400 (A.J.)</td>
<td>202</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ziane</td>
<td>1953 (4) S.A. 326 (F)</td>
<td>141</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zide</td>
<td>1931 B.D.L. 2,6</td>
<td>134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zithku</td>
<td>1963 (1) S.A. 165 (B)</td>
<td>191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zita</td>
<td>1931 N.D.L. 156</td>
<td>199, 200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zondo</td>
<td>(1927) 48 H.L.R. 131</td>
<td>154</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zondi</td>
<td>1958 (1) P.R., B. 44 (N)</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zonta</td>
<td>1954 (1) S.A. 209 (E)</td>
<td>188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zonle</td>
<td>1959 (3) S.A. 319 (A.J.)</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zonel</td>
<td>1935 T.P.R. 400</td>
<td>146, 177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zwa, ch</td>
<td>1934 N.P.D. 267</td>
<td>40, 70</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zwa, u</td>
<td>1941 (3) S.A. 44 (H)</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zungu</td>
<td>1953 (4) S.A. 660 (N)</td>
<td>44</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zuwane</td>
<td>1950 (3) S.A. 717 (E)</td>
<td>135, 159</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zwezela v. Eysobile</td>
<td>1911 E.D.L. 412</td>
<td>108</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Zweni</td>
<td>1918 B.L.R. 250</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
CHAPTER 3

NATURE AND SOURCES OF THE LAW OF EVIDENCE

Section Page
I. The Nature of Legal Evidence 1
II. Sources of S.A. Law of Evidence 5
III. Illegally Obtained Evidence 8

I. THE NATURE OF LEGAL EVIDENCE

Evidence in a legal sense refers to those means, other than argument, which can be put before a court of law to persuade it as to the existence or non-existence of facts (factiva probanda) which are the subject of judicial investigation. It includes oral testimony from witnesses, and documents and objects produced to the court.

Many, perhaps most, of the rules of evidence are exclusionary rules. Much of what would be regarded as probative in everyday life and common-sense reasoning is kept out of the process of judicial proof. The reasons for the rules of exclusion are largely historical, flowing in great measure from the procedural division of function between judge and jury. Some rules of exclusion are based on policy, where it is recognized that evidence of great persuasiveness carries with it at the same time the danger of prejudicing the tribunal irrevocably against the accused. The fairness of the trial and the need to guard against even the possibility of prejudice take precedence over logical cogency. It is for reasons of policy also that, even where evidence is legally admissible, the judicial officer is vested with an overriding discretion to exclude it where its prejudicial potentialities outweigh its probative force. This judicial discretion can be exercised whether the evidence is technically admissible by common law or by statute.

In the words of Caldecott J.A., in R. v. Hepworth:1

'A criminal trial is not a game where one side is entitled to claim the benefit of any omission or mistake made by the other side, and a judge's position in a criminal trial is not merely that of an umpire to see that the rules of the game are observed by both sides.'

2 1938 A.D. 265 at 277.
A judge is an administrator of justice, he is not merely a figurehead, he has not only to hear and control the proceedings according to recognized rules of procedure but to see that justice is done.1

The power of the court presiding over a civil trial is not correspondingly great, since the public interest is less directly involved.2 The concept of a criminal trial as displayed in judgments such as R. v. Henwood has a correlative effect upon the function of the prosecutor whose role is not to be conceived of in partisan terms. He is required to act as a responsible and independent legal officer, whose duty is not simply to obtain a conviction, but to present before the court all the relevant facts in his possession whether they make in favour of a conviction or against it.3

Apart from the matter of judicial discretion, the rules of evidence are generally the same in criminal as in civil cases.4 The differences are accounted for largely by the fact that in criminal if there are no detailed pleadings narrowly defining the issues and by the incidence of the onus of proof, which rests normally upon the prosecution, to be discharged beyond a reasonable doubt.
There are in addition certain particular rules applying only in criminal cases, for example, the terms upon which a confession by the accused is received, or the competency and compellability as a witness of the accused’s spouse.

Another difference between civil and criminal evidence is that whereas in a criminal trial the rules of evidence can be waived or varied by consent, in criminal cases generally speaking the defence cannot consent to the admission of otherwise inadmissible evidence, or waive its right to object to it. As to the position where the defence inadvertently or by design itself renders or elicits inadmissible evidence, see below, etc.5 609 and 609.7 8

The manner in which the reception of evidence is determined is to

---

1 See, e.g., Crousell v. Rozga v. N.O., 1964 (2) S.A. 476 (C).
4 As to the importance of pleadings in defining the range of relevant evidence, see Skil.
6 Henwood v. Bleetman, 1957 (2) S.A. 89 (A).6
7 R. v. Pomeroy, 1924 A.D. 230 esp. at 235. It is, of course, desirable for the defence to object to the evidence at the trial if it intends to take advantage of the defect on appeal. (P. v. Mosley, 1965 (4) S.A. 322 (T).)
12 By the Abolition ofjuries Act, No. 34 of 1963.
It will be appreciated from the above that there is a clear distinction between the admissibility of evidence and its sufficiency. If what is adduced can in law properly be put before the court, it is admissible. It is only once it has been or would be admitted that its persuasiveness, alone or in conjunction with other evidence, in satisfying the court as to the facta probanda has to be considered.

The classification of some different types of evidence, and a discussion of each type, has been set out in the chapter on ‘The Manner of Adducing Evidence’, below, p. 899, where the distinction between primary and secondary evidence of documents is also set out. See also, as to the Best Evidence rule, p. 899, and as to the nature of circumstantial as opposed to direct evidence, below, p. 204-9.

Preliminary on the matter of terminology, it may be said very broadly that the distinction which is drawn between direct or original evidence and hearsay evidence refers, in the former case, to the testimony of a witness as to what he perceived with his own senses, and in the latter case, to the testimony of a witness who merely reports what another stated himself to have perceived. See below, p. 899. ‘Parol evidence’ is a term of art which is used, where the meaning of a document is in issue, to refer to other evidence (oral or written) of that meaning, outside of the document itself.

II. SOURCES OF THE SOUTH AFRICAN LAW OF EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL CASES

The South African law of evidence is not based upon Roman-Dutch principles. Although occasionally the courts have made passing reference to those principles, the English law of evidence was early introduced into South Africa, as discussed in chapter 1 above, by Ordinance 72 of 1830 (C).

The present law is regulated by the Criminal Procedure Act, 1955, as amended. This Act contains evidential rules on a number of topics, and for the residue of rules not expressly set out provides in section 292 (as amended by the Criminal Procedure Amendment Act, 1963):

‘The law as to the admissibility of evidence and as to the competency, examination and cross-examination of witnesses which was in force in respect of criminal proceedings on the thirtieth day of May, 1961, shall apply in any case not expressly provided by this Act or any other law.’

In addition, the effect of section 292 is expressly and apparently superficially extended to specific cases by sections 232 (professional privilege), 233 (State privilege), 234 (privilege against self-incrimination), 241 (hearsay), 242 (dying declarations), 247 (character of the complainant in a sexual charge), 252 and 260 (manner and sufficiency of proof of appointment to public office), and 286 (impeachment and support of a witness’s credibility).

What then was the law in force on 30th May, 1961? As held by the Appellate Division in Ex parte Minister van Justisie: in re S. v. Wagner, it was the

---

11 e.g. Van Nickerk v. Fagan (1892) 14 S.C. 50; R. v. Leumer, 1938 (2) S.A. 352 (S.W.A.).
12 Act No. 55 of 1955.
13 Act No. 92 of 1963, sect. 29. This amendment has, if not initiated, at least reinforced a fundamental change in the approach of the courts to the whole question of what our law of evidence is, so that earlier decisions on the subject, even those of the Appellate Division, are in the newer cases not even mentioned just to be overruled, and will accordingly be referred to here only in footnotes, for historical interest.
14 1960 (4) S.A. 507 (A.D.), see also, S. v. Lulika, 1963 (4) S.A. 941 (N); S. v. Borrer, 1964 (6) S.A. 58 (D), and Ex parte Vite der Spey N.O., 1965 (4) S.A. 338 (T). previous unnamed section 292, which applied to residual matters not expressly dealt with in force in criminal proceedings in the Supreme Court of Judicature in England', and Steyn C.J. in Van der Linde v. Calitz21 added that this was to be read in the light of the provisions whereby, until 1950, the Privy Council was the ultimate court of appeal for South Africa. The result22 is that pro-1950 opinions of the Privy Council and Appellate Division decisions are binding on the South African courts, although the Appellate Division is free to depart from either if satisfied it was clearly wrong.23 Post-1950 Privy Council decisions are persuasive only, since it is not part of the Supreme Court of Judicature in England. Decisions of the House of Lords and lower tribunals in the English hierarchy of courts prior to 1961 are binding on South African courts so far as they have been understood and applied in South Africa24—and this must mean first, that South African rules of practice, not English practice, are to be followed,25 and secondly, that Appellate Division and other South African decisions as to what the English law is should be followed in preference to later English decisions which may contradict them.26 Post-1961 decisions of the English courts, like post-1950 Privy Council opinions, are persuasive only.27

Even where English case law is authoritative, the same has never applied to the development of English law by statutes, which are not incorporated by reference.28 Further, when there is a substantive provision on evidence in a South African statute, even where this is identical in wording to an English statute, the English cases remain persuasive only.29 The effect of the incorporation by reference of the body of English law into South African law means, of course, that it is not treated in the same way as is foreign law where it is a question of fact, when it requires proof by an expert in the foreign law.30

The complicated rules of precedent applicable to evidentiary matters have the result of giving especial significance to the distinction between those rules which are substantive law and part of the law of evidence, and those which are substantive law. A provision such as section 292 is to be given a restrictive interpretation, said Stratford C.J. in Tregua v. Godart.31 Thus, the incidence of the onus of proof, or the existence of a presumption,32 have been held to be matters of substantive law, although the effect of the onus of proof or of a presumption is evidentiary.33 Similarly, while we adopt the English evidentiary rule that a 1967 (2) S.A. 239 (A.D.) at 250. The learned Chief Justice was there concerned with the same identical problem given rise to by sec. 42 of the Criminal Proceedings Evidence Act, 20 Privy Council Appeals Act, No. 16 of 1950.

21 See further Prof. Bilton Kahn in (1957) 84 S.A.L.J. 368 at 368-369, and H. R. Helbo and 23 Ex parte Minister van Justitie in re S. v. Wagner, 1953 (4) S.A. 507 (A.D.). (Contrast 24 S. v. Lwane, 1965 (2) S.A. 433 (A.D.) esp. at 439; Lwane's case is critically discussed in (1965) 29 T.H.R.S. 251.
26 Pappas v. Transvaal Board, Peri-Urban Areas, 1969 (2) S.A. 66 (A) at 69.
28 R. v. Hendricks, 1934 T.P.D. 451. See in particular the interpretation given to sec. 226 of the Criminal Code, discussed below, p. 884. 119 P.P.
30 1939 A.D. 16 at 32.
32 Tregua v. Godart, 1929 A.D. 16 at 43, per Watermeyer J.A.
Vicarious admission is received against a party if he was in privity of obligation or of title with its maker, it is the substantive South African law which determines whether such privity exists in law.

III. EVIDENCE OBTAINED BY COMPULSION OR OTHER ILLEGAL MEANS

Statements elicited from the accused which amount to admissions or confessions are inadmissible if he has been induced to speak, whether by violence or moral pressure. Admissions or confessions by conduct in the form of a pointing out of places or things are expressly made admissible by section 245 of the Criminal Code, even if obtained from the accused against his will, but admissions by conduct in other forms still require at common law to have been freely and voluntarily made, e.g. a sample of his handwriting furnished by the accused is inadmissible if coerced.

Apart from the confessions rule, the general approach of our law is apparently that evidence is not inadmissible just because it was illegally obtained. Documents have been admitted even if procured unlawfully, e.g. by stealth or in the absence of a valid search warrant. The accused can be compelled, under sections 289, 290 and 291 of the Code, to furnish evidence against himself by means of finger-prints or medical examinations, the results of which are again admissible whatever the method by which they were obtained. There is, however, some authority for saying that such forcible examinations would at common law have rendered the evidence inadmissible, and it is not clear whether this has been overruled by Ex parte Minister of Justice: in re R. v. Matembe or whether the point was there merely being dealt with obiter.

There is no doubt that the judicial discretion to exclude in the interests of justice evidence which is technically admissible applies to illegally obtained evidence as to all other kinds, the test being whether its reception would be "unfair" to the accused having regard to the nature of the offence charged and the circumstances in which the evidence was procured.

An example of unfair circumstances can be seen from S. v. Verhees, where evidence obtained from the accused in the course of an enquiry into his mental condition under the Mental Disorders Act, 1913, was excluded. On the other hand, eavesdropping by a "plain clothes" policeman was held not to be unfair in R. v. Stewart.

---

1 v. Van Deventer, 1966 (3) S.A. 182 (A.D.) at 204, per Williamson J.A.
2 See chap. 3 below, pp. 112-113.
7 1941 A.D. 75.
9 King v. R. (1968) 3 W.L.R. 391 (P.C.) esp. at 397, 400.
10 1970 (2) S.A. 593 (C). Compare the meaning given to "just excuse", discussed below, p. 19.
CHAPTER 3

MATTRES PROVED WITHOUT EVIDENCE

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I. Formal Admissions</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II. Judicial Notice</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A. Facts Judicially Noticed</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. Local notoriety</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Facts notoriously ascertainable</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Affairs of State</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B. Judicial Notice of Matters of Law</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. South African law</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Custom</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Foreign law</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

I. FORMAL ADMISSIONS

Where facts are formally admitted by a party they cease to be in issue, and the other side is relieved of the necessity of calling evidence to establish those facts, unlike extraneous informal admissions which are tendered in evidence and have to be proved by the other side. Section 28(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act provides that 'judicial admissions may be made by the defence in criminal trials, and that such an admission is 'sufficient evidence' of the facts.

At common law such admissions could not be made in criminal trials, and as section 28(1) speaks only of admissions by the defence it could have been argued that the procedure is not to be extended to the prosecution. The courts have, however, held that the provision allows equally for admissions to be made by the State.

1 See R. v. F. 1955 (3) S.A. 474 (Q.J.) at 475; R. v. F. 1955 (3) S.A. 767 (T) at 772-7.
2 See R. v. F. 1955 (3) S.A. 767 (T) at 772-7. The common law was altered in England by the Criminal Evidence Act, 1967, c. 82, sect. 10.
3 Which extension has been arrived at in the application of sect. 28(1) of the Act. See 1st Report 1963, p. 17.
5 R. v. F. 1955 (3) S.A. 767 (T) at 772-7.
By the phrase 'insufficient evidence' is meant both that the facts admitted are taken to be proved to the requisite standard of proof, and further, that evidence to contradict or rebut those facts is inadmissible; care should therefore be taken to formulate precisely the facts intended to be admitted; the loose practice of simply admitting the evidence given at the preparatory examination is particularly to be discouraged as there should be no doubt about to which facts the admission was related. On the other hand, if the evidence in contradiction is admissible as relevant to other issues in the case, the court may relieve the admitting party of the usual consequences of conclusiveness, for it would be 'manifestly inequitable for a judgment to be founded upon facts which appear, from the rest of the evidence, to have been erroneously admitted.

In civil cases a 'oral admission made in the pleadings or at the trial cannot be withdrawn without the leave of the court, which will only grant leave if satisfied with sworn evidence explaining the circumstances in which the admission can be made, and if satisfied that it was made in error and without malice.

Although section 204(2) makes no express provision for the withdrawal of admissions in criminal trials, the overriding discretion vested in a criminal court may be exercised to that result.

It is only facts 'relevant to the issue' which can be admitted under the section, which 'is not intended', said Paap in S. v. Kacwey, 'to be used by the defence as a means of getting on record something which the State does not propose to make part of its case'. There must, it seems, be some issue between prosecution and defence in regard to the subject-matter of the proposed admission, though an acceptance of the admission may be taken to indicate the existence of such issue.

Statements made by the accused in an unsworn statement from the dock, or in an explanation when giving his plea under section 109(2) of the Code, may amount to judicial admissions, provided it is clear that he intended to absolve the State from the burden of leading evidence on any matter.
It should be explained to him that he is under no obligation to admit the prosecution in making its case.\textsuperscript{17}

On the question whether formal admissions are competent where the accused has pleaded guilty, see below under 'Corroboration', p. 783.

II. JUDICIAL NOTICE

A. FACTS JUDICALLY NOTICED

A trial of fact, whether judicial officer or assessor, may not in general rely on his own knowledge as to the truth or otherwise of the facts in issue before him. For him to do so would be in effect for him to adjudge as between his own information and that presented by the witnesses testifying. If, therefore, he finds himself in this position he must immediately discharge himself from acting in a judicial capacity and is under a further duty, as a judge or magistrate, to offer himself as a witness in the case.\textsuperscript{18}

There are, however, certain categories of information of which a trial of fact may take cognizance without being established by evidence. The judiciary cannot be contained in an ivory tower without windows.\textsuperscript{19} In order to understand, correlate and evaluate the issues of fact in any proceedings, a trial of fact must necessarily employ his background knowledge and experience.\textsuperscript{20} To lead evidence to establish such background matter afresh in every case would clog the workings of the courts. The doctrine of judicial notice is usually said to be grounded in the expediency of avoiding unnecessarily prolonged trials,\textsuperscript{21} and the problem of its proper application is the definition of where the hearing of evidence may fairly be regarded as superfluous.

Broadly, the facts which may be judicially noticed must be "so notorious as not to be the subject of dispute among reasonable men, or . . . be capable of immediate accurate demonstration by resort to readily accessible sources of indisputable accuracy,"\textsuperscript{22} Notorious facts were said in R. v. Affirm Conveying Co. (S.W.A.) Ltd\textsuperscript{23} to include "elemental experience in human nature, commercial affairs and everyday life. Whether a fact is of such a nature is a question of law for the decision of the presiding judge.\textsuperscript{24} Evidence is inadmissible to controvert \textsuperscript{17} N. v. D., 1962 (2) S.A. 521 (C); S. v. Long, 1969 (3) S.A. 40 (N).

\textsuperscript{19} In the words of Holmes J.A. in S. v. Bernstein, 1925 (1) S.A. 237 (A.D.) at 305. C.f. Lord Sumner in Commonwealth Shipping Representative v. P. & G. Lines Inc. (1935) A.C. 10 (L.R.) at 211: "... to negativate that a judge should affect a de minimis non curat lex fiction that every other man in court is fully aware of and should insist on having proof on each of which, as a matter of the world, we know already better than any witness can tell him, is a position that may easily become pedantic and futile. See, too, Lord Sumner in Prentice-Jones v. Prentice-Jones (1936) 1 A.C. 394 (L.R.) at 401: "... It is so unreasonable that a count of justice should be so futile in accord with the common notions of mankind that it should require evidence to dispel fantastic imaginations."\textsuperscript{22}
\textsuperscript{21} The same considerations applied to errors as to judges (R. v. Reese, 1910) 7 C.R. 404; see also E. v. M., 1934 E.D.L. 250 at 252, R. v. Beddow M. Magician (1944) 16 Howard L.R. 328 Re: permissive argument that it springs value from the traditional division of functions to an officer.
\textsuperscript{22} In the words of Morgan, loc. cit. at 386.
\textsuperscript{23} 1955 (1) S.A. 197 (S.W.A.) at 199, per Chaskes, J.
\textsuperscript{24} R. v. Dyson, 1939 O.P.D. 245, where Pillmore's comment that "judges may notice what they cannot be compelled to notice" was approved (at 202).
facts properly noticed; they have more than merely prima facie validity, being irrebuttable. 22 This does not of course disregard the fact that whether something is indisputable may itself be a matter of dispute, and further that indisputability is not immutable but may vary from time to time and from place to place. Both dangers are adequately guarded against by the judicial officer openly stating his own impressions so that if necessary the parties may correct an erroneous one. 23 Beyond the requirement that the trier of fact recognizes that his personal stores of information are not necessarily co-extensive with matters of everyday notoriety to reasonable men, general principles cannot be isolated, and examples may be multiplied without giving much illumination. On the one side of the line, clearly a court may take cognizance of facts such as that gelignite is a dangerous explosive 24 that public companies are generally incorporated to carry on business and make a profit; 25 that there is a network of national roads in South Africa which are public roads. 26 Clearly on the other side are cases where it has been held that the court may not notice without evidence the chemical composition of material 27 or beer, 28 the rules of rookery, 29 the habits of farm birds, 30 or the manner of estimating the age of animals 31 and their local market value. 32 A knowledge of the workings of machines is not assumed to be common to all reasonably intelligent members of the community, 33 except in broad outline at least when the machine is in common use by laymen. 34 Matters of telegraphy, such as the incidence and range of abnormalities in the period of human gestation, 35 or the genetics of skin pigmentation, 36 cannot be judicially noticed, except where they have permeated into the background knowledge of non-specialists. Thus, in R. v. Moreau 37 and Tindall IA held that judicial notice could be taken of the fact that no two fingerprints are exactly alike.

It will be noticed that the doctrine of judicial notice is far more freely applied to generalities rather than to matters of detail, and this is so also where the issue is the operation of a statute or document and its meaning in its frame.
An example of the former is the court's readiness to rely on their own experience of people's behaviour and reactions, while refusing to notice the attributes or behaviour of any one individual. Again, in Commonwealth Shipping Representative v. P. & O. Branch Service the House of Lords asserted its knowledge of a state of war but not of the date and significance of each manoeuvre or operation forming part of that war. An example of the latter type is Ex parte South Colonial Trust, Ltd., in re Estate Nathan, which was concerned with a tortfeasor's predictions, in 1924, regarding the cost of subsidized immigration to Palestine over the following fifty years.

Apart from these two categories, judicial knowledge is not easily assumed. The judges have not agreed with the text-writers that the scope of judicial knowledge should be extended rather than restricted. As De Beer J. commented in R. v. Smaatoff:

> 'when one notes in Plumer, Wigmore and Scoles what astounding results have been achieved by the restricted application of the doctrine, one dreads to contemplate the effects of an extended application'.

The most 'astounding results' have indeed been attempted by trial courts, whose convictions have frequently been set aside because of magisterial assumptions in the sphere of what has been called 'racial mythology', e.g. that Africans see better at night than do whites, that Africans are capable of making definite identifications from speed-marks, or that Indians are secretive and non-committal. Another racial attribute which has been judicially noticed - this time by the Appellate Division itself, in 1917 - is that the majority of the white inhabitants of South Africa were racially prejudiced and considered non-whites as their inferiors.

Properly often depends on the particular form in which a R. v. A. directs the jury, in a trial for indecent assault, that African women often give in when seized, was held not to have been improper. Had the direction been in terms, 'They always give in when seized', the result would presumably have been different.

1. Local Notoriety

A fact may be judicially noticed even if not generally notorious, if it is well known to all persons in a particular community or district. That members of an

---

11 (1921) A.C. 131 (H.L.).

17 1957 (3) S.A. 212 (A.D.). The Appellate Division was influenced in upholding this by the lack of the whole surrounding, which was that whether or not the complainant had in fact consented when seized was irrelevant to the issue of the accused's guilt.

appen districts, are not within the locit of this boundary, for it is not within the scope of judicial notice.

Thus the court may refer to calendars and authoritative almanacs to establish on what day of the week a particular date fell, or the time of sunrise and sunset. In General Life Assurance Company v. Moore, it was held that judicial notice could be taken of standard maps and State documents such as treaties recognizing the geographical and political features of South Africa. The reference to "standard maps" was said in a later judgment to mean maps and surveys issued under government or similar authority. Doubt has been expressed as to whether a court may take judicial notice of all places shown on a map. Probably the ordinary test should apply—whether the application of the map's symbols to concrete facts of geography would be self-evident to reasonably intelligent persons in the community. If it would not, expert evidence is necessary.

---

2. Facts notoriously ascertainable

Where a fact is not itself notorious, but it may be easily ascertained by consulting sources of indisputable accuracy, it remains within the sphere of judicial notice. Thus the court may refer to calendars and authoritative almanacs to establish on what day of the week a particular date fell, or the time of sunrise and sunset. In General Life Assurance Company v. Moore, it was held that judicial notice could be taken of standard maps and State documents such as treaties recognizing the geographical and political features of South Africa. The reference to "standard maps" was said in a later judgment to mean maps and surveys issued under government or similar authority. Doubt has been expressed as to whether a court may take judicial notice of all places shown on a map. Probably the ordinary test should apply—whether the application of the map's symbols to concrete facts of geography would be self-evident to reasonably intelligent persons in the community. If it would not, expert evidence is necessary.

---

66 S. v. De Beer, 1926 (2) P.H. 195 (O).
70 But see Barlow v. Dyer (1846) 9 App. Cas. 345 (H.L.).
75 R. v. V. office, 1915 A.D. 357 at 362.
3. Public matters and affairs of State

Judicial notice is taken of public and political facts. Some of these would be known to a judicial officer as to any member of the community. Thus in Murray v. Minister of Interior the Court noticed factual details of the constitutional history of the country, and in Publications Control Board v. William Heinemann, Ltd. the majority of the Appellate Division took judicial notice of the prevailing standards of public morality.

Other public matters might not be thus notorious: whether war has been declared, a foreign government recognized or the territorial limits of the country defined. If a court feels it lacks the information necessary to take judicial cognizance of these facts, this may be obtained from the appropriate officers of the Executive. Such information, when given

‘in aid of the matter of evidence; it is a statement by the Secretary of this country through of the Minister upon a matter which is peculiarly within his competence’.

In other words, it comes from an indisputably accurate source of knowledge.

As the basis is said to be the desirability of conformity of conduct between the Executive and the Judiciary, evidence is inadmissible to contradict the official conclusion. An analogous principle is exemplified by Van Deventer v. Isaacson and Mossop, where Innes C.J. refused to hear evidence that the purported British annexation of the Vryheid district had been premature because at the time there had been no effective occupation of the area or subjugation of its people.

Judicial notice was taken in Johnson and Irvin v. Mayston N.O. of the signature of the Governor of Natal. (In addition, section 253 of the Criminal Procedure Act now provides that the signature and seals of public officers are admissible as prima facie proof of attestation, on their mere production.) Dove-Wilson J. went on to emphasize, as the English courts have done, that though judicial notice is taken of public facts, whether they have been ascertained by official assistance or not the significance and urgency of facts so noticed is for the Court alone.

II. JUDICIAL NOTICE OF MATTERS OF LAW

1. South African Law

Judicial notice must be taken of the laws of the country. Accordingly, the provisions and date of commencement of public statutes of the Republic

...
Parliament may be judicially notified, though it is usual as a matter of courtesy for a copy of the enactment to be furnished to the court for it to refresh its knowledge of these matters. Similarly, the common law presumes closure may be notified, though again reference may have to be made to previous decisions, old authorities and modern treatises to ascertain the state of the law.

Judicial knowledge is not presumed to cover private Acts of Parliament, or enactments passed by other than original legislative powers unless the taking of judicial notice is authorized by Act of Parliament. Provincial council ordinances, not being delegated legislation, may be noticed in the prospect to which they apply, but the ordinances and pre-Union legislation of other provinces must be proved by handing in a copy of the Provincial Gazette. Proclamations which have the force of original legislation may be noticed, but not those which rank as delegated legislation. These latter, like Government notices, regulations and municipal by-laws, fall under the aegis of section 253 of the Criminal Procedure Act, which reads:

'(1) Judicial notice shall be taken of any law or government notice, or of any other matter which has been published in the Gazette or in the official Gazette of any province.

(2) A copy of the Gazette, or of the official Gazette of any province, or a copy of such law, notice or other matter purporting to be printed under the superintendence or authority of the Government printer, shall, on its mere quotation, be evidence of the contents of such law, notice or other matter, as the case may be.

The provision is unfortunately worded, as if subsection (2) is taken literally, subsection (1) is rendered almost nugatory, and its interpretation has led to great differences of judicial opinion. Where the Gazette has in fact been produced at the trial, courts have differed as to whether it (or a certified copy) must be handed in to form part of the record or whether the fact that it was inspected by the court need be recorded. There are several cases where, although no Gazette was produced at the trial, the courts have considered questions because the Gazette was made available on appeal, but the practice was criticized by Young J. in the Southern Rhodesia case of R. v. Mabekani. The role of law requires compliance with formalities and proof (where such is required) of the existence of a law cannot be described as an insuperable formality...

12 In re Commonwealth (1853) 2 Ch. 489; Swellie v. City (1891) 3 S.C. 19.
13 Barr v. J.A.E. & E. 1917 C.P.D. 416; but the effect of sec. 253 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1879 (52 & 53 Vict., c. 63) by which all statutes are deemed to be public facts, unless otherwise expressly provided, for the purpose of taking judicial notice.
15 Mabekani v. Mabekani (1941) 1 T.P.D. 625, 626.
16 1183 V. 1911 T.P.D. 428. Strictly speaking these are foreign laws which should be proved by expert evidence, but the courts do not insist on this technically (Cape Govt v. National Development Co., Ltd, 1919 T.S. 613).
19 R. v. Gelilo, 1911 C.P.D. 76 at 80.
22 A similar course was approved in Anoff v. Commissioner of Customs (1914) 4 M.L.R. 185 (223) of 1919.
23 1961 (2) S.A. 118 (S.R.) at 119.
Finally, the cases are divided on whether section 251(1) is to be construed as departing entirely from the provisions of the Gatsby, or whether it bears any resemblance whatever to the provisions of the Gatsby (instructed upon).

Until the legislature clarifies the matter the last-mentioned procedure should be followed as "ab domine cœrde." The growing rate of subordinate legislation has now been accompanied by improvements in its accessibility. The danger of statutory provisions not being repeal or amended regulations being enacted accordingly, and any slight inconvenience caused by adopting the suggested procedure is by comparison trivial.

1. Custom

Trials conducted by a judicial officer are conducted by a judicial officer as an expert in those cases where it is necessary to have the evidence in question heard by an expert. In the case of customs matters, the ordinary principles of natural justice must be satisfied. Thus Inns C.J. was prepared in E. v. Dillamond, to infer from the fact that the accused had had three wives that he must have been married three times, but examining the evidence, he decided that evidence must not be given invariable evidence, but evidence must be led to establish the facts of the case, and it was necessary to prove that evidence was admissible to prove that a custom had been established.

2. Evidence

Evidential law need not be proved by evidence, but evidence must be led to establish the facts of the case, and it was necessary to prove that evidence was admissible to prove that a custom had been established.
3. Foreign Law

Judicial notice cannot be taken of the law of foreign countries. Foreign law must be proved in the same way as any other fact forming part of a body of technical or specialized knowledge—by an expert witness. Testbooks setting out the foreign law or copies of foreign statutes are not evidence in themselves but, like any other expert, the witness may refer to them in support and explanation of his opinion.

The competence of the witness as an expert must be shown: he must prove to be peritus vitae officii. The best qualification would be experience as a judge, congressman or practitioone in the foreign system, but an adequate degree was accepted as sufficient in Hoffman v. Pretoria Farm Formal qualifications are not essential provided the requisite degree of knowledge can be shown. A certificate from the German commission-general as to the validity of a marriage celebrated in Germany was held inadmissible in Lor v. Lew

As there was no evidence that he had had any opportunity or need to acquire a knowledge of this branch of the law, his consular functions being largely commercial; but in Amiri v. Commerzbank

Evidence on what was legal tender in West Africa was received from a bank manager with twenty-four years' experience there, the Privy Council declaring it needed to be satisfied merely (o) that the witness conducted a business which made it in his interest to take cognizance of what notes were legal tender in West Africa, and (2) that he had in fact taken such cognizance.

Our courts used to relax the usual requirements of proof where the foreign law in issue was English law, on the ground that they were as well qualified as any expert to determine what that law was. This practice was disapproved by the Appellate Division in Achmat v. C.I.R. and possibly the case with which Van Wyk J.A. in that case could find a fact agreed to dispense with formal proof will not be repeated in a criminal case. The same insistence on proof applies to the laws of Botswana. Lawman, Swaziland, and Rhodesia, regardless of how close the ties are between those legal systems and our own.

---

10. 1954 (2) R.D.C. 164. The contrary decision in this respect is De porto Fascula, 1935 W.L.D. 1, which clearly wrong.

In civil cases the onus of proving the foreign law lies on the party who claims that it is applicable and that it differs from domestic law, and in the absence of evidence the foreign law is presumed to be the same as South African. While there is no direct authority on the point, it seems most unlikely that the same rules would be applied in a criminal case. From the other discussion in McIntyre v. R. it seems that only Mason J. would have applied the civil rules of onus. Innes C.J. and Bristow J. would apparently have regarded it as the prosecution's duty to adduce evidence of the foreign law as one of the facts in issue, and the same assumption was made in Mdal v. R. The reasoning of Mason J. in McIntyre in any event applies as much to the evidential onus as to the legal burden of proof, and there is no reason to vary the ordinary and desirable principle that the prosecution should always bear the onus of proof. Where the presumption is operative, it applies to statute as well as to common law.

McNab v. McNab, 1923 C.R.D. 40, that in consequence judicial notice would be taken of Southern Rhodesian law in all cases, not only where the appellate function was being exercised. The issue as a precedent of this decision today is debatable.

Rapoal v. General Imports (Pty.) Ltd., 1948 (1) S.A. 1215 (C) (where Schasdel v. Jaffa, 1916 C.R.D. 866, was disapproved); Estate Elwin v. Estate Elwin, 1931 (2) S.A. 155 (C).

1904 T.S. 875. On similar facts today, sec. 270(3) of the Criminal Procedure Act would simplify the matter.

CHAPTER 3

WITNESSES: THEIR ATTENDANCE AND COMPETENCE

Section Page
I. Introduction ........................................... 17
II. Competability ........................................... 12
III. Persons suffering Mental Impairment ............... 20
IV. Young Children ........................................ 24
V. Judicial Officers and Legal Practitioners .......... 32
VI. The Accused as a Witness ......................... 33
   A. Unsworn statement .................................. 33
   B. Testimony on oath ................................... 33
      1. Accused giving evidence for defence .......... 35
      2. Accused as a witness for prosecution ...... 37
VII. Competability of Accomplices ..................... 47
VIII. The Accused's Spouse as Witness ............... 51

I. INTRODUCTION

A witness is competent to testify if his evidence may properly be put before the court. He is competent if, being competent, he can be compelled to give evidence even against his will.

The Criminal Procedure Act contains various provisions dealing with both competence and compellability, and in addition section 292 states that the law as to competency of witnesses shall, where not expressly provided for, be determined according to the law of England. Accordingly the statutory provisions are not exclusive but are supplemented by the common law.

At common law, there were many disqualifications from competence, of which the most important were those based on crime and on interest. Nearly all

1 A ruling of compellability does not, however, deprive him of the right to claim privilege in respect of particular questions. See below, n. 464, 11.43
2 See above, n. 36, 5.
these have been abolished by statute. As Van den Heever J.A. commented in Ex parte Minister of Justice v. R. v. Dening,

"The history of the law of procedure and evidence in this regard shows a progressive construction of classes of witnesses who were once incompetent on the ground of presumed bias or untrustworthiness, leaving the question of probative value of such evidence to judge or judicial officers."

That section 223 declares generally that unless specially excluded all persons are both competent and compellable as witnesses. The old rule of infantis disqualifying criminals no longer apply, so that evidence may be received even from persons under sentence of death. The principal interest disqualification, which excluded accessory persons and their spouses from testifying, has also been substantially withdrawn, though some limitations remain.

Questions of competence and compellability, like any other question of the admissibility of evidence, are matters of law and are therefore for the decision of the judicial officer alone, at a trial within a trial where, it necessary, evidence and argument may be heard. Unlike other rulings on the admissibility of evidence, these trials within the trial need not take place in the absence of the assessor, even though they do not participate in the decision. Whether the witness is competent will be decided by the judge, but whether or not his evidence will be held incompetent, however, the inquiry should be as far as possible be kept off the main issues in the case. If these cannot be avoided on the side issue of competence, the assessor must be excluded. A decision as to a witness's competence, at least where his sanity or maturity is disputed, is of an interlocutory nature. If his competency is brought into doubt by virtue of his own behavior while testifying the court should then initiate an inquiry into his capacity or, if it has already been investigated, should review its earlier ruling.

Commonly in criminal trials a request is made to the court to order any witnesses present to withdraw until they are called to the stand. A witness who has consented in court to hear the other witness, whether or not an order of this kind has been given, is not thereby disqualified from testifying. He remains a competent witness, though he may be liable to penalties for contempt of court.

---

But the court has power to set aside a subpoena if totally satisfied that the witness is unable to give any relevant evidence (Sherry v. Sadowitz, 1970 (1) S.A. 193 (C)).

In S. v. Hertog, 1970 (1) S.A. 387 (C), it was held that all the circumstances of the case may be looked at to see whether a just excuse exists, including the ease or difficulty with which the witness could give the evidence (surely a test of convenience rather than of justice), the "hono fides" of the witness, and whether or not he has had legal advice.

"Compellability\"

With the exceptions discussed below, all competent witnesses are to attend court, be sworn, and be examined. A witness’s attendance at court is enforced by means of a subpoena, at the instance of either the prosecution or the defense. The Appellate Division has held that it is for the police to take statements from defense witnesses whose statements are relevant evidence, if only known to them by virtue of the subpoena.

Witnesses who have been subpoenaed must remain in attendance proceedings are terminated, and provision is made for the pay expenses. Failure to obey a subpoena is an offence.

The court may compel any person present in court whether in subpoena or not, to be sworn and give evidence. Exclusionary excuse is punishable by twelve months imprisonment, which means if the refusal is persisted in. Section 212 creates a statute although it may be summarily tried, and accordingly the witness the assistance of counsel and if he is found guilty will be treated

It is not entirely clear what type of excuse will be regarded as justifying the purpose of section 212. It need not be a deplorable C.J. in S. v. Weinberg, but there is evidence that the jury will be considered as having been excluded by the court. The context between an individual’s right to the pre 14 Sec. 209; and generally R. v. Hymest, 1932 (1) S.A. 107 (C).

16 Sec. 259. If the trial is subsequen"ed, witness later to be from attendance is considered; R. v. Beaurepaire, 1932 A.C. 353. But the original sub-division order S. v. Abisile, 1967 (3) S.A. 119 (A.D.)
17 Sec. 216. A refusal to give evidence is considered not to be an improper answers to questions: S. v. Schlesinger (1969) 20, Rep. 11 E.D.L. 19.
20 See the "criminal of South Africa" in the J. M. S. Park. and the weight of his evidence may be much diminished. The extent to which its value is affected depends on the circumstances in each case, the position of the witness vis-à-vis the party calling him, and so forth.

II. COMPELLABILITY

With the exceptions discussed below, all competent witnesses are compellable to attend court, be sworn, and be examined. If the witness's attendance at court is enforced by means of a subpoena, issued at the instance of either the prosecution or the defence, it may appear necessary to have the evidence of a witness who is not called by the party the court may itself call the witness. The Appellate Division has held that it is undesirable for the police to take statements from defence witnesses whose ability to furnish relevant evidence is only known to them by virtue of the subpoena procedure. Witnesses who have been subpoenaed must remain in attendance until the proceedings are terminated, and provision is made for the payment of their expenses. Failure to obey a subpoena is an offence.

The court may compel any person present in court, whether in response to a subpoena or not, to be sworn and give evidence. Recalcitrance without 'just excuse' is punishable by twelve months' imprisonment, which may be renewed if the refusal is persisted in. Section 212 thus creates a substantive offence, although it may be summarily tried, and accordingly the witness is entitled to the assistance of counsel and if he is found guilty will be treated like any other convict.

It is not entirely clear what type of excuse will be regarded as 'just' and therefore exonerating for the purposes of section 212. It need not be a lawful excuse, said Steyn C.J. in S. v. Weinberg, but then suggested other equally rigorous tests: the witness must 'find himself in circumstances in which it would be humbly intolerable to have to testify'. Nothing in the policy of the section as it appears from the wording would seem to require such a straining of the quality of justice, which would exclude excuses accepted by the courts under previous legislation. The contest between an individual's right to the privacy of his own

---

23 R. v. J. D., 1961 (3) S.A. 177 (S.A.)
24 Sec. 240; Salee v. H., 1932 N.P.D. 236.
25 See 210, on which see subpennas (p. 253, and generally R. v. Heyworth, 1928 A.D. 265; R. v. Majot, 1936 (3) S.A. 167 (N)).
27 Sec. 211. If the trial is subsequently reopened, witnesses have to be re-subpoenaed if their attendance is desired: R. v. Bellamy, 1925 A.D. 263. But the original subpoena applies to an adjourned date: S. v. Atkinson, 1933 (3) S.A. 218 (N).
29 Sec. 212A(2).
33 See opposite. See opposite.
34 Sec. 211. See opposite.
35 See, e.g., R. v. Wilcox, 1921 E.D.L. 39; R. v. Ndlalose, 1921 E.D.L. 23; R. v. Fisk, 1927 E.D.L. 69. The phrase 'reasonable excuse', which is still used in sec. 211 in regard to principles and the public interest in the administration of justice would seem to be unequal enough without adding to the scale further weighting against the individual.10

The foregoing provisions apply not only to witnesses at the trial but also to a preliminary inquiry where persons may be subpoenaed to appear before a magistrate for examination by the public prosecutor regarding the commission of an alleged offence.10

Again, all the same provisions apply to the production of documents which may be compelled by means of a subpoena ducem tecum. Production of official documents in the control of a public servant requires the permission of the attorney-general if the original is desired.11 The Act does not require the documents to be specified in any particular way, but if the subpoena is imprecise the witness will not be penalized for non-production.12 If a person, subpoenaed or not, has the documents in court he can be compelled to produce them.12 Possession and control of the documents are sufficient to subject a witness to a subpoena ducem tecum: his ownership of them need not be shown.12 Possible access to them failing short of control is insufficient.15

III. COMPETENCE OF PERSONS SUFFERING FROM MENTAL IMPAIRMENT

Section 225 of the Criminal Procedure Act reads:

"No person appearing or proved to be afflicted with idiocy, insanity, or insanity, or labouring under any imbecility of mind arising from intoxication or otherwise, whereby he is deprived of the proper use of reason, shall be competent to give evidence while so afflicted or disabled."

Whether a witness is sane, sober, or comprehending enough to testify is a matter for the trial court to determine, either by hearing evidence or on the basis of the witness's conduct in the box. A finding of competence is interlocutory and may be altered if the course of the evidence casts further doubt on the point.14 A mental defect not of the kind contemplated by the section—such as impairment of memory due to old age—does not disqualify the witness but may result in his testimony being of no value.15

Incompetence where it exists is not absolute, for it lasts only so long as does the defect. Thus a lunatic may testify during lucid intervals, and a drunk when

---

Sec. 202. The ordinary rules relating to the evidentiary use of documents will still have to be observed: R. v. Wepener, 1920 (1) P.H., H. 73 (G.W.).

Coles v. Johannes N.O., 1949 (1) S.A. 72 (T) at 81.

S. v. Thorston, 1968 (2) S.A. 284 (A.D.) at 290; 1969 (1) P.H., H. 70 (T).

Gibbs N.O. v. Montrose Township and Investment Corporation (Pty.) Ltd., 1961 (2) S.A. 676 (T). This decision is consistent with the point mentioned in S. v. Thorston, above, at 289-90, that it is not all defects of mind but only those depriving the witness of the proper use of reason which the legislature contemplated as a disqualification.
IV. COMPETENCE OF YOUNG CHILDREN

There is no minimum age in our law below which a child is declared incompetent to testify. The maturity and understanding of the particular child must be considered by the presiding judicial officer, who must determine whether the child has sufficient intelligence to testify and a proper appreciation of the duty of speaking the truth. On this test the evidence of a 7-year-old and even of a 6-year-old have been received, though the Court in R. v. Umkhulule was understandably reluctant to admit testimony from a 3- or 4-year-old. Whether or not the child understands the nature of an oath is not a criterion and, accordingly, the course taken in some English cases of postponing a trial while the necessary religious instruction is given, has no place in our practice.

A rule of thumb suggested in the East African and Rhodesian courts in that children under 14 may be regarded as of tender age.

---

40 R. v. Creidler, 1936 O.P.D. 151. The competency is tested at the date of trial and not according to when the events took place.
43 Under sec. 15 of the Immunity Act, No. 23 of 1951, previously sec. 4 of the Gids and Mentally Defective Women's Protection Act, No. 5 of 1915.
47 He may not merely accept assurances of competency from counsel tendering the witness.
48 R. v. Magre, 1939 (2) N.L.R. 139; R. v. Singh, 1940 (2) All E.R. 248 (C.C.A.) An application from the magistrate to the procurator to dispense with the evidence of an 8-year-old boy, who was deeply distressed and frightened, was held not to be a ruling on the child's competency, in R. v. Mahomed, 1941 (1) S.A. 16 (N).
49 See De parte Minister of Justice in re R. v. Denijke, 1951 (1) S.A. 36 (A.D.) at 43, per Conventts C.J. For a fuller exposition of these two criteria, see R. v. Eben, 1941 O.P.D. 270 at 272-3.
52 (1948) 25 N.L.R. 264 at 269.
53 See De parte Minister of Justice in re R. v. Denijke, 1951 (1) S.A. 36 (A.D.) at 43, per Conventts C.J. For a fuller exposition of these two criteria, see R. v. Eben, 1941 O.P.D. 270 at 272.
55 See De parte Minister of Justice in re R. v. Denijke, 1951 (1) S.A. 36 (A.D.) at 43, per Conventts C.J. For a fuller exposition of these two criteria, see R. v. Eben, 1941 O.P.D. 270 at 272.
Forbes F.J. outlined the procedure to be adopted by the trial court when faced with a young witness as:

"(a) to inquire as to the age of the child, and if necessary to assess its age; (b) to investigate, by questioning the child, whether the child understands the nature of an oath; and (c), if the answer to (b) is negative, to investigate whether the child understands the difference between truth and falsehood, and the need to speak the truth. The record should show these inquiries... and the conclusion reached by the judge. Unless the oath oaths is carried out as I have indicated, a trial court cannot be satisfied that a child is fit to be sworn, or even to give evidence unsworn; and unless the oath oaths is recorded an appellate court cannot be satisfied that the trial court has appreciated and carried out its duty."

The age of the child is of course relevant in evaluating the weight to be accorded to its evidence, being inversely proportionate to the stringency of the cautionary rule discussed below.44

V. COMPETENCE OF JUDICIAL OFFICERS, COUNSEL, PROSECUTOR, ATTORNEYS

Although counsel and attorneys are competent to testify in cases in which they are acting,45 the courts have repeatedly pointed out that it is undesirable for them to do so,46 particularly if the testimony is on facts rather than on matters of expert knowledge such as foreign law.47 Judicial officers find it distasteful to have to make findings of credibility which may reflect adversely on a member of the legal profession.48 More important, however, is the possibility of the professional independence of the practitioner involved being jeopardized. As regards the prosecutor in particular, his personal involvement will make it difficult if not impossible for him to "prosecute an accused person with that detachment and moderation which is in accord with the high traditions of prosecution at the public instance in this country."49

For the prosecutor to give evidence against the accused is not per se an irregularity,50 but care must be taken that his evidence is not presented to the court in the form of an unsworn statement from the bar.51

The competency of a judge or magistrate to testify in a case over which he is presiding is not even of academic significance. As Centlivres C.J. put it in Ex parte Minister of Justice: in re R. v. Domingo,52

---

44 p. 999
45 The history of the law in this respect is illustrated in (1909) 26 S.A.L.T. 380.
47 Hendricker v. Endo, 1923 (2) S.A. 362 (C).
50 R. v. Bester, 1929 A.D. 161, where the prosecutor at the preliminary examination gave evidence at the trial but did not conduct the prosecution at the trial, which took place before a different magistrate. Cases where reception of the prosecutor's testimony was held to be irregular are R. v. Maloba (1898) 19 N.L.R. 36; R. v. Duong, 1959 C.P.R. 7; R. v. Nakodes, 1952 O.P.D. 102; A. v. Kieren, 1930 (3) S.A. 539 (C); R. v. Kirschen, 1930 (3) S.A. 599 (C).
51 R. v. Duong, 1939 C.P.R. 7; R. v. Kirschen, 1930 (3) S.A. 599 (C); R. v. Kirschen, 1930 (3) S.A. 539 (C); R. v. Kirschen, 1930 (3) S.A. 599 (C).
52 2 Cta. 638 at 642-1 (a civil case where counsel testified standing in their roles at the bar and unsworn, a procedure followed, though an oath was administered, in Victoria v. Sanderson (1871) 36 L.T. 349) is clearly an undesirable precedent for a criminal court in this respect, as well as being in conflict with sec. 220 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1935.
53 1931 (1) S.A. 56 (A.D.) at 43.
VI. THE ACCUSED AS A WITNESS

At common law the accused was incompetent to give evidence at all, though he was permitted to relate unsworn his version of the facts. The 1898 Act removed his incompetence to testify for the defence, but left his common-law position otherwise unaffected. The provisions of the Criminal Procedure Act followed suit, and reference to English authority is thus persuasive only since the field is covered by South African legislation.

A. Unsworn Statement

When the accused was made competent to enter the box and give evidence on oath, his common-law right to make an unsworn statement from the dock was expressly preserved, and may be exercised whether or not he is represented by counsel or attorney and irrespective of whether witnesses are called by the defence to testify on oath.

The accused is thus presented by section 227 of the Code with a threefold choice. He may enter the box and give sworn evidence, or he may remain out of the box and unsworn; if he chooses the latter he has still the choice of either remaining silent or of making an unsworn statement from the dock. As a matter of practice the difference between these courses and their different effects must be explained to him by the court, but unless he is undefended and ignorant of his position failure to give the explanation is not per se an irregularity. The need for the explanation is not dispensed with by a plea of guilty. The making of the explanation as well as the choice made by the accused should appear on the record.
If the accused chooses to make an unsworn statement, he is of course not subject to cross-examination either by the prosecution or by the court, though the court may ask him questions for the purposes of elucidating his meaning, and may in appropriate circumstances even draw his attention to matters in need of explanation. A failure strictly to observe the dividing line between this form of questioning and cross-examination will render the proceedings irregular.

The time for the statement to be made is after the close of prosecution's case and before the defence case is closed and certainly before the prosecutor addresses the court.

In R. v. Cele, the Appellate Division held that the accused's unsworn statement is not mere argument but, as distinct from the addresses (which usually may be made by defence counsel) under sections 157(4), 169(5) and 183(3), it is 'technically to be regarded as evidence'. The court is therefore obliged to weigh the statement with the other evidential material presented, but its weight, if any, depends entirely upon the circumstances. It is not merely the absence of the oath and the lack of opportunity for testing the accused by cross-examination which results in his statement being of less value than sworn testimony; it is also the fact that he chose deliberately, when he had the alternative, to avoid the oath and cross-examination. Thus it may have even less weight than an extrajudicial statement, and will rarely prevail where contradicted by evidence on oath. It is unlikely that the statement could suffice to discharge a legal onus of proof resting on the accused, but in other cases may conceivably be sufficient answer to the prosecution's prima facie case.

There is little South African authority to date as to how far, if at all, the unsworn statement can be taken into account in favour of or against a co-accused, though it is 'technically evidence' it may, possibly, be admissible for this purpose. In R. v. Smit, Smit A.J. held that the unsworn statement could not be evidence against the co-accused, and although the reasoning on which the decision was based has been overruled by R. v. Cele, a contrary decision would certainly be most unfairly prejudicial to the co-accused who would have no opportunity to cross-examine. In addition, the effect of the cautionary rules relating to accomplice evidence would give the statement so little weight that it could hardly be of any assistance to the State case. Neither of these objections

---

References:

88 *R. v. Makwanky, 1948 (3) A.A. 1925 (1); S. v. Veet, 1953 (1) S.A. 9 (N).
90 *S. v. Mutsa, 1967 (1) F.H., H. 193 (1); but *S. v. Venter, 1967 (1) F.H., H. 193 (2), may be inconsistent with this decision.
93 *R. v. Cele, 1959 (1) S.A. 435 (D.A.) at 251; 256 Ogilvie Thompson J.A. added that the statement may be made before or after the witnesses for the defence have testified.
94 *1959 (1) S.A. 435 (D.A.).
95 Per Ogilvie Thompson J.A. at 256. It must of course be made to the full court: *R. v. Nelwana, 1955 (1) S.A. 40 (D).
96 Per Steyn J.A. at 253-3.
98 *1959 (3) S.A. 593 (D) at 595.
99 *1959 (1) S.A. 435 (A.D.).
100 See below, pp. 890-891, i.e., 890 ff.
101 Apparently an unsworn statement has been held in England not to be evidence against a co-accused, in R. v. Kennedy and Brown, quoted by R. N. Gooderson in (1952) 1 Carn. L.J., 228, n. 98.
apply if the statement is received as evidence in favour of a co-accused, but the Supreme Court of New South Wales has held that an unworn statement is received only as evidence for the prisoner making it.
It has been suggested that the tripartite choice open to the accused is a controlling one, and that a more comprehensible procedure would be the abolition of the unworn statement, leaving a straightforward choice between evidence on a and silence. The advantages of this simplification are not clear, however, in a society where the vast majority of accused persons are illiterate and undefended. Certainly the abolition of the right to make an unworn statement should under no circumstances precede the establishment of an effective system of legal aid.

B. TESTIMONY ON OATH

1. Accused giving evidence for the defence

Section 227(1) enacts that every accused person is a competent witness for the defence at every stage of the proceedings, on his own application. His decisions to testify at the preparatory examination, at the trial, at a "trial within a trial" where the admissibility of evidence is being tested, are entirely separate ones independent of each other, and more compel him to a particular course on the other. Thus, he may testify at the preparatory examination and not at the trial or on the issue of the voluntariness of a confession but not on the general issue, or only affirmatively on information in mitigation of sentence but not otherwise, if he wishes to testify he has a right to be heard, and it is a gross irregularity for him to be refused the opportunity of doing so. Where he exercises his right to testify at all, he must enter the witness-box and cannot give sworn evidence from the dock.

The accused as a witness is in the same position as an ordinary witness, except that he cannot in cross-examination claim the privilege against self-incrimination in respect of the offence for which he is being tried. Instead, he is given another shield protecting him against cross-examination revealing his bad character and previous convictions. His credit may be attacked by putting

1 See R. v. Kelly (1940) 46 S.R. (N.S.W.) 344. See Z. Coyn and P. B. Carter, Essays on the similarity of confessions was adverted to by Ogilvie Thomson J.A. in R. v. Salk, 1285 (1) S.A.
345 (A.D.) at 256.
3 S. Coyn and Carter, above, p. 218.
4 He cannot therefore be called by the court to establish evidences in the State case, which 8 R. v. Malaktameng (1938) 6 N.P.R. 54; S. v. Mores, 1965 (2) P.H., H. 150 (N). The effect of a decision not to testify is discussed above—sympathised by 136 (A.D.).
9 Sec. 227(3). There is no equivalent provision in Rhodesia, where the court may in its discretion permit the accused (to testify from the dock (R. v. Fidenc, 1963 (2) P.H., H. 152 (S.R.).
11 Sec. 228, on which see below, pp. 60-66. 1419.
his previous inconsistent statements to him, and his evidence may be used to provide corroborative of, or otherwise to strengthen, the State case against him.

The competence and compellability of co-prisoners accused jointly of the same offence is governed by the same rules as where there is only one accused. Each co-accused is competent to testify in his own defence and also for the defence of any of the others, but he cannot only be called to do so on his own application, and is not compellable at the instance of a co-accused even on preliminary issues of the admissibility of evidence. The danger of his consenting to enter the witness-box is of course that he thereby leads himself open to cross-examination by the prosecution not only on the role of the co-accused calling him but on his own complicity as well.

Where A and B are jointly indicted, A's decision to give evidence on his own behalf can hardly avoid affecting B. Whatever A says regarding B's actions is evidence for or against B, whether contained in his evidence in chief or elicited in cross-examination by the prosecution, though the rules relating to accomplice evidence will apply. (It is clear that once A becomes a witness the State may cross-examine him on all relevant matters not only those relating to his own guilt.) In R. v. Zonetza this was qualified by a reference to what is now section 246 of the Code which provides that a confession is not admissible against anyone other than the person making it. Currew C.J. said that if "one of the co-accused makes an admission of his guilt amounting to a confession, though such admission may not be admissible in evidence under section 246 against any other of the accused not only as against himself, the rest of his evidence stands and is admissible like that of any other witness so far as it incriminates any of the other accused ..."

If the learned Chief Justice was merely explaining that in A's admission of his own guilt under cross-examination he was not identified with B for this to operate also as an admission of B's guilt, then the statement is inadmissible.

If, however, it means that A's evidence incriminates B is admissible against B only where A does not at the same time incriminate himself, the statement is both illegal and obiter (since on the facts A's admission does not seem to have referred to B's guilt but only to his own).14

---

8 Unless these amount to incriminable confessions (R. v. G. Athlete, 1939 Q.B. 289 (Q.B.)).

11 Sec. 267 (1).

14 R. v. O. 1918 (1) S.C. 191; R. v. F. 1919 (1) S.C. 191; and R. v. A., 1929 (1) S.C. 191. Presumably the same applies to A, B and C are co-accused, and A in giving evidence for B, incriminates C. See Goodenough, P.D.J., 233, 237. It is submitted that the view taken in S. v. Greenbank, 1969 (3) S.A. 381 (C.A.), that an exception is to be made where the two accused are husband and wife, finds no support in the authorities.

17 Sec. 255 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, No. 21 of 1917.

18 Several cases, however, seem to interpret the judgment according to the latter view: R. v. Patterson, 1947 (1) S.A. 21 (S.C.). See, also, R. v. Fathar, 1930 F.P.D. 528.
Where A's evidence does incriminate B, B may cross-examine him as of right. In S. v. Langw24 the question arose whether B had the same right of cross-examination if A's evidence did not incriminate him. If B availed of the opportunity to elicit evidence in his favour by cross-examining A? Hartcourt J. in his persuasive judgment gave an affirmative answer, but Milne J.P. would have allowed only questioning not cross-examination.25

Another aspect of joint trials to be considered is the position where A has made a previous extrajudicial statement regarding B. Does the fact of a joint trial alter the ordinary rule that a witness's previous statement inconsistent with his present testimony can be put to him as impeaching his credit? If A's previous statement incriminated B and was made to the police it may be inadmissible by virtue of the privilege of informers.26 If not covered by that privilege, even though it is theoretically admissible only to destroy A's credit, it is submitted that for B's protection the statement should be totally excluded in the exercise of the court's discretion. In any event the fact that it is to be proved is a ground on which a separate trial may be ordered.27 If A's evidence incriminates B, no unacceptable prejudice is caused if it is permitted to cross-examine him to show that he made a previous statement favourable to B,28 though the consequent impeachment of A as a witness adversely affects his defence. If A's evidence has not incriminated B, it may be queried whether the adoption of Milne J.P.'s view on B's right to question only would include the possibility of establishing a previous statement favourable to B, as this is a procedure usually associated with the cross-examination favoured by Hartcourt J.

2. Accused as a witness for the prosecution

The common-law incompetence of an accused person to testify for the prosecution at any stage of the proceedings continues for as long as he retains the status of an accused person. Accomplices apply also to the prosecution, except in criminal contempt, which today is no longer a main investigation, but is focused on particular accused individuals. The accused cannot be compelled to convict himself out of his own mouth, and the court's power to call witnesses may not be employed to call the accused for the purpose of strengthening the evidence even if he testified on his own application at an earlier stage of the proceedings.29

---

25 1953 (5) S.A. 943 (N).
27 Certainly the ordinary rule, with some necessary modifications, applies where there is only one accused: R. v. Gallop, 1959 (5) S.A. 266 (B).
29 The principle appears to have been disapproved in this context by the Court of Appeal in R. v. Pink (1921) 1 Q.B. 327, (1931) A.C.R. 425 (C.C.A.)
32 There may be statutory exceptions to this principle, e.g. sec. 6 of Act No. 13 of 1956 (P.C.) makes accused persons competent witnesses for the prosecution on charges of criminal libel. See also the exceptions that have been considered, see V. C. H. H. H., "Abolition of the Right Not to be Questioned" (1958) 5 S.A.L.R. 130.
The common-law doctrine also permits a person to testify for the prosecution against a person charged jointly with him unless he first loses his own status as a co-accused, though the procedure by which he suffers this mutation are essentially "technicalities." Where he thus becomes competent the rules of corroboration relating to accomplice evidence must be observed. A person indicted on a joint trial cannot be an accused person for the purposes of giving evidence for the prosecution in the following ways:

(a) By a separation of trials. Where persons are charged with the same offence but are indicted separately they are not co-accused and each may be called by the prosecution at the other's trial. The same applies where they are indicted jointly and thereafter a separation of trials is ordered. It is however highly undesirable for either to be called after he has been convicted but before he has been sentenced, as he then has an inducement to lessen the evidence and prejudice in the hope of obtaining a more lenient sentence. He remains competent but his evidence in these circumstances is almost valueless. The fact that the State wishes to call one accused against the other is not a sufficient ground on which a separation of trials may be ordered.

(b) By a plea of guilty. Where A and B are jointly indicted, if both plead not guilty, A cannot be convicted and sentenced until the case against B is considered too, for the case is not to be tried in installments. A remains a co-accused and incompetent. If A pleads guilty and B pleads not guilty, the correct procedure at a matter of practice is that the trials should then be separated. But a failure to separate the trials will not invalidate the calling of A to testify against B, even if A could not be convicted on his plea of guilty alone under section 258(1)(b) of the Code, as there is no longer any issue between him and the prosecution in relation to verdicts. There is still an issue between them as to sentence, unless he is sentenced, as is desirable, before being called; if he is sentenced any evidence he gives on his own behalf in mitigation of sentence may be admissible against B but, as against B, will of almost no weight.

---

49 "See the Minister of Justice, in re R. v. Dombrowski, 1951 (1) S.A. 36 (A.D.) at 48-9, per Van der Linde J.A.
50 See above, pp. 289-90.
52 "See the Minister of Justice, in re R. v. De Beer, 1951 (1) S.A. 36 (A.D.) at 39.
53 "See above, p. 154.
54 R. v. Zondi, 1953 T.P.O. 455, per Greenberg J.
58 Failure to prosecute him does not mean that he can claim an indemnity from prosecution under sec. 254. See Ex parte Minister of Justice, in re R. v. Dombrowski, 1951 (1) S.A. 36 (A.D.) at 19-20.
59 In R. v. Zondl, 1923 (3) S.A. 319 (A.D.) at 355, Holmes J.A., cited with apparent approval R. v. Perdson, 1950 E.D. 31 where it was held that A's evidence in mitigation is not admissible against B, but was not so points out that the reason for the practice of separating the trials is to avoid prejudicing B by A's evidence. Furthermore, there is no覆盖 for holding the evidence inadmissible against B. The fact that A pleads, in evidence there is no purpose to be served by the evidence, since B is not called on his evidence in mitigation if it is admissible.
By a nolle prosequi. If the prosecutor enters a nolle prosequi against one accused, as is often done in consideration of his agreeing to give State evidence, he thereupon ceases to be a co-accused and may competently be called for the prosecution. By an acquittal. If one co-accused is acquitted there is no longer any issue between him and the prosecution either as to verdict or sentence, and the same applies under section 8 of the Code, which provides that a withdrawal of the charge after plea entitles the accused to a verdict of acquittal. In both these cases the acquitted prisoner thereupon becomes competent to testify for the prosecution.

VII. COMPPELLABILITY OF ACCOMPLICE

The compellability of persons criminally associated with the accused in the commission of the offence charged is governed by section 254 of the Criminal Procedure Act, which applies to both the preparatory examination and the trial.

This provision, recently amended several times, used to govern only persons believed to be accomplices, but its net has now been widened to include any person who in the prosecutor’s opinion is an accomplice and any person who in the prosecutor’s opinion will be required to answer questions the reply to which would tend to incriminate him in respect of an offence mentioned by the prosecutor. These persons are not merely compulsable but are in addition deprived of the privilege against self-incrimination, in the case of accomplices in so far as questions relating to the crimes charged are concerned, and in the case of other persons, in respect of questions relating to the offence mentioned by the prosecutor. They are not apparently deprived of the privilege for questions relating not to these but to other offences, and should they remain unprotected if their answers incriminate them both in the offence charged or mentioned and also in another crime.

Provided the witness fully answers all such questions to the satisfaction of the court, he is entitled to an indemnity from prosecution in respect of the offence.

11 See section 254 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1923 (3 S.A. 10) (A.D.).

12 This is the effect of the amendment by sec. 29 of the General Law Amendment Act, No. 80 of 1954.

13 The wording of the section cited in this respect in R. v. Nead, 1939 A.D. was “the prosecution.”
charged as mentioned. He answers fully if his answers are frank and honest

9 to the satisfaction of the judge alone, whereas the answers are not considered

10 if he has done so, the provisions of section 254 are peremptory. The witness 11 is entitled as of right to have an indemnity entered on the record, and even if it 12 has not been recorded he can raise it as a bar to prosecution, unless he has 13 forfeited the indemnity under section 254 (3) by failing to give evidence at all stages of the proceedings where he is called. Where the indemnity is not earned,

14

15 he remains liable to prosecution but his evidence cannot then be used against 16 him. 26

The prosecutor must inform the court that the witness's status is governed by section 254, and if the witness has already been convicted of the offence the 18 court should be told of this also, and that he pleaded guilty if such was the case,

17

19 as these facts are relevant to the weight of his evidence. 27 Further, it is the 20 practice for the court to inform the witness of the provisions of section 254, so

21 that he is aware he may lose the protection promised by unsatisfactory testimony. 28 But failure to warn the witness is not an irregularity of which the 23 accused in the case can complain, as it does not form part of the issues between 24 the defence and the prosecution, 29 and by the same token the defendant has no

22

25 right to lead any evidence or to advance any argument to show that the witness

26 is not entitled to his indemnity. 30 As far as a subsequent prosecution of the 27 witness is concerned, a failure to warn could not operate as a bar to the charge.

28

At most, on a somewhat strained analogy with S v. Lume, 31 the admissibility

29 at his trial of his earlier unwarned evidence might be affected.

30

It should not be forgotten that where an accomplice testify under section 254,

31 his evidence will require corroboration in accordance with the mandatory and 32 categorical rules, whereas in the case of the other type of witness contemplated

33 by section 254, only caution, if he has a motive to misrepresent, 34 could be 35 exercised. An accomplice who is awaiting trial, 35 or who has been convicted of 36 the offence but not yet sentenced, 36 cannot be competent to testify for the State.

37

But for him to do so in either case has been held by the Appellate Division to be 38 undesirable. As a matter of practice he should be sentenced before being called,

39 to remove any hope that his own punishment may be lessened by inventing or 40 exaggerating the guilt of the accused. If his trial and sentence have not yet been 41

[Note: Page 30]

42

1 E v. Mainwood, 1939 A.D. 1, per Watermeyer J.A. The learned Judge of Appeal used 43 language which may be read as requiring that his evidence should in addition be accepted as certain, which would be unnecessarily stringent since he may be honestly mistaken or forgetful.

44

45

Facts and evidence can only be judged at the end of the trial, so as to weigh an earlier

46 grating of the indemnity incompetence.

47

48

49

4 See 8. 5

5 E v. Addin, 1959 (3) S.A. 636 (S) at 637.

50

6 E v. Appolika, 1945 B.D.L. 5; Ex parte Minister of Justice; ex R v. Domingo, 1951 (1)

51

S.A. 31 (D.O.D.).

52

53

8 R v. Congavva, 1959 (3) S.A. 227 (A.D.); Schlebusch J.A. mentioned at 219 that the 54 admission of a warning could have appropriately reduced the weight of the evidence, in appropriate

55 circumstances.

56

57

10 See below, p. 860, 175.

58 concluded, the possibility of some such inaccuracy operating accordingly diminishes the weight of his evidence and increases the need for corroborative. 62

VIII. COMPETENCE AND COMPELLEABILITY OF ACCUSED’S SPOUSE

At common law the accused’s spouse was incompetent to testify either for or against him or her, being disqualified both on the ground of interest and from being identified with him as a party to the cause. 63 Though the rule did not apply where the offence charged was one against the spouse’s person, liberty or health. 64 The general incompetence was removed in England at the same time as that of the accused. 65 In South Africa the matter is now comprehensively regulated by statute. 66

For the purpose of determining competence, a spouse is restrictively defined as a person married to the accused by a ceremony which the law recognizes as valid for all purposes. 67 Potentially polygamous marriages are denied such recognition even where there is in fact only one wife, 68 and so are purely religious rites not celebrated in due form by a marriage officer. 69 Transkeian marriages by tribal custom were recognized by law for some purposes and the spouse of such a union was therefore accorded full recognition by the courts for the purposes of determining competency. 70 But section 226(3) of the Criminal Procedure Act has now declared these unions to be excluded from recognition for this purpose in the Transkei as in the rest of the country.

Section 226(1) of the Act renders the spouse of an accused a competent witness for the defence but only on the accused’s application. 71 She cannot, moreover, be compelled to testify against her own will. 72

---

62 See e.g. the judgment of Cretinier C.J. in Demby’s case, above, at 42.
63 See O’Connor v. Marquardsens (1844) 2 H.B. & C. 315 at 319, 335 at 342, 344 B.S. 179 at 181. It is of interest to note that in Roman law, for analogous reasons, the slaves of a master or of his near relatives, and his friends, were incompetent to testify against him (W.W. Backland, A Textbook of Roman Law, 3rd ed. (1930), p. 69, 98).
64 D.P.P. v. Batty (1912) 2 K.B. 60; D.P.P. v. Elenchum (1921) A.A.R. 114. There has been held to be no exception of competence in the case of treason (Crown c. Goldie, 41, 123 R.R. 171) but a priori any such case is free from doubt (see R. Cross, Evidence, 3rd ed. (1960), p. 143).
65 See above, p. 990, n. 7.
66 P. v. Borkers, 1919 9 L.D. 35, Smith, J. held that as there were such statutory provisions any reference to common law under the residual section (now sec. 202 of the Criminal Procedure Act) was unavailing. See, too, Ex parte Minister of Justice: in re R. v. Demby, 1951 (1) S.A. 76 (A.D.); R. v. Aloys, 1965 6 D.L.R., 15.
67 The expansive rigidity of this definition of marriage in a multi-cultural society such as South Africa may be compared with the position in Kenya and Tanganyika, which have removed the distinction between monogamous and other marriages to fit their sentimental competency is concerned. See E. F. Wilson, Evidence in East Africa (1956), pp. 185-9. The learned author adds at 190: "Any distinction between polygamous and monogamous marriages which the former is a status of marrying less than marriage proper, whatever its relation and justification in the law of England, is unrealistic, to say the least, in an African society?"
69 R. v. Mabila (1913) 34 H.L.R. 208.
71 R. v. Smith (1902) 4 M.C. 26. This applies also where the court would wish to call her as a witness: R. v. Juma, 1947 (4) S.A. 238 (C). Notwithstanding E. N. Greenough, 1969 (4) S.A. 363 (C), it is submitted that if the spouse happens to be the ex-accused, her evidence in her own defence is admissible against the accused though not given as his application.
The general incompetence of the accused's spouse to testify for the prosecution remains unchanged, and applies even where in a joint trial she is called to testify not against her husband but only against his co-accused, for there is only one case and the accused spouse is a party to it. At common law this general incompetence continues even after the termination of the marriage by death or divorce, if the events to which the spouse is to testify took place during the coverture. Whether amniment has the same effect depends on whether the defect in the marriage made it void or merely voidable. If the latter, then until it was avoided it was a marriage and the erstwhile spouse remains incompetent. On the other hand, if the marriage was void ab initio the parties to it were never married for the purposes of the spouse's competency as for all other purposes.

The Criminal Procedure Act provides for certain exceptional cases where an accused's spouse may be called to testify for the prosecution. In these cases, of course, the spouse witness remains entitled to invoke the privileges of declining to answer particular questions conferred by sections 229 and 230. Further, if the accused is charged with several counts, the spouse may properly be called by the prosecution to testify against him on some of these only, even if she is not competent in respect of all, though the defence may cross-examine her on all of them.

Section 226(1) of the Act makes the spouse both competent and compellable where the accused is charged with offences against the person of either of them or of their children, with any offence under Chapter III of the Children's Act, bigamy, incest, abduction, certain offences under the Immorality Act, and perjury or statutory perjury arising out of any of the foregoing, offences against the person of the wife comprise only those in the nature of an assault, not those which might otherwise offend or invade her rights. It may have to be considered whether, in the case of statutory offences, the offence is created primarily in the public interest or principally for the protection of the spouse, for only the latter rank as offences against her person. The actual facts of the offence alleged by the prosecution are not of relevant consideration, so that a charge of living on the proceeds of prostitution has been held not to be an offence against the person of the wife even if the earnings are hers and even if she has been forced by the

References:
- The validity or voidability of the marriage is of course tested by South African not by English law; cf. Jorke v. Van der Westhuizen, 1966 S.A. 162 (A.D.) at 154.
- R. v. Ekstein, 1928 C.P.D. 120; R. v. Alter (1936) 1 Q.B. 279 (C.C.A.). In the light of the decisions in (1951) Crim. L.R. 87, the correctness of these cases seems open to serious doubt.
- See below, p. 466, infra.
- Act No. 33 of 1960.
- The evidence excluded in R. v. Kohn, 1928 C.P.D. 328, would not be admissible today at least on the alternative charge, and an abduction is not an offence against the person should have been resolved there by virtue of the common law.
- Act No. 33 of 1957.
accused husband into prostitution.35 The competence of the spouse is not to depend on whether or not her evidence is believed.36

The accused’s spouse is made competent though not compellable while the charge is of an offence against her separate property or under section 16 of the Immorality Act.37 No test of what is her ‘separate property’ is provided. A strict interpretation on the ordinary meaning of the words would apply it only to property excluded from my community of property between the accused and his spouse, but it seems generally agreed that a more generous construction is justified.38 In R v. Young,39 the phrase was held to cover all rights of the wife including rights like possession falling short of ownership, and it has further been suggested40 that the rights in property protected under the Matrimonial Affairs Act41 should be similarly included.

Where the spouse is a competent but non-compellable witness, it is desirable for her to be informed of her position by the court so that she may decide intelligently whether or not she will testify.42

36 Per Mason J. in Ramthum, above, at 449. But there is force in the remarks of Lord J. dissenting, in Blandy’s case, at 91: ‘Until it is known what the evidence is it is impossible to say whether the particular offence does or does not involve such an injury to the person, liberty or health of the wife. It may do so, and that is enough, and if it does it is a wrong which may never be proved unless the wife can give evidence. In my opinion the proper course would have been to admit the evidence of the wife in this case, even though when admitted it might establish an offence against the State rather than the wife.
37 Act No. 23 of 1957.
38 As Charles T. McCormick points out (Handbook of the Law of Evidence [1954], p. 154), the demoralisation of the spouse to testify for the prosecution is an ancient survival of a mystical religious dogma (that husband and wife are one), and of a way of thinking about the marital relation, which are today outmoded.
39 1922 T.P.D. 263.
41 Act No. 37 of 1954.
42 Nadoo v. R. (1931) 22 N.L.R. 430; R v. Osgood, 1939 (1) S.A. 277 (A.D.) at 250.
CHAPTER 1

THE MANNER OF ADDUCING EVIDENCE

Section | Page
--- | ---
A. Introduction | 25
B. Commission, Interrogatories, Certificates and Affidavits | 31
1. Evidence on commission | 31
2. Interrogatories | 34
3. Certificates | 39
4. Affidavits | 37
C. Real Evidence | 40
D. Evidence of Readings from Instruments | 48
E. Documentary Evidence | 42
1. Primary and secondary evidence: ‘best evidence’ rule | 43
2. Proof of documents | 45
3. Proof of handwriting | 46
F. Oral Evidence | 47
I. Oath, affirmation or admonition | 47
II. Examination of witnesses | 48
(a) Evidence in chief | 48
1. Impeaching own witness | 49
2. Witness refreshing memory | 52
3. Previous consistent statements | 53
3.1. Rebutting adverse inference | 54
3.2. Previous identification | 55
3.3. Rebutting afterthought | 55
3.4. Res gestae | 56
3.5. Complaints | 56
A. INTRODUCTION

It is a basic principle of the administration of criminal justice that an accused person should be confronted with the witnesses against him and afforded the opportunity of challenging their evidence. This principle is embodied in section 156(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act, which states that, subject to express exceptions, evidence at a criminal trial shall be given viva voce in open court and in the presence of the accused. Departures from this principle are few and should be limited in scope by narrow statutory construction.

The exceptional cases of which the departure from the accused as the source are discussed in the chapter on Procedure above, where the general principle is also discussed. The oral testimony of witnesses is dispensed with, usually subject to safeguards and in the discretion of the court, to allow evidence to be taken on commission, or proof to be afforded by way of affidavits or certificates, as discussed below. Even in those cases, however, the court retains its overriding power to ensure a fair trial, and may require oral evidence to be tendered instead.

An accused person is entitled to be made aware of what evidence of his guilt is brought before the court. The judicial officer must therefore apply his mind to the question whether the accused understands the language in which the witness testifies and must have an interpreter provided if necessary, even if the accused is represented. In pursuance of the same general principle, the court may not only have the evidence properly presented to it at the trial. The judicial officer may not act on his own private knowledge of the facts, and indeed if he has any must at the least disclose the facts to the parties; his personal may be necessary. It is not irregular for the presiding judge to use such general knowledge and experience as all men would have, but the dividing line between permissible and impermissible knowledge, though it cannot be defined with absolute clarity, must be observed.

The problem was considered by the Appellate Division in R. v. Makep, where, in order to test the identification of the accused as the criminal, the judge had privately inspected, measured and compared certain exhibits (a plaster cast of space found at the scene of the crime, and the accused's boot). This was found not to have been an irregularity, as the judge had in any event been under a duty to inspect the exhibits and his experiments to compare them had been of... a simple and obvious nature requiring no special skills. But Centlivres J.A. nevertheless commented: 6

"I think it is desirable to lay down as a matter of practice that where a trial court pursues a line of investigation not pursued by either party, it should, before reaching a conclusion on the merits of the case, inform the parties of the line of investigation which it proposes to pursue and make the investigation in the presence of the parties. Such a practice will avoid any suspicion on the part of the unsuccessful party that his case has not been fairly

For the court to obtain information privately about the facts of the case, whether from persons who are witnesses or from others, is a gross irregularity. 7

If some evidence is heard at a trial and further accused persons are then joined, the evidence must be given again if it is to be admissible against them. Merely to have it read over is insufficient. 8

Where an inspection in loco is held, if the court wishes to rely on the impression he there forms he must inform the parties of his conclusion so that they may if they wish call evidence to challenge it. 9 The judicial officer should not privately insist the same since it may influence him to draw adverse inferences, but his forbids his acquiescence with the locality is not necessarily an irregularity. 10

Apart from the exceptional cases already mentioned, where certificates, affidavits or the depositions of absent witnesses are expressly permitted, witnesses must attend in person, give oral testimony and be available for cross-examination by the opposing party. 11 A written report cannot be handed in instead, as this would offend against the hearsay rule. 12 Nor may a witness himself merely hand in a report or document embodying his evidence. 13 Where he has such a document it may in appropriate cases be handed in as a convenient record of his oral testimony, 14 but oral testimony there must be, even if only to the effect that the witness confirms the contents of the document. 15

It follows from the last point that the general requirement of viva voce witness is not so rigorous as to exclude supplementing it by other means. 16

R. v. R. 17 A charge of "crimen injuria" the female complainants were permitted to drawn instead of speaking the words alleged to have been uttered by the accused, and the writing was then shown to the Court and to the defence. 18

---

6 At 952-3.

13 The rule against hearsay is discussed at pp. 969 ff., below. See, also, S. v. Cross, 1962 (4) R.A. 706 (O); S. v. Tshuma, 1963 (3) S.A. 502 (E); S. v. Mutia, 1965 (4) S.A. 141 (E); S. v. Moremi, 1966 (1) S.A. 898 (N).

14 R. v. Kayemere, 1938 (3) S.A. 56 (C).

Barker-Montague, 1960 (4) S.A. 423 (T).

18 It is entirely different if the evidence has been written in advance before the witness is actually testifying, a practice which would facilitate the concoction of evidence (R. v. Phathas, 1925 T.P.D. 320).
Nor does the general principle exclude witnesses who are deaf and who testify by gestures and sign language.\textsuperscript{24}

Ex parte statements from the bar may not take the place of evidence, being made neither on oath nor subject to cross-examination, and this applies also to evidence given before the trial (e.g. at the hearing of an application for bail) or after verdict in mitigation or aggravation of sentence.\textsuperscript{25}

\section*{B. COMMISSION, INTERROGATORIES, CERTIFICATES AND AFFIDAVITS}

\subsection*{1. Evidence on Commission}

Where a witness's attendance in person to give evidence in any criminal proceedings would cause unreasonable delay, expenses or inconvenience, application may be made to a superior court to dispense with the witness's attendance and to issue a commission to take his evidence.\textsuperscript{30} The proceedings for which his evidence is desired may be adjourned until it has been obtained.\textsuperscript{31}

This provision is permissive and confers a discretion on the court hearing the application.\textsuperscript{32} Notice of the application must be given to the other parties to the proceedings.\textsuperscript{33} The applicant must set out not only the facts to which the witness is desired to testify,\textsuperscript{34} but also facts to satisfy the court as to the nature, delay, inconvenience, or expense.\textsuperscript{35} If these circumstances are not established, the court cannot act, even if both sides consent to the commission,\textsuperscript{36} or even if the applicant undertakes to produce the witness in person at a later stage.\textsuperscript{37} The procedure should be sparingly invoked, varying as it does the ordinary rules in criminal cases that a witness be examined personally before the court so that he may be cross-examined and his demeanour observed, and that an accused person be confronted with the witnesses against him. A commission should only be granted where no injustice can possibly be done to the other side.\textsuperscript{38} Thus it should not be issued where the evidence of the proposed witness is a vital component of the case or where the credibility and hence the demeanour of the witness is important.\textsuperscript{39} On the other hand, a commission will normally be granted to take evidence of a purely formal nature, which is unlikely to require probing by cross-examination,\textsuperscript{40} or which is merely introductory of and supported by documents that will form part of the deposition.\textsuperscript{41}

\begin{itemize}
  \item \textsuperscript{24} R. v. Mudd, 1956 (2) S.A. 255 (D).
  \item \textsuperscript{25} S. v. Stormans, 1953 (2) B.A. 169 (CJ).
  \item \textsuperscript{30} Standard Bank of S.A., Ltd. v. Minister of Defence, 1964 (2) S.A. 225 (N) at 214 to 215; S. v. Pat Rishombi, 1967 (2) S.A. 622 (T) (CJ, judgment).
  \item \textsuperscript{32} E. v. Smith, 1960 (4) S.A. 759 (CJ).
  \item \textsuperscript{33} See the discussion between evidence and argument, see Matthews v. A., 1948 (1) P.H.L. T. 263 (A.D.).
  \item \textsuperscript{34} See 22(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act.
  \item \textsuperscript{35} S. v. Levy, 1929 A.D. 372 at 371, 312.
  \item \textsuperscript{36} See 22(3).
  \item \textsuperscript{37} R. v. Petersen, 1967 T.C.S. 91.
  \item \textsuperscript{38} Attorney-General of South West Africa v. Kroghhuyser, 1923 S.W.A. 33.
  \item \textsuperscript{39} E. v. April (1936) 2 Cape L.J. 110.
  \item \textsuperscript{40} Attorney-General of South West Africa v. Kaapzicht, 1923 S.W.A. 33 at 24.
  \item \textsuperscript{41} Attorney-General of South West Africa v. Kroghhuyser, 1923 S.W.A. 33 at 24.
  \item \textsuperscript{43} Attorney-General v. Moorcroft, 1933 N.P.D. 741. The principle is otherwise in civil cases, as to which see Robinson v. Kroghhuyser Estates Gold Mining Co., Ltd., 1918 T.P.D. 428.
  \item \textsuperscript{44} See the house v. Skulskilaw v. Roberts, 1946 N.P.D. 12.
  \item \textsuperscript{45} See also Attorney-General in re R. v. Filly, 1931 O.P.D. 46.
\end{itemize}
Where the commission is granted on the application of the prosecution, in the discretion of the court the State may be ordered to bear the accused's costs of representation at the examination. The accused's entitlement to this assistance is not automatic; he must put forward his lack of means to show he would otherwise be prejudiced in his defence.

If the court grants the application and the witness is within the Republic, a commission is issued to a magistrate, who takes down the evidence in the same way as in a preparatory examination. If the commission is to be executed outside the Republic, the rules governing commissions de bonae fide apply. After having been executed, the commission must be returned, with the witness's deposition, to the court issuing it. It is then open to the inspection of both parties and it may be read in evidence and subjected to objections as to admissibility. It is only then that the deposition becomes part of the evidence on record in the proceedings. It should not be supplied to the court before the trial, but heard for the first time with the other evidence.

Where a foreign court requires evidence to be taken from a witness in the Republic, a similar procedure is provided for by the Foreign Courts Evidence Act, 1942.

2. Interrogatories

Any party to criminal proceedings in which a commission is issued may transmit interrogatories relevant to the issue to the person directed to take the evidence, who must examine the witness on the interrogatories. The witness may also be orally examined by or on behalf of any party to the proceedings in the same way as if he were testifying in court. Interrogatories may also be submitted by the court under section 239 of the Code, which provides for the admissibility in certain cases of affidavit evidence. The court to which such an affidavit is produced may in its discretion require oral evidence from the deponent or may cause written interrogatories to be submitted to him. The interrogatories and any reply purporting to be from the deponent are admissible as evidence in the proceedings, subject of course to the ordinary rules.

3. Certificates

Where a statute provides for certificates to be admissible in evidence, the provisions of that statute must be strictly observed, whether as to the form, content or signature to the certificate. The purpose of such provisions is to reduce the inconvenience and expense which would be occasioned were the personal attendance in court of officials invariably insisted on. It is therefore unnecessary to have evidence authenticating the seals or signatures on a certificate.

---

1 Sec. 327(1).
3 See Sec. 327(2).
4 Sec. 327(3). See R v. Thay Tham, 1914 T.P.D. 583; Attorney-General of South West Africa v. Kheswa, 1927 S.W.A. 31 at 36.
7 Art No. 53 of 1962.
8 See below, p 626, 9.4.
9 Wolfs v. Van Brandenburg, 1921 C.P.D. 36. certificate unless these are challenged, and certificates may be put in from the bar.

As a rule certificates are received only in proof of formal matters which are unlikely to be challenged, but provisions is occasionally made for calling the maker of the certificate to give oral evidence and he cross-examined on it. It is almost always provided that the certificate is prima facie evidence of its contents, so that its truth may be relied upon unless challenged. Where its accuracy is disputed, the evidence in contradiction must be such as to cast doubt upon the statement that it would be unsafe to rely upon the certificate. If the evidence does not create such a conviction in the mind of the court, the statutory prima facie weight remains undisturbed. What evidence will be to challenge a certificate successfully is a question of the circumstances in a case, but factors relating to the source of the maker’s knowledge will be relevant.

4. Affidavits

The admissibility of affidavits in lieu of oral testimony is increasingly permitted under statutory exceptions to the general principle that evidence be given in open court and subject to cross-examination.

Apart from special statutes, section 239 of the Criminal Procedure Act allows evidence to be tendered by way of affidavit to establish that something has or has not transpired in a public office, court of law or bank; that information was or was not furnished to an official; that a signature registration has or has not taken place; a large range of topics of a scientific or technical nature, covering the physical, biological and forensic fields of knowledge; and to establish the accuracy of railway consignment notes. In every case it must be read in open court as to be brought to the knowledge of the other side.

The affidavit must comply strictly with the provisions of the section, and must confine itself narrowly to the matters regarding which it is permitted. It should contain all facts and explanations as oral evidence on the same points would provide. The court is given the power under section 239(6) to require the government to attend and testify in person, or to submit interrogatories to him, end should exercise these powers whenever the affidavit requires elucidation or correction.

As to the attesting of affidavits, reference should be made to the Sections of the Peacetime and Commotions of Oaths Act, 1951, and the government notices thereunder.

C. REAL EVIDENCE

Objects produced to the court as exhibits have been called real evidence. As a rule such exhibits are of little evidential value unless accompanied by testimony. For example, the witness producing the exhibit will testify that it was found at the scene of the crime, or bears the accused’s fingerprints, etc. If it is the complainant, that is the object which was stolen from him. Evidence concerning objects may be received without the objects having to be produced as exhibits. Thus in R. v. Smith, where the accused was charged with stealing a motor-car, there was evidence from a fingerprint expert that he had found the accused’s fingerprints on the window of the car and on an empty brandy bottle left in it. Neither the bottle nor a photograph of the prints was produced, but the expert’s evidence was nevertheless admitted. While it would certainly have made it easier for the court to follow and appreciate the evidence had it been able to inspect those objects, the failure to produce them was held to affect only to the cogency of the testimony.

The principle of R. v. Smith may apply to documents if they are tendered as things, as for example, where theft of a document is in issue. If, however, the issue turns on the contents of the document, secondary evidence concerning its terms is inadmissible and the original document itself must be produced. By the same token, if a thing is in the nature of a document, because words inscribed upon it are in issue, then primary evidence—the thing itself with its inscription—must be produced.

The appearance of a person who is in court is real evidence of his race for the purposes of the various statutes under which racial classifications are necessary. A child’s appearance may be evidence of his age for the purposes of a judicial estimate under section 383 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1955. A physical resemblance between persons is some evidence of relationship where descent or legitimacy is in issue, though it is of trifling weight. The observable bodily features of the accused or complainant—e.g. the scars or marks he bears, his strength, height, and so forth—are part of the evidence before the court. In addition to what the court can itself observe, provision is made for fingerprints, palm prints, and fingerprints to be taken, and for medical and psychiatric investigation of the accused to be undertaken if necessary without the accused’s consent being required. The prints and the results of such investigations of course have to be proved by the person who took them. 46
A person's clothing may also be evidence, which is why the accused should not be permitted to produce the dock wearing prison clothes or manacles, as this has been held to be equivalent to leading evidence of his bad character or previous curiosities. 47
Photographs of relevant scenes or objects may be handed in provided there is evidence from the photographer identifying their subject-matter, and he may of course be examined as to whether they have been retouched in any way. 48 A photograph or accidental scene of the scene of the crime containing a reconstructive scene of events, if admissible at all, 49 should not be shown to witnesses, as it would suggest to them the evidence required from them. 50 Where a film or photograph is taken by purely mechanical means, without human agency, it is admissible even though evidence as to its making cannot be given as it would be by a cameraman. 51
Tape recordings of speeches or conversations are admitted as real evidence, and must be accompanied by testimony identifying the voices and the occasion; in addition the person who made the recording must prove that it has not been tampered with. 52 It is desirable that they should be evidence to the circumstances and manner in which the tape was made, as these factors affect the weight and cogency of the tape as evidence. 53 A transcript of the tape, and translations if it records speech in a foreign language, may also be received if their accuracy is established. 54
Although the purpose of an inspection in loco held by the court 55 is usually told to be to enable the providing officer to appreciate more readily the testimony of the witnesses, 56 it has also been recognized that the court does thereby acquire information at least analogous to real evidence and of a particularly vivid and cogent kind. 57 Unlike in England, however, the courts in South Africa do not allow information to acquire so acquired to outweigh all other evidence as to to found a judgment on it alone. 58 More dubious, both on principle and on authority, are 46 Official records of Departments are admissible on their mere production, and extracts from them may also be proved by telegram under sect. 106 of the Criminal Procedure Act. evidence would obviously not be required if the photographs are admitted as objects, e.g. they were sufficient to show the contents of the room. The admissibility of duplicate prints is discussed in (1959) 60 A.J. 264 at 291.

48 A biased conversation was excluded in R. v. Queen and Dower (1963) 2 Q.B. 285, (1963) 3 A.E.R. 20. Since then, the danger of inaccurate testimony has been disregarded. As to a police accident see on the evidence v. Randels Appearance Corp. of S.A., Ltd., 1919 (3) S.A. 514.
50 See also v. Library, 1957 W.L.R. 315; E. v.鹅 1952 (3) S.A. 35; E. v. Donohue, 1953 (1) S.A. 433 (7); E. v. Furse, 1949 (1) S.A. 159.
51 E. v. Rhodes, 1949 (4) S.A. 238 (C).
52 E. v. Furse, 1949 (4) S.A. 238 (C).
54 See generally the cases cited in note 49, supra, and in the cases cited in note 49, supra.
56 I have to which are generally admissible.
the South African decisions which hold that what is said and done by witnesses at the inspection is not evidence at all. In this respect the English law seems preferable.

D. EVIDENCE OF READINGS MADE BY MECHANICAL, ELECTRIC OR ELECTRONIC INSTRUMENTS

There is no presumption of fact that measuring instruments are usually reliable. Van den Heever J. explained why not in R. v. X where, without more, evidence of a speedometer reading was tenden:

• I have seen thermometers registering between 0 and 50. I have seen aecords and charts not functioning at all, or flagrantly. To my mind the readiness of an individual instrument at any particular time, when itself tested in itself, do not carry conviction... Most legislator have taken deliberate precautions in regard to standards of weights and measures to protect the citizen's pocket. I do not think it was intended to jeopardise his liberty by such slapdash methods as these.

While, therefore, the courts will receive evidence of readings taken by instruments, without any principle analogous to the rule against hearsay being invoked, a foundation for its reception should first be laid. If the reading was given by an instrument with which the average citizen is familiar, such as a stopwatch, there must be evidence that its accuracy was tested. If it is a less familiar instrument of technical or specialist nature, there must be clear evidence, including expert evidence, to establish that the instrument is of a kind capable of giving an accurate measurement, and it must then be proved that the particular model from which the reading in the case was taken was at the time operating reliably and accurately.

E. DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

I. Primary and Secondary Evidence: the Best Evidence Rule

The terms 'primary' and 'secondary' are sometimes applied to oral as well as documentary evidence, being used to indicate respectively whether best evidence of a matter is being given or a relatively inferior substitute. In respect of oral evidence the distinction is more accurately made by the term 'original evidence' and 'hearsay', leaving the terms 'primary' and 'secondary' applicable relatively to the field of documentary evidence. Where a document which is relevant is itself produced to the court, it is said to be primary evidence of its own contents, where some derivative, inferior or substitute proof of its contents is offered, the evidence is said to be secondary. Where the contents of a document are in issue, proof of those contents must be afforded by the production of the document itself, to the exclusion of secondary evidence. This insistence on primary evidence, while historically justifying the formulation of the 'best evidence' rule, is today cited as the only remaining survival of that rule. Where it applies, no evidence of the document's contents other than the document itself is admissible. Thus, evidence as to the state shown in the Deeds Registry as registered owner of property was held inadmissible in R. v. Hinde, 1939 A.D. 190, where the deeds themselves should have been produced, and in R. v. Pembridge, 1939 A.D. 336, the Appellate Division refused to admit the counterfoils of lottery tickets in proof of the contents of the tickets. The case of two non-foil copies tendered in Pembridge should be distinguished from cases where an instrument is at its making actually executed in duplicate, which brings into existence more than one original. 29 A shorthand writer's notes subsequently transcribed are not the original writings but merely stages in the production of the original, so that it is the transcript which is primary evidence.

The principle is of application only where the document is in itself the best evidence. Thus it is not by its very nature suggest the existence of better evidence. The mere fact that a relevant document exists does in itself mean it is primary evidence of its contents, e.g. minutes of a meeting are secondary ev. '.. of the fact that it was held, whereas oral evidence from a person who attested would be primary evidence. By the same token, no document need be produced if the issue is whether a particular relationship or status existed, even if the relationship or status has been defaced in a written instrument, since it is said that the terms of the writing are not in issue. Thus, the issue of whether payments were made on royalties or as remuneration for services was held, in Festone S.A. (Pty.) Ltd. v. Gentins A.G., 1956 C.P.D. 329, not to require production of the agreement defining the relationship between the giver and the recipient.

Where there is no question of the terms of a document, where all that is sought to be established is the fact of some relationship between the parties, the rule of best and secondary evidence does not come into operation at all; the fact of the relationship may be proved by parol evidence, although the terms which govern it may have been reduced to writing, such evidence may be convincing in every degree, and it may not be as convincing as the production of the document itself, but it is not incompetent because it is parol, and it is not secondary evidence in the sense of the rule. 30

When the contents of the document are what is in issue, production of the primary evidence normally required may be excused in certain circumstances and 29 1939 (2) A.S. 274 (T). The Court pointed out that a certified extract from the Deeds Registry should have been tendered, under sec. 264 of the Criminal Code. But see R. v. Mayor, 1866 T.P.D. 472.

30 1934 A.D. 190.
31 1949 A.D. 190.
32 1934 C.P.D. 329.
33 1946 A.D. 190.
34 1956 (4) S.A. 402 (N) at 405-4.
35 1956 (6) S.A. 383 (N) at 390. See also, Ex p. Curatorship of Child Welfare in or Embatt, 1954 (4) S.A. 181 (N) at 187. Minutes of proceedings are made admissible, e.g. minutes of meetings, by sec. 46(2) of the Companies Act, No. 4 of 1956, and by sec. 28(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act.
36 1948 (2) A.S. 511 (A) at 524-5.
secondary evidence received. These exceptional situations are four:

(a) Where production of the original document is impossible, either legally or physically. Secondary evidence is therefore admissible when, for example, it would be an offence to remove the document from its present location, or where it has been lost and cannot be found after proper search. A document is not considered to be lost where there is still a hope, albeit only a sanguine one, of its recovery. The loss and the incapacity of the search must be established before the secondary evidence is put in.

(b) Where the document is outside the jurisdiction of the court and either all reasonable efforts to procure it have been made and have failed, or it can be demonstrated that any such efforts are deemed to have failed.

(c) Where the other party has admitted the contents of the document or has consented to the introduction of secondary evidence. The ordinary rules of proof in criminal cases will apply. A mere failure to contest the admissibility of the secondary evidence is not to be construed as a consent, nor is an admission of the accuracy of the secondary evidence.

(d) Where the document is in the possession of the other party who has failed or refused after notice to produce it.

In any of the foregoing cases where primary evidence is dispensed with, any type of secondary evidence may be tendered—copies, oral evidence, etc. At common law there are no degrees of secondary evidence. However, where by statute secondary evidence of a particular type is rendered admissible in a situation where as common law the original would be required, other forms of secondary evidence remain excluded. For example, although the Motor Carrier Transportation Act, 1930, relaxes the common-law insistence on the original document by authorizing the production in evidence of a certified copy of a licence instead of the original, the Act is not to be construed as authorizing a copy of the licence to be certified.

---

Footnotes:

4. See Lord Halsbury, 1907 (2) S.A. 678 (QJ). Miller J.P. considered (at 679) that a document was lost if it could not be found, although its existence is presumed, the precise place of its existence cannot be proved by second-hand evidence. Therefore, insofar as anyone who can reasonably be expected to have known it, and it cannot be found.
1 Proof of Documents

The manner in which a document may be put in evidence is governed by rules quite distinct from those governing the evidentiary use which may be made of the document. We are concerned here only with the former. The effect of a document once it is properly before the court—for example, whether it is evidence of its contents or whether it may be put to a witness to attack his credibility or used by him to refresh his memory—is a separate question.

Documents may be of two kinds, distinguished according to the manner by which they become evidence. The one category consists of those documents which need not be authenticated by a witness producing them and testifying to their execution, i.e., they are documents which "prove themselves" and become evidence on their mere production. The other category covers documents which require authenticating evidence for their reception.

The documents which prove themselves are almost exclusively public or official. At common law public documents coming from the proper official custody are admissible in evidence on their mere production, and in addition require the keeping of records or registers or the issue of warrants or certifying generally provide that the documents prepared thereunder prove themselves. Proof of the genuineness of official signatures and seals is not a prerequisite of admissibility unless it is challenged. Production of the original of official documents from a State official requires the consent of the attorney-general. Copies can be obtained and are admissible, but are not self-identifying.

However, if they are authenticated by way of an official certificate the latter apparently proves itself. The foregoing does not apply to foreign official acts, for the public documents of a foreign country always require authentication.

The only private documents which prove themselves are those that are authenticated by their age, partly because it is said that it is unlikely that anyone would forge a document which would only be of assistance many years later, and partly because of the difficulty or impossibility after the lapse of a long period of obtaining a witness who could give authenticating evidence. Accordingly, the ancient documents rule provides that documents no more than twenty years old, coming from the proper custody and which are not on their face suspicious, become evidence without proof of their due execution. A limitation for their reception must of course be laid by evidence as to the age.

---

1 Referring should also be made to the rules of State and Federal codes, above, p. 608-9.
2 1st Johns v. Ely (1810) 4 Camp. 371, 375, 10 E.R. 118; 1 Stark. 197, 177 E.R. 549.
3 Sec. 323 of the Criminal Procedure Act; see also Williams v. Lord (1840) 1 M. &. G. 671.
5 1st Sec. 302 of the Criminal Procedure Act.
6 Sec. 258, 259.
7 Sec. 201, 202.
8 1st Sec. 201, 202.
10 1st Sec. 280, 281. of the documents as to its custody whence they came. The letter must be a stare in which one would reasonably expect to have found the documents had they been authentic, but it need not be the only or even the most proper custody.60

There is no restriction on the type of document which can be tendered as ancient—wills, contracts, letters, accounts, etc. Ancient copies of documents may also come in in this way provided production of the original is excused under the best evidence rule.61

Where the document is not self-identifying, because it is neither public nor secret, it can only be put in evidence by a witness who can testify as to its authenticity, e.g. the person who executed it, or one who saw the execution or who can identify its maker from the handwriting or other features.62 If the witness declares knowledge of the document it cannot be put in through him.

If witnesses to the execution of the document were required by law as a condition of its validity, then the document can only be proved by calling one of the attesting witnesses. If any attesting witness was available at common law or other evidence of the document's execution was admissible, not even that of its maker.63 Since 1962,64 however, the common-law rule applies only to testatory documents. In all other cases the document may now be proved as if no attesting witness was alive, which means by proof of the signature of the attesting witness.65

While the attesting witness must testify, his evidence need not, to render the document admissible, favor its authenticity, nor is it conclusive or even necessarily sufficient proof of due execution.66 There is conflicting authority on whether the need to call him persists even where the party against whom the document is tendered has admitted its execution.67

Once a document has been properly received in evidence neither party has any right to alter it, nor has the court power to authorize an alteration.68

Conversely, if the document is (albeit improperly) altered, the court cannot order it to be restored to its original state, though the fact of alteration can of course be proved in evidence.69

There is no requirement that documents be stamped before being used in a criminal court.70

3. Proof of Handwriting

Evidence to identify a person's handwriting may be given by any person who is familiar with it.71 The evidence of a handwriting expert is not a necessity.

---

63 P. v. Death (1921) C.R.D. 361. See also S.E. Whitton, 1938 P.D. 257 at 251-2.
64 P. v. C. J. (1925) 3 Ex. 260, 153 E.R. 1274. See also the discussion by Wigmore, 65 1, 129.
66 Sec. 4 of the Evidence Act, 1948, as read with sec. 44 and the Schedule to the 67 1 Ex. 39 of the Evidence Act, 1948. See also sec. 44 and the Schedule to the 68 1925 B.K. (N.C.) 172. See also Wigmore, § 1102.
69 1925 B.K. (N.C.) 172. See also Wigmore, § 1102.
70 1925 B.K. (N.C.) 172. See also Wigmore, § 1102.
Section 248 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1955, allows the authorship of a disputed piece of writing to be proved by comparing it with other writing already proved, to the satisfaction of the presiding officer, to be genuine. The genuine writing used for the comparison need not be otherwise relevant to the issue. It seems from R. v. De Klerk that the comparison need not be made by an expert in handwriting. Any witness whose opinion would assist the court may be asked about it. Or the court may itself make the comparison, unassisted by any witness, though it is of course dangerous for it to do so. Indeed, no sensible are opions as to handwriting, even those of an expert, that the courts have expressed the greatest reluctance to convict on that alone. There is, however, no rule that in principle a conviction cannot be founded solely upon the evidence of a handwriting expert, in the unlikely event of the court being convinced by it beyond a reasonable doubt.

F. ORAL EVIDENCE

I. OATH, AFFIRMATION OR ADNOMPTION

No witness may testify or be examined without being upon oath, and the admission of unsworn oral evidence is an irregularity.

Not everyone appearing before a court is a witness for this purpose. A person summoned sworn servant to produce documents need not be sworn unless he is required to prove those documents, i.e., not if they prove themselves or are to be proved by another witness. In R. v. Badden, the holder of the Court had repeated in louder tones what was said by certain witnesses who were testifying very softly. He was held not to have sworn as a witness. On the other hand, an interpreter is a species of expert witness, and interpreted evidence is unsworn unless both he and the witness whose testimony he interprets are upon oath.

The oath must be administered to the witness in the form which most clearly conveys to him its meaning and which he considers binding upon his conscience. By the usual form established in South African practice the witness swears that he will tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, at the same time holding up the fingers of the right hand or placing the bible, and in either case invoking the name and aid of the deity. This is normally administered in question and answer form as a kind of stipulation, but the witness is upon oath, even if he merely nods or raises a respons.

---

8 Terry v. Gibson (1894) 1 All. 95; 89 L.R. 11725; Wanase v. Ahlers, 1934 O.P.D. 157.
9 (1915) 1 M.R. 100.
10 S. v. van der Spuy, 1923 (2) S.A. 635 (A.D.).
13 A similar objection procedure is announced in (1926) 127 S.B. 216.
14 R. v. Motshwane, 1947 (2) S.A. 717 (Q); S. v. Kho 1943 (3) S.A. 897 (A.D.).
If the usual form of oath would not be binding upon the witness's conscience, the presiding officer must ascertain by inquiry from the witness what alternative form should be adopted. In Elandskop Trading Co., Ltd. v. Min.86 Henniker J., faced with a Muslim witness, in addition made the necessary inquiries also from a priest of the Islamic faith, to ensure that the outward form of the oath was according to the tenets of the witness's religion.

At common law persons who would not have considered themselves bound by some form of oath were held incompetent to testify even though they recognized the obligation to tell the truth.87 Section 221 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1955, gives persons who object to taking the oath the privilege, of making an affirmation instead,88 in a prescribed form. A witness who has affirmed is to be regarded for all purposes with a witness who has sworn, so that, for example, his evidence may be the subject of a charge of perjury.89

Where the court finds90 that a witness does not understand or recognize the obligation arising from an oath or affirmation he may be admonished to speak the truth.91 It is not the practice in South Africa to ask the witness aside for instruction upon the oath.92 Lord De Villiers CJ93 was of the view that a witness's ignorance of the nature of an oath could be regarded as diminishing the weight of his evidence, but unless that knowledge is in some way relevant to his understanding of the issues there does not seem to be any legal basis for the reasoning, since the obligation to speak the truth must have been understood for the witness to be competent at all.94

Whether a witness has taken the oath, affirmed or been admonished should be noted upon the record.95

II. EXAMINATION AND REPERUTATION OF WITNESSES

In the normal course of events (which may to some extent be varied in the discretion of the court) the examination of a witness called by the prosecutor proceeds in various stages.96 The first gives evidence in chief, or 'direct' evidence, led by the party who called him. Thereafter the opposite party cross-examines him in an attempt to throw the effect of the evidence in chief. Cross-examination may be reserved until a later stage in the proceedings, with the permission of the court.97

The party calling the witness may be able to rehabilitate the witness's evidence and counter the results of the cross-examination by re-examination. In addition, the witness may be examined by the judicial officer.98

(c) EVIDENCE IN CHIEF

By his witness's evidence in chief, a party lays before the court all the evidence he has supporting his case, subject to the rules of admissibility. Neither party is

---

86 1952 (7) R.A. 162 (97).
89 Sec. 221(1) and (2).
91 Sec. 222 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1955, the form of the affirmation is laid down.
92 See, too, Zimbeleka (1939) 2 S.A. 265 at 266.
93 See, too, Zimbeleka (1939) 2 S.A. 265 at 266.
94 See, too, Zimbeleka (1939) 2 S.A. 265 at 266.
95 See, too, Zimbeleka (1939) 2 S.A. 265 at 266.
96 See, too, Zimbeleka (1939) 2 S.A. 265 at 266.
97 See, too, Zimbeleka (1939) 2 S.A. 265 at 266.
98 See, too, Zimbeleka (1939) 2 S.A. 265 at 266.
obliged to convince the court in advance as to the relevancy of a particular witness's testimony. A witness may be led through his evidence by question and answer or be permitted simply to narrate his story uninterrupted. There are no fixed rules as to the extent to which one or other method is adopted. If questions are asked they cannot be in the form of leading questions. Whether a question is leading or not depends not so much upon the form or phrasing but upon the circumstances of the case. It is a leading question if it is suggestive of the desired answer or invites a reply founded upon controverted or unproved facts. The reason for the prohibition on leading questions is that the witness is supposed to be in sympathy with the party calling him, so that he would be inclined to co-operate by readily adopting the suggested answer, and this would invite the presentation of a prearranged version of the facts. Where this reasoning does not apply leading questions are permitted, i.e. where the witness is not disposed to fall in with the questioner's suggestions because he is hostile or where there is little motive to accept false suggestions, as in regard to introductory matter such as the witness's name, address and occupation. The court has discretion to permit leading questions in cases where there is no other way of eliciting the evidence e.g. to direct the witness's attention to the topic on which facts are required of him or to get a direct contradiction of what another witness has said.

1. Impeaching own Witness

Examination in chief must be confined to matters relevant to the issues in the case. A party who calls a witness is considered to put him forward as a person worthy of belief. Evidence that the witness is honest may be excluded unless his character has first been attacked by the opponent. For the same reason, if the party finds his witness is turning out to be unfavourable (where, for example, he does not give the evidence expected from him, or where his version is broken down in cross-examination), he cannot impeach the witness's credit still further by cross-examining him as to credit or by leading evidence to discredit him. Faced with an unfavourable witness, there are only three possible courses of remedial action open to the calling party:

(i) Evidence in contradiction. A party has a right to call as much evidence as he can to establish his case. This right is not affected by one of his witnesses having given unfavourable evidence. Further or additional evidence on facts

---

6 Ex parte Gluten (1967) 2 K.R. 34. Particularly close examiners may be found in R. v. Wilson (1915) 9 Cr. App. 129 at 136 and in Moore v. Moore (1944) 2 All E.R. 438 (C.C.A.);
7 Witwatersrand Law Society, 3rd ed. (1940), III, 413-432.
8 See below, p. 404 et seq.
13 Ex parte Gluten (1967) 2 K.R. 34 at 36, 37, 38.
15 Witwatersrand Law Society, 3rd ed. (1940), III, 413-432.
17 Witwatersrand Law Society, 3rd ed. (1940), III, 413-432.
19 Witwatersrand Law Society, 3rd ed. (1940), III, 413-432.
relevant to the issues may still be led as of right even if its effect is indirectly to discredit the unfavourable witness.

(ii) Previous inconsistent statement. The provision to section 285 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1955, introduces a departure from the English law by providing that a party who has called a witness who has given evidence in any (original) proceedings (whether that witness is or is not, in the opinion of the judge or judicial officer presiding at such proceedings, adverse to the party calling them) may, after the said party or the said judge or judicial officer has asked the witness whether he has or has not previously made a statement with which his evidence in the said proceedings is inconsistent, and after sufficient particulars of the alleged previous statement to disprove the contrary, has it was made, have been communicated to the witness, prove the previous statement to be true or a part of the which its said evidence is inconsistent.

If a party is aware that his witness has made a previous inconsistent statement, it is his duty to prove it. In P. v. Loofe66 it was said that if the witness has made several previous statements, some consistent and some inconsistent with the testimony, it is better to put them all up, but the better view is that if the previous statement is not demonstrably inconsistent with the evidence it cannot be used at all. On the other hand, if the previous statements are in distinct parts, each as separate letters, each of which is consistent with the witness's evidence through their combined effect is to contradict it, they are still admissible.67

The witness must be given an opportunity to explain and comment upon the contradiction,68 and may be asked whether the truth is contained in his previous statement or in his present testimony,69 but he cannot be cross-examined upon the previous statement unless he has first been declared hostile70 by the court. Nor, of course, can the statement be regarded as evidence of its contents. It is admissible solely to impeach the witness's credit.71

If the witness does not admit making the statement evidence to prove it in the ordinary way is necessary, e.g. if it was recorded in a document, the accuracy of the transcription must be shown, and so forth.72

Parties who anticipate the detection of a witness often take the precaution of recording a statement from him. The courts have frequently expressed disapproval of the practice whereby a prospective witness is asked or, worse, compelled to swear to such a statement so that the threat of a perjury charge is held over the witness's head. A witness giving evidence in court should not be 'intimidated, induced, instructed or threatened,' but free of outside influence should feel at liberty to depart from what he has already said if he comes to the conclusion that he was wrong. Competition or intimidation in this regard may so vitiate a witness's reliability that no credit can be attached to what he says to support a conviction. For a witness to be arrested on a charge of perjury while the trial is still in progress is also obviously undesirable because of the effect it may have upon the remaining witnesses.

(iii) Hostile witnesses. Where a witness, by his conduct in the box, shows himself to be adverse, the party calling him may ask the court to declare the witness to be 'hostile' and to permit the examination in chief to be conducted as a cross-examination. Whether the witness is declared hostile or not is solely in the discretion of the presiding officer at the trial, and an appeal court or reviewing judge will be very reluctant to disagree with the trial judge if there are exceptional circumstances.

If the permission of the court is denied, the calling party may then cross-examine his own witness as to the issues. A party cannot reverse the procedure by first cross-examining his witness and then on the basis of the answers ask the court to declare him hostile.

A witness is hostile if he shows an unfair bias against the party calling him, or that he does not wish to tell the truth at that party's instance. It is largely a question of his demeanour in the box, e.g., if he is reticent, evasive and contradictory. The fact that the witness gives evidence unfavourable or unexpected by the party calling him, his relationship with the opposing party, or that he has made previous statements inconsistent with his present testimony, are all relevant indications which the court may take into account, but none of these is conclusive.

There is conflicting authority at common law as to whether a necessary witness, i.e., a witness whom a party is compelled to call, such as one who is absent, can be cross-examined by the calling party without leave of the court.

---

103. In the words of Simeon: In the v. Silverman, 1934 W.L.D. reported in (1949) 65 S.A.L.J. 125 at 129.
105. The fact that the witness gives evidence unfavourable or unexpected by the party calling him, his relationship with the opposing party, or that he has made previous statements inconsistent with his present testimony, are all relevant indications which the court may take into account, but none of these is conclusive.
106. ibid., 43 S.A.L.J. 209 at 216 states authority that a hostile witness cannot be cross-examined as to truth. But, on principle, cross-examine the witness on previous inconsistent statement is not illegal, and is doubtless permissible.
107. R. v. Balaam, 1952 (3) S.A. 1133 (R.R.);
110. ibid., 43 S.A.L.J. 209 at 216 states authority that a hostile witness cannot be cross-examined as to truth. But, on principle, cross-examine the witness on previous inconsistent statement is not illegal, and is doubtless permissible.
111. ibid., 43 S.A.L.J. 209 at 216 states authority that a hostile witness cannot be cross-examined as to truth. But, on principle, cross-examine the witness on previous inconsistent statement is not illegal, and is doubtless permissible. court and even if not hostile, but the question appears never to have been considered in South Africa.

2. Witness refreshing memory

A witness may refresh his memory during his evidence by referring to notes or memoranda. Usually the memoranda are documents—a policeman’s notebook, hospital records, or a family Bible—but the same principles apply where they are in other forms. If the witness wishes to refresh his memory from memoranda while testifying in court, the memoranda must first be proved to comply with certain conditions, but these are not applicable if the witness is asked to look at documents by the opponent during his cross-examination.

For a party’s own witness to refresh his memory, the document must have been made by the witness at the time when he had a clear recollection of the facts, or, if made by someone else, must have been read by the witness and accepted by him as correct while he had such recollection. Thus in Anderson v. Whalley, a ship’s captain was permitted to refresh his memory regarding a navigational accident from the ship’s log, although the log had been kept by the master, since the captain had read and approved it about a week after the accident when the events were fresh in his mind. Of course if the witness had no personal knowledge of the facts recorded, i.e., where he had no memory of the facts which could be refreshed, he cannot refer to memoranda prepared by others or by himself in deposition on the knowledge of others. Whether the witness had a clear recollection of the facts at the time the memorandum was made or read is a question of fact in every case. There is no fixed time limit and exact contemporaneity of the notes with the facts recorded is not required. It has been held that the memoranda should have been prepared ante diem naturae, but this does not apply to expert witnesses or those in a similar position, so that a physician may refer to his report even though it was made expressly for the purposes of litigation.

If the witness at the time of testifying still retains some independent recollection of the facts, he may refresh his memory from copies or extracts of the memoranda, but the original memorandum is required if he has no independent recollection and can tell the court only what is in the notes, e.g., where he says in effect “I do not remember the facts, but it must have been so because that is what...”

---

Footnotes:

I wrote down. If the original cannot be produced a copy may be used provided it is proved to be accurate.

If a witness wishes to refresh his memory from notes they must be produced. They need not be admissible in themselves, but if disclosure is not desired because a privilege is being claimed in respect of them the witness cannot refer to them. It is essential that the documents be available for the court and the opponent to inspect those portions to which the witness has referred, so that he may be cross-examined on them. The court may in its discretion refuse the opponent access to the other portions of the memorandum. If access to those other portions is permitted they become part of the opponent's evidence, as the parts referred to and adopted by the witness in chief are part of the calling party's case (even if they form the subject of cross-examination).

Apart from this, the memoranda are not evidence of the truth of their contents. They are relevant only to the credibility of the witness and cannot be used as independent pieces of evidence to corroborate him. The notes may be handed in, if no objection is taken to this course, as constituting a convenient record of his evidence.

All the foregoing is concerned only with the position where the witness refreshes his memory while in the witness-box. It is not irregular for him to read any memoranda at all to refresh his memory extracorally before he gives evidence, and at least where the witness retains some independent recollection of the events, the opponent cannot demand production of the memoranda in court.

3. Previous Consistent Statements

A statutory departure from the common law permits a party to impeach his own witness by proving that the witness has previously made a statement inconsistent with his present testimony. The converse does not apply. A party may not attempt to enhance or rehabilitate the credit of his witness by showing that the witness told the same story on a previous occasion. For example, in

3. Previous Consistent Statements

A statutory departure from the common law permits a party to impeach his own witness by proving that the witness has previously made a statement inconsistent with his present testimony. The converse does not apply. A party may not attempt to enhance or rehabilitate the credit of his witness by showing that the witness told the same story on a previous occasion. For example, in
R. v. Chizaah, the allegation against the accused was that, being an African, he had been unlawfully in an urban area. His defence was that he was Coloured, and sought to prove this by producing his marriage certificate where he was so described. The certificate was held inadmissible for this purpose since it reflected only the information he himself had given. On the same principle, the fact that a witness gave identical evidence in other proceedings cannot be proved.

Various explanations have been put forward to account for the rule of exclusion, of which the most convincing are based on considerations of relevancy. A previous consistent statement of the witness has insufficient probative value, partly because falsehoods may be repeated as often as the truth, and partly because the witness is assumed to be telling the truth on his oath unless reasons to the contrary appear, so that there is no need to establish his truthfulness in advance.

The general rule of exclusion is subject to five well-recognized exceptions. Even where the previous consistent statement is admissible under one of these categories, however, it is never evidence of the truth of its contents so as to afford independent evidence corroborative of the witness's story in the box, but it is relevant to the weight of his evidence alone.

Previous consistent statements are admissible in the following cases:

3.1. To rebut an adverse inference which it would otherwise be permissible to draw

This exception applies only to previous consistent statements of the accused himself. The absence of an explanation from the accused, the giving of an untrue explanation, or undue delay in advancing an explanation, are all factors which the court may properly take into account in evaluating whether or not the prosecution has made out a prima facie case of the accused's guilt, where he was found at the scene of the crime or in possession of incriminating articles. Similarly, where he raises the defence of alibi only at a time when it is too late for the police to investigate its truth, the cogency of that defence may well be reduced. In fairness to the accused, therefore, evidence that he immediately tendered the explanation he now relies upon is admissible in chief to counter in advance the possibility of an adverse inference being drawn (though such

---

159 (3) S.A. 292 (C). As to books kept by a witness, see R. v. Rase, 1917 A.D. 467, and Estate Parry v. Murray, 1951 (3) S.A. 487 (T) at 491. Other clear cases applying the rule are R. v. Joev, 1949 (1) S.A. 298 (G.W.), and R. v. Imangal, 1942 (2) P.H., H. 126 (S.R.).

25 This was the reason advanced in R. v. Rase, 1937 A.D. 467 at 473. But see Rassou v. S., 1969 (1) P.H., H. 93 (A.D.).

26 The framework of the ensuing discussion is based on R. Cross, Evidence, 3rd ed. (1967), pp. 199 ff., and R. v. Godown, "Review of Consistent Statements" (1968) 26 Cambridge L.J. 64, Johnson v. E., 1969 (1) P.H., H. 93 (A.D.), can be read as creating a sixth exception, where the reasons for the evidentiary rule do not apply; but the cogency of the statement was probably exceptionally great. A similar situation is discussed in (1968) 3 Victoria Univ. of Wellington L.R. 82.

In his dissenting judgment in R. v. Dube, 1953 A.D. 337 at 371-2, Meadors J.A. appeared to contemplate that statements were admissible under this heading as part of the res gestae, but though this view has much to commend it, for the sake of clarity a division has been made. evidence is not necessarily sufficient to prevent the prosecution discharging its burden of proof).

This exception is not extended to allow evidence to be given of every previous occasion when the accused mentioned his present defence. If his silence would support no adverse inference, the ordinary rule that the accused's extracurial statements are admissible against him but not in his favour applies, though he is of course entitled to have his whole statement, including the favourable portions, put in if the prosecution wishes to use the unfavourable portions.

3.2. Previous Identification

To avoid as far as possible mistakes flowing from the notorious unreliability of evidence of identity, various evidentiary devices have been developed. For instance, such evidence is to be approached with caution, and where possible corroboration will be sought. In addition, various safeguards to establish the reliability of identification procedures have been enumerated. It is therefore clear that the normal assumption that a witness is to be trusted on his oath until impeached is not made where he gives identifying evidence, and accordingly evidence establishing his consistency is admissible. The witness may himself testify in chief that he made the identification he has made in court also on a former occasion closer in time to the events in issue. In addition, the previous identification may be proved aliunde by those who observed it.

It has not been settled whether the evidence of the bystanders is admissible even where the identifying witness does not himself during his testimony mention the previous occasion, but the better view seems to be that the evidence aliunde remains admissible, since the credibility of a witness who testifies to identity is always in issue. Of course evidence of identification on another occasion can only be given where the identifier gives evidence of identity in court, since it is relevant only to the credit of that evidence.

3.3. Rebutting afterthought

If a witness is impeached in cross-examination so that the assumption of his trustworthiness is put in question, the party calling him may rehabilitate his credit by showing that he told the same story before he had the motive or opportunity to fabricate. This may be done when the witness himself is re-examined, and in addition other witnesses should be called to testify in chief as to his previous recounting. For example, if it is put to a witness in cross-examination that his failure at the preparatory examination to mention certain details contained in his present evidence in chief is to be attributed to their having been recently fabricated, evidence could be heard that the witness mentioned the same details immediately after the events in question.46

Not every cross-examination attacking the witness’s reliability may be counteracted by proving his previous consistent statement. It is admissible only when the cross-examination tends in the opinion of the court47 to suggest that the witness’s testimony has been recently fabricated or embellished for some or other reason.48 Merely to suggest that the witness’s memory of the events is unreliable,49 or to ask why he did not mention certain facts before,50 would not

The previous consistent statement is not independent corroboration of the witness’s evidence but is relevant merely to his credit.

3.4. Res Gestae

Where the previous consistent statement formed part of the res gestae, it may be proved.51 Res gestae is of course a flexible concept, and much depends upon the discretion of the court.52 An example is Eason v. Lifman,53 an action upon a contract of sale, where a witness testified that he had acted as the buyer’s agent in the transaction. Evidence that he had told the seller so at the time the contract was entered into was received as part of the res gestae, though statements to the same effect he had made to other persons at the time were excluded.

3.5. Complete

This exception is a survival of an old procedural requirement of early English law54 (which had in fact an exact Roman-Dutch equivalent55) whereby a woman who was raped had to have raised the hue and cry before she could prosecute an action against her assailant. It may be justified today by the fact that charges of a sexual nature are difficult to refute though easy to make, and the complainant’s credibility is always of importance.56

In its modern form, this exception to the rule against previous consistent statements states that where the complainant testifies to an offence such as rape, indecent assault, or kindred offences, evidence is admissible of the fact that she (or he57) voluntarily made a complaint, at the first reasonable opportunity thereafter, and of the terms of that complaint.58 The complaint is admitted to prove the consistency of her conduct at the time with her present testimony.59 so 50 R. v. Bevan, 1959 (2) S.A. 629 (C).

52 The evidence excluded in Loccy & Co., Ltd. v. Dent & Company, 1927 T.P.D. 842, could probably have been received under this heading.
53 For an argument that the transaction may be regarded as beginning or ending at different times for different participants, see R. N. Coulter (1958) 25 Cambridge L.R. 64 at 72-3.
55 R. v. Gubser (1908) 1 K.B. 531 at 540; Gubbins v. Re, 1905 T.S. 207 at 211.
57 As to Corroboration in Sexual Cases, see below, p. 408, infra.
58 The rule applies equally to male complainants; R. v. Connel (1922) 3 K.B. 122; R. v.
if the complainant does not give evidence the question of her self-consistency does not arise and the complaint is inadmissible. It is often said that the complaint is proved to negative consent, but it remains admissible even where consent is neither legally nor factually in issue. Though relevant to self-consistency, however, it is not to be regarded as corroboration of the complainant's evidence.

A complaint may only be proved where circumstances analogous to rape or indecent assault are alleged. In essence the offence must have contained the two elements, indecency and violence. The sexual element alone, as in charges of crime injurie or miscegenation, would not suffice; nor would violence alone. The offence actually charged is not the decisive factor. For example, incest may be committed with or without accompanying violence, but if the complainant testifies that violence was used the complaint may be proved. Similarly it would be admissible if the accused is charged simply with assault but it appears from the evidence that the assault was of an indecent character.

Whether the complaint was made at the first reasonable opportunity is a question which depends upon the facts of each case. Where young children are involved, who do not realize the nature of the acts perpetrated upon them until circumstances arise making a complaint natural, even a fairly lengthy interval between the offence and the complaint would not be regarded as unreasonable. Much shorter delays might be unreasonable in the case of adults or children of understanding. An important factor in considering the circumstances is the accessibility of a person in whom the particular complainant would naturally confide. It is not necessary that the complaint be made to the first person to whom the complainant speaks after the alleged offence. If the complainant speaks first to someone to whom full details would not be expected to be given, and subsequently makes a more complete narration to a person with whom she is on more intimate terms, the terms of both complaints may be proved.

The complaint can logically only be relevant to the complainant's credit if it represented his or her "unassisted and unvarnished story." It must not have been elicited by leading questions which suggested the terms of the complaint, nor by threats or intimidation without which no complaint might have been

---

Convictions were set aside where complaints were wrongly proved on charges of theft (R. v. Bostock, 1915 C.P.D. 112) and seduction (R. v. Gilson, 1924 C.P.D. 293). The complaint was proved in R. v. R, 1951 (1) S.A. 26 (N), where the accused was found with a charge of abduction as well as one of rape.

---

For subsequent cases, see R. v. Star, 1923 P.D.L. 14; R. v. Gloster, 1926 (2) P.H., 155 (S.W.A.).

---

For previous cases, see R. v. Avis, 1914 R.D.L. 12; Violence need not be shown where the victim is a child.

---

---

---

For additional cases, see R. v. Greer, 1935 C.D. 213.

---

For further cases, see R. v. Gemmell, 1906 T.S. 114; R. v. P, 1907 (2) S.A. 497 (H).

---

---

For more cases, see R. v. Clinghagen, 1948 (1) All E.R. 351 (C.C.A.); R. v. S, 1949 (4) S.A. 419 (G.W.).

---

For additional cases, see R. v. Lee (1917) 1 Cr.App.Rep. 31; R. v. Kachannada, 1926 (4) P.H., 154 (S.W.A.).

---

For subsequent cases, see R. v. P, 1957 T.P.D. 169.

---

For precedent cases, see R. v. Norka, 1917 (1) K.B. 347 (C.C.A.) at 350.

---

For precedent cases, see Peet v. R, 1923 (2) P.H., H. 332 (O). made.74 The mere fact that it was made in answer to a question75 or after some persuasion76 would not automatically exclude it, provided it remains in terms the complainant's own spontaneous story.

The possibility that the complaint may be untrue does not render it inadmissible in law if the other criteria are satisfied: it is merely of less value in supporting the complainant's credit.77 The court may therefore choose to exercise its discretion to exclude it. Where the complainant is a very young child even an immediate complaint may be insufficient to persuade the court to place any reliance on its evidence, unless substantial corroboration is also present.78

Complaints made about the accused's previous misconduct, whether made by the present complainant or by others, should not be mentioned in evidence, being excluded on the ground of irrelevance as well as by the prohibition of evidence of the accused's bad character.79

(b) CROSS-EXAMINATION

1. Generally

'The objects sought to be achieved by cross-examination', in the formulation of Hanooshberg A.J. (as he then was) in Carroll v. Carroll,80 are to impeach the accuracy, credibility and general value of the evidence in chief; to sift the facts already stated by the witness, to detect and expose discrepancies or to elicit suppressed facts which will support the case of the cross-examining party.'

Witnesses called by one party may be cross-examined as of right by the other party, and the court has no discretion to prevent the exercise of that right,81 even to protect the witness. In R. v. Ndawe82 where the witness, an 8-year-old boy, was so frightened by the proceedings that he insisted his distress, the prohibiting of cross-examination was still held to be an irregularity. Prevention of the witness by disallowing cross-examination which might incriminate him would be equally misconceived: the proper course for the presiding officer is to inform the witness of his right to refuse to answer.83 Where the witness is withdrawn before he gives any evidence he is not subject to cross-examination,84 but if he is not withdrawn he can be cross-examined even if he gives no evidence in chief at all.85 It is not necessary that the evidence in chief he gives should be adverse to the cross-examining side—be may have given only formal evidence such as to prove a document—or is the cross-examination confined to matters he testified to in chief.

As there is a right of cross-examination, consequences flow from the failure to exercise this right. To prevent a party taking his opponent by surprise, he must disclose so much of his own case as to each of the opponent's witnesses as concerns that witness, for explanation or comment. In a civil case, failure to cross-examine may be regarded as an admission of the subject-matter of the admissions. In criminal proceedings the rule is far from invariable, and is of especial sanctity if the accused is unrepresented. If it is not necessary to cross-examine to put the opponent's case, because it has already been disclosed, e.g. in cross-examining other witnesses, no adverse inference will be drawn, similarly, if no useful purpose would be served by cross-examination, because the evidence amounts to no more than a direct denial or contradiction of the opponent's case.

As there is a right of cross-examination, coaequally even from the failure to cross-examine, especially where the former are accomplices, or otherwise to be regarded with particular cirumspection, the other side's failure to cross-examine is unlikely to be condoned. (All the foregoing applies in appropriate cases as much to examination by the court as by the opponent.)

---

44 As to whether this is so where one accused wishes to cross-examine his co-accused, see above, p. 296; J. G. Carvel (1965) Crim. L.R. 419; C. Cole, Evidence, 3rd ed. (1967), p. 212.
46 Morgan v. Bridge (1818) 2 Stark. 313; 171 E.R. 657; Distillers Corporation (S.A) Ltd v. Korz, 1936 (1) S.A. 337 (A.D.) at 352.
49 Even in a civil case, however, a duty to cross-examine does not necessarily override the other party's duty to lead some evidence in support of his case (R. v. Welnben, 1939 A.D. 71 at 76; Ward v. Steenland, 1931 (1) S.A. 337 (N).
51 Khomo v. S., 1966 (1) P.H. H. 226 (N) and see R. v. Jankel, 1957 (1) S.A. 177 (E) at 190.
54 Failure in cross-examination led to the inference of acceptance of the witness's testimony in this instance R. v. Motton, 1949 (2) S.A. 347 (A.D.) at 350, and R. v. Mdonyana, 1938 (1) S.A. 90 (E) (and see R. v. Hirt (1931) 22 C.P.R. REP. 292), but was held not to justify such inference in R. v. Jankel, 1957 (1) P.H. H. 86 (0); Van der Wyk v. R., 1928 (2) P.H. H. 162 (A.D.); J. v. Neudorff, 1956 (1) S.A. 524 (N) esp. at 529C, is open to criticism in this respect.
56 Small v. Smith, 1954 (2) S.A. 434 (S.W.A.) at 438.
The court may also properly draw a cross-examiner's attention to matters on which cross-examination is in its view desirable, and may cure much by exercising its power of recalling a witness under section 210 of the Criminal Procedure Act. As to the measures a cross-examiner can take to prevent an adverse inference being drawn from his failure to cross-examine, see the Appellate Division case of Mbele v. S. The range of permissible cross-examination is in many respects broader than that of examination in chief. It need not be restricted to the issues in the case, but may be directed also to collateral matters relevant solely to the witness's credit. Further, as the witness is assumed to be out of sympathy with the cross-examiner and to lean in favour of the party calling him, leading questions may be asked in cross-examination. In R. v. Ismail Davis J. exercised his discretion to prevent leading questions while the defence was cross-examining the complainant, a young girl whom the accused was alleged to have abducted and who was clearly in love with him and resentful of the prosecution. The learned Judge pointed out that in these circumstances her answers to leading questions by the defence would have been of no weight. Even if the court does not interfere where a witness is manifestly favourable to the cross-examining party, factors of weight and cogency would counsel the avoidance of leading questions lest his evidence be suspect because it is in substance untested. 'Misleading questions' which trap a witness into making false or unproven assumptions of fact are always improper.

The somewhat greater range of cross-examination does not derogate from the governing effect of the exculpatory rules, which apply with hardly less rigour here than to examination in chief. Thus in R. v. Perkins the inadmissibility of a confession was held to prevail even though it had been first referred to by the defence in cross-examining a State witness. (This has since been somewhat modified by section 244(2) of the Criminal Procedure Act, which provides that if the defence refers in cross-examination to a favourable portion of an inadmissible confession the whole can then be proved.) The judgment in Perkins's case was founded upon the opinion of the Privy Council in R. v. Bertrand that "the object of a trial is the administration of justice in a course as free from doubt, or chance of miscarriage, as merely human administration of it can be—no the interests of either party. This must very much heighten the importance of a prisoner's consent, even..."

3. 1961 (2) P.H., H. 162 (A.D.).
4. The credit of a witness is always relevant to whatever issue is being tried...; in the words of Kinnier J. in R. v. Eberts, 1928 T.P.D. 464 at 469.
6. 1943 C.P.D. 418.
10. 1928 A.D. 387. Perkins was applied to a case of a confession admission inadmissible against the accused in R. v. Black, 1923 A.D. 381. See also, R. v. Mathale, 1944 T.P.D. 40 at 41.
11. Of course, if a confession would be admissible, the more likely that it has not been proved by the prosecution in chief would not protect it being put to the accused in cross-examination (Lee v. S., 1962 (1) P.H., H. 70 (C)). But hearsay statements by other persons which could not be heard are not to evidence cannot be put to the accused in cross-examination (R. v. A., 1959 (3) S.A. 458 (F.C.) cf. Carroll v. Carroll, 1947 (3) S.A. 51 (C) at 592.)
12. L.R. 1 F.C. App. 252.
Thus, reasoned James C.J., the accused could not by waiver or consent render admissible a statement which the legislature had expressly and unconditionally declared to be inadmissible.

The subsequent application of this principle has not followed an entirely untroubled course. In R. v. Meyer the accused was charged with unlawful carnal intercourse with a girl below the age of 16. Clearly the prosecution could not have led evidence to prove the accused's immoral habits, of his previous seduction of the complainant's sister. However, the defence was based on an attempt to prove a conspiracy by the whole of the complainant's family against him, and thus it was the defence which directed its cross-examination to eliciting the fact of the earlier misconduct. A simple application of the Perkins ruling to this situation would clearly have been unworkable, as the Court held, since the defence could not be allowed to engineer the reception of evidence upon which to ground a complaint of irregularity. As subsequently clarified by the Appellate Division in R. v. Bosch, the position is now that an exclusionary rule of evidence (whether statutory or common-law) which would prevent the prosecution or the court from eliciting certain evidence cannot be applied to prevent the accused doing so if it is in the interests of his defence. The evidence is not inadmissible, therefore, if elicited by a purposive question by the defence, whether or not the answer was expected or desired by the questioner. It remains inadmissible, on the other hand, if it is not properly part of the answer to the question.

It seems, from R. v. Mitchell, that just because otherwise inadmissible evidence is elicited by the defence does not give the prosecution a licence to lead further evidence of the same kind; and it seems also that a witness who does give inadmissible evidence may still be cross-examined on it to destroy, if possible, its effect.

Apart from the question of admissibility, a fair degree of latitude is permitted to a cross-examiner. The general principles are set out in the case of Dongwe v. Assistant Magistrate, Durban. It is to be assumed that when he embarks on an unexpected line of investigation that this is not merely a hopeful 'fishing expedition' but has some latent relevance which will soon appear. The court should not interrupt or require counsel to explain in advance the purpose of each question, as to do so may deprive the cross-examination of its crucial weapon of surprise. A curtailment of cross-examination in general or of a line of inquiry in particular would be grossly irregular. On the other hand, a judicial officer has a duty as well as a discretion to control the conduct of proceedings before him. In the interests of the administration of justice he may prevent vague and irrelevant questioning or direct that questions be clarified by rephrasing; he may curtail lengthy questioning as to collateral matters or

---

* 1925 T.P.D. 350.
* 1929 T.P.D. 727 at 731. prevent over-repetitious examination where this is not serving to test the witness's consistency of recollection, and he must intervene to protect a witness from abusive, insulting or harassing cross-examination, for the dignity of the court is inconsistent with gross discourtesy to witnesses. A cross-examiner should not recklessly impute misconduct to a witness, and even if instructed to do so retains his professional responsibility for weighing whether it is a necessary course.

As pointed out by Viscount Sankey L.J.,

"It is right to make due allowance for irritation caused by the strain and stress of a long and complicated case, but a protracted and irrelevant cross-examination not only adds to the cost of litigation but is a waste of public time. Such a cross-examination becomes indefensible when it is conducted without restraint and without the courtesy and consideration which a witness is entitled to expect in a court of law. It is not sufficient for the disadministration of justice to have a learned, patient and impartial judge. Equally with him, the solicitors who prepare the case and the counsel who present it to the court are taking part in the great task of doing justice between man and man."

The civil liability of a cross-examiner who oversteps the limits of defensible cross-examination should also be remembered, and, in the case of defence counsel, the consequences of making imputations upon the prosecution witnesses. As to questioning by the court itself, see below.

A witness is not always obliged to answer a question even if it is properly the subject of cross-examination, for he may be able to claim privilege. Where it is the accused who is under cross-examination the mere asking of certain questions may be improper by virtue of section 228 of the Criminal Procedure Act.

2. Cross-examination as to credit

A witness may be cross-examined on matters entirely collateral to the issues for the purpose of testing his credit. Questions which are relevant neither to the issues nor to the credibility of the witness may not be put, but it is in the discretion of the court whether any aspect of the witness's past conduct, associations, or circumstances should be excluded as irrelevant to his veracity. The presiding officer as trier of fact is the best person to decide what questions will affect the credibility of the witness in his mind, and he may even indicate to the cross-examiner that further questions are superfluous because the witness has been sufficiently exposed or discredited. In Gillingham v. Gillingham the question whether a witness had committed adultery was disallowed as having no bearing upon the likelihood of his telling the truth on oath, but later courts

---

82 Rules laid down by the High Court as to the duty of a barrister who is to cross-examine as to the credit of a witness may be found in (1918) 25 S.A.L.J. 295. See also, H. J. May, South African Cases and Statutes on Evidence, 4th ed. (1962), pp. 226 ff.; (1969) 15 M. Gil L. 291.
85 See 228 of the Criminal Procedure Act, discussed at pp. 690-691, ibid.
86 690a, 194.
87 See below, pp. 690 ff.
88 Spenceley v. De Wulf (1908) 7 East 169, 173 E.R. 42.
90 Blandy v. R., 1960 (1) P.H. 128 (A.D.). Normally if the court does so it is entirely improper for it thereafter to accept any part of the witness's evidence.
91 1904 T.S. 136. have disagreed, and indeed witnesses—particularly complainants in charges involving indecency—are commonly asked about their sexual encounters and misconduct. On the other hand, the cross-examiner in R. v. Sacks was not permitted to ask a witness 'whether he was in trouble in Port Nicholson for J.D.B., on the ground that the question was a vague and fishing one: it could have meant no more than that there had been a complaint against the witness or that he had been arrested, and thus interpreted would have been irrelevant to credit.'

A witness may be cross-examined as to whether his testimony in other trials had been disbelieved or rejected by the court, though it is said that atier of fact should not be unduly influenced by another court's view of the witness's credibility.

If a matter relative to the witness's credit is put to him and he denies it, must the cross-examiner accept the denial or can he bring evidence to contradict that denial? For example, if a prosecution witness is asked whether he has a grudge against the accused, and he says he does not, may the defence call evidence to show that he does, in fact, bear the accused malice? In general, the principle is that a witness's reply in cross-examination upon the collateral matter of his credit is conclusive, and the cross-examining party is not permitted to adduce evidence in contradiction of that reply, since otherwise trials would be unduly protracted. Thus in Grant v. S.A. National Trust and Insurance Co., Ltd., though a witness could be asked if he had not offered to give favourable evidence in return for a consideration, upon his denial evidence to establish that he had made the offer could not be heard. (If he had been asked whether he had received a bribe, a different result would probably have been reached. See below.) Where the accused is charged with rape or indecent assault, the complainant may be asked about the chastity of her general behaviour, and about specific instances of misconduct whether with the accused or with others. If she denies the particular instances put to her, evidence in contradiction may be led to show that she has had previous voluntary intercourse with the accused, this being clearly relevant as to whether she is likely to have consented on the occasion charged. But her denial of previous intercourse with other men cannot be contradicted, being purely collateral (unless perhaps to prove physical condition).

If the cross-examination is relevant to the issue, evidence in rebuttal is no less admissible, just because the questions are in addition relevant to collateral matters of credit. An illustration is provided by R. v. Solomon, where the accused was charged with murder by stabbing. Under cross-examination by the prosecutor, the accused denied that he had had a knife on him on the relevant evening, and the prosecution was permitted to contradict this denial by leading evidence that he had made other use of a knife on the same evening. The possession of the knife was clearly relevant to establish the charge, and would normally have to be proved by the prosecution in chief even had the accused not denied it. The fact that the truthfulness of the accused’s evidence was put in doubt was subsidiary.

Whether a question refers to a matter in issue or to a collateral matter is a question of law, and there is no clearcut test as to whether it relates to the issues or to credit or to both. It is a question of degree depending upon the facts of each particular case. That the subject-matter of the question could have been proved in chief is one criterion of relevance to the issues, but not the only criterion. For example, in Wilkins v. S., evidence was received to contradict a prosecution witness’s claim that he had been an eyewitness to the events in issue, although the defence could clearly not have led evidence of his absence had it not been for his answers in cross-examination.

There are two types of case only where evidence to contradict a witness’s answers in cross-examination as to credit is permissible.

(a) By statute, a witness may be cross-examined as to whether he has a criminal record, and if he denies that he has been convicted of any offence the conviction may be proved in the manner provided by section 249 of the Criminal Procedure Act. It is not, apparently, necessary that the conviction have been of an offence involving dishonesty. A witness’s previous conviction for assault or for selling beer without a licence has been proved under the statute.

(b) Evidence is admissible to establish the witness’s general status as unreliable. This may take two distinct forms. (i) Where the witness has some disability or tendency which makes him untrustworthy, it may be proved to discredit him in contradiction of his answers under cross-examination. A moral disability would be established by showing bias in favour of or against one of the parties—that the witness is the accused’s paramour, sister or daughter; or that he bears a grudge against or has been bribed by the accused or the prosecution. A physical disability could be shown by evidence that a purported eyewitness has defective vision or, as in Today v. Metropolitan Police Commissioner, that the witness suffered from hysterical and delusional personality.

---

3. 1962 (2) F.H., H. 215 (f).
4. Proof of a previous inconsistent statement is really a third case, but for the sake of clarity is dealt with separately, below.
5. See 6 of the (English) Criminal Procedure Act, 1845 (22 & 23 Vict., c. 12), as read with sec. 206 of the Criminal Procedure Act, No. 55 of 1955.
9. Attorney-General v. Hitchcock (1847) 1 Ex. 95 at 101, 134 E.R. 38 at 43, per Alderson B.
12. Attorney-General v. Hitchcock (1847) 1 Ex. 95 at 101, 134 E.R. 38 at 44-S.
13. [1965] A.C. 595, [1965] 1 All E.R. 506 (H.L.); [1965] 23 Cambridge L.J. 170. The evidence as to hysterical personality in Today’s case could perhaps have been received as relevant not only to the complainant’s credit but also to the truth of the defence story, but this is not the case upon which the House of Lords chose to found its unavailability.
disorders. (II) Evidence of a witness's general bad reputation is admissible to impugn his credit, though it may not include specific instances when his bad character was displayed. In R. v. Richardson the Court of Appeal, in setting out the procedure for reproaching a witness, held that the impugning witness may also give his own personal opinion of the witness's untrustworthiness but again cannot speak of the particular incidents upon which his poor opinion of the witness is based. The discarding witness may himself be impugned by stating his general unreliability, but the process of recrimination must stop there. 37

3. Previous Inconsistent Statement

Cross-examination as to credit may be directed to showing that the witness has not consistently told the same story as he narrated in his evidence in chief. The procedure for reproaching the witness by cross-examining him as to a previous statement inconsistent with his present testimony is laid down in an English statute, the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865,38 which is made applicable in South Africa by section 286 of the Criminal Code. The effect is that a witness may always be asked in cross-examination if he has ever made previous contradictory statements. If he does not admit having done so, he may be reminded of the occasion and circumstances.39 If he thereupon admits having made the statement he must be given the opportunity of explaining or excusing the contradiction which may thereby be deprived of much of its impeaching force.40 But if the witness persists in his denial of having made any inconsistent statement, the only remedy for the cross-examining party would be to contradict the denial by proving the statement. Whether or not this can be done depends upon another application of the principle stated above regarding the contradiction of answers given in cross-examination, although the question of a previous inconsistent statement itself relates only to credit. The test of whether the witness's previous inconsistent statement can be proved to rebut his denial of having made it, is whether or not it relates to the issue in the case and not merely to collateral matters.41 If it can be proved, the statement must be fully and properly proved, e.g. by calling witnesses who heard it.42

If the previous inconsistent statement is in documentary form, the document need not be shown to the witness before the cross-examiner asks whether he has ever told a different story. It may thereby be shown to him and he may then be asked if he still adheres to his evidence, without its being put in evidence,43 but if he is cross-examined upon its contents it should be made available to the court under the a.44 The witness must be given an opportunity of explaining the contradictions if he can.44 If he denies making the statement, the document again can only be proved if it refers to the issues in the case and not to merely collateral matters,45 and where it can be proved this must be done in the proper manner by which documentary evidence is adduced.46 It would not, for example, be sufficient for the document to be merely read over from the bar.47

Wherever the previous inconsistent statement is proved, it can be used only to impeach the witness's credibility. It is never evidence of the facts asserted in the statement and the court cannot found a judgment upon its contents.48 On the other hand, the court may nevertheless consider it safe to rely upon the witness's sworn testimony, despite proof of the inconsistent statement.49 But that statement itself is evidence only of the witness's unreliability. It follows that unless the maker of the statement gives evidence, the documents or statements are irrelevant and cannot be used for the purposes of cross-examination.50

The court may at any time during the proceedings require the document to be produced to it for inspection and may make such use of it for the purposes of the trial as it thinks fit,51 subject to general principles.52

A cross-examiner should not, in cross-examining a witness as to credit, employ previous statements which are inadmissible in evidence53 or incapable of production.54 Thus a witness may not be cross-examined on or contradicted by statements in respect of which privilege is claimed.55 This is of particular importance in the case of statements taken by the police from prosecution witnesses. The defence cannot compel the prosecutor to make these statements available to it for cross-examination, as a claim of privilege was upheld by the Appellate Division in R. v. Steyn.56 However, Greenberg J.A. in that case stressed that a prosecutor has an invariable duty as an officer of the court to 45 See n. 3 above, at Documentary Evidence, p. 406, 42.

---

46 R. v. Tiafai, 1924 T.P.D. 545. See, also, Gold v. Bladwell, 1919 T.P.D. 53; S. v. Pat Todd, 1967 (2) B.H. 332 (Q.W.). If the previous statement is contained in the record of the pre-trial examination or other proceedings, the opposing party whether prosecution or defence, may attach the accuracy of the record in this respect (R. v. Kuehne, 1937 (1) S.A. 398 (A.D.), as read with S. v. Thoma, 1969 (1) S.A. 385 (A.D.), but if there is no such admission the accuracy of the record must be proved (Fogarhy v. Minty & Sons, 1929 T.P.D. 745; Bortha N.O. v. Timbidge N.O., 1933 E.D.L. 95).
48 Lawrence v. Laurent (1915) 36 N.L.R. 428; R. v. W., 1969 (3) S.A. 247 (A); Gaseke v. R., 1964 (3) B.E. 118 (A); Twigg v. R., 1964 (2) B.H. 144 (S.R.). On the factors to be considered by the court in weighing how far proof of a previous inconsistent statement impairs a witness's credibility, see International Tobacco Co. (S.A.) Ltd. v. United Tobacco Co. (South) Ltd., 1955 (2) S.A. 1 (W) at 8.
50 See 5 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
51 See 6 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
52 See 10 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
53 See 11 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
54 See 12 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
55 See 13 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
56 See 14 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
57 See 15 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
58 See 16 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
59 See 17 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
60 See 18 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
61 See 19 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
62 See 20 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
63 See 21 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
64 See 22 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
65 See 23 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
66 See 24 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1865.
inform it where a State witness has made previous statements materially inconsistent with his testimony, and, in the absence of special and cogent reasons to the contrary, to make those statements available to the defense for cross-examination. In practice the discharge of this duty no doubt depends largely upon frank and vigilant co-operation between the investigating police officers and prosecuting counsel.

(c) Re-examination

After the completion of the opponent’s cross-examination, the witness may be re-examined by the party who called him. Re-examination must be confined to answering and rebutting the cross-examination and no new matter may be introduced except by leave of the court, whereupon a further cross-examination upon the new material must be allowed.

Generally all the rules applicable to examination in chief apply also to re-examination, so that, for example, leading questions may not be put.

(d) Examination by the Court

As part of his controlling function to ensure that the truth is elicited and justice done, the presiding judicial officer may examine the witnesses called by the parties by questions testing, elucidating or supplementing the evidence elicited by the parties and, if desirable, by investigating aspects of the case to which the parties’ examination did not advert. It is desirable that questions by the court should be put after both parties have finished with the witness or, if more convenient, when the questioning on any particular topic has been completed and before a new topic is introduced. Interruptions by the court should be minimized in order not to break the line of thought of cross-examiner and witness.

There is no absolute restriction on the court’s power to ask leading questions provided its so doing does not amount either to taking over the conduct of the prosecution or of the defense, or to so influencing a witness’s answers that no picture of the witness’s own version of the facts is obtained. In particular it is irregular for the court to adopt a badgering or harassing attitude towards the accused or the defense witnesses, as there is then not even the appearance of a fair trial. These principles apply equally to trials of a political nature, as Van der Riet J. pointed out in S. v. Makaula, for witnesses should invariably 24 S. v. Trengren, 1957 (3) P.H., H. 193 (O).

---

27 R. v. Norrie, 1924 (1) S.A. 508 (S.R.), where Tragediini C.J. said (at 511): “It is notable that in those countries in which the enforcement of the law is be treated in such a manner as to enlist the sympathy of the witness and of the public with law and order.

Undue judicial participation is in itself undesirable as depriving the court of the opportunity to reach an objective appraisal of the evidence put before him. 60

A judge who observes the demeanour of the witnesses while they are being examined by counsel has from his detached position a much more favourable opportunity of forming a just appreciation than a judge who himself conducts the cross-examination. If he takes the latter course he, so to speak, descends into the arena and is liable to have his vision clouded by the dust of the conflict. Unconsciously he deprives himself of the advantage of calm and dispassionate observation. It is further to be remarked that the demeanour of a witness is apt to be very different when he is being cross-examined by the judge as to when he is being questioned by counsel. 61

61 For Lord Cretace M.R. in Yall v. Yall [1948] 1 All E.R. 110 (C.A.) at 120. See n. 55, above.
CHAPTER 3

RELEVANCE AND ADMISSIBILITY

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I. Relevance</td>
<td>66170</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II. Character of the Accused</td>
<td>66173</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. Good and bad character</td>
<td>66173</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Previous convictions</td>
<td>66179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Previous acquittals</td>
<td>66180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III. The Rule against Hearsay</td>
<td>66180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. What is hearsay</td>
<td>66180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Res gestae and hearsay rule</td>
<td>66182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.1. Statements in issue or relevant to issue</td>
<td>66186</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.2. Statements as conduct evidencing treatment</td>
<td>66187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.3. Verbal parts of relevant acts</td>
<td>66188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.4. Statements of physical or mental condition</td>
<td>66191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.5. Declarations of intention</td>
<td>66191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.6. Spontaneous declarations</td>
<td>66191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Hearsay declarations by deceased persons</td>
<td>66194</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.1. Declarations in the course of duty</td>
<td>66195</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.2. Declarations against interest</td>
<td>66197</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.3. Dying declarations</td>
<td>66198</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.4. Declarations as to pedigree</td>
<td>66199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.5. Declarations as to public rights</td>
<td>66199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.6. Post-testamentary declarations by testators</td>
<td>661106</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>IV. Public documents</td>
<td>661107</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>V. Statutory exceptions to hearsay rule</td>
<td>661109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.1. Bankers' books</td>
<td>661110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2. Documents of companies and associations</td>
<td>661110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VI. Evidence in prior proceedings</td>
<td>661112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VII. Admissions</td>
<td>661116</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.1. Proving the admissibility of an admission</td>
<td>661119</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Section

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7.2. Admissions: freely and voluntarily made</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>7.3. Statements in the presence of a party</td>
<td>119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.4. Admissions by conduct</td>
<td>122</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.5. Vicarious admissions</td>
<td>124</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.6. Co-criminals: common purpose</td>
<td>127</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8. Confessions</td>
<td>128</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.1. What is a confession</td>
<td>133</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.2. Proving admissibility of a confession</td>
<td>134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.3. Conditions of admissibility</td>
<td>135</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.3.1. Sound and sober senses</td>
<td>136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.3.2. Free and voluntary, no undue influence</td>
<td>137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.3.3. Confession to a peace officer</td>
<td>137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.3.4. Confession at preparatory examination</td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9. Things and places pointed out by accused</td>
<td>141</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

IV. Opinion and Belief

| 1. General opinion and repute               | 142  |
| 2. Opinion evidence                         | 144  |
| 2.1. Lay opinion                            | 143  |
| 2.2. Expert opinion                         | 144  |
| 2.3. Judicial opinion                       | 144  |

V. Judgments as Evidence

1. RELEVANCE

When rejecting evidence, judges frequently describe it as 'legally irrelevant' using the term in a technical sense. More modern usage, however, draws a clear terminological distinction between relevance and admissibility. The latter presupposes the presence of the former, but is narrower in scope:

"When we have said (1) that, without any exception, nothing which is not, or is not supposed to be logically relevant is admissible; and (2) that, subject to many exceptions and qualifications, whatever is logically relevant is admissible; it is obvious that, in reality, there are tests of admissibility other than logical relevance."

Evidence is only admissible, then, when it is relevant; and irrelevant evidence is always inadmissible. Relevant evidence, however, is not necessarily admissible, for it may be excluded by one or other of the exclusionary rules which comprise the bulk of the law of evidence.

Evidence may be relevant in three ways. It may be relevant (a) to the issues in the case, as defined by the indictment and the plea thereto read in the light of the applicable law; (b) to the credibility of witnesses; or to the admissibility of other evidence, such as proof offered on whether a confession by the accused was freely and voluntarily made as required by section 244(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1956. If evidence is offered for the truth of the fact asserted,

---

1. The history of the terminology is traced by J. L. Montrose in (1954) 7 L.Q.R. 527.
2. See 240 of the Criminal Procedure Act, No. 36 of 1935.
5. See 240 of the Criminal Procedure Act, No. 36 of 1935.
i.e. direct evidence, its relevance is obvious. Disputed questions of relevance, therefore, arise only in respect of circumstantial evidence. The Appellate Division has adopted Stephen’s definition of relevance as present where ‘any two facts ... are so related to each other that according to the common course of events one, either taken by itself, or in connection with other facts, proves or renders probable the past, present or future existence or non-existence of the other’.

In R. v. M-an'a, Innes C.J. said a fact is relevant ‘when inferences can properly be drawn from it as to the existence of a fact in issue’. Neither definition is exhaustive, the former leaving unstated what is ‘the common course of events’, and the latter a criterion of the propriety of drawing inferences. The courts are wont to repeat that relevance is a matter not of law but of logic and common sense. This overlooks the fact that decisions on relevance are treated as precedents in subsequent cases, but is conveniently flexible, for there are situations on which experience and judgment would lend to idiosyncratic differences of opinion on whether any inferences can be drawn from facts, e.g. whether an attempt at suicide by a person accused of a serious crime is or is not probative of his consciousness of guilt. If the probabilities are equally balanced the evidence will not advance the inquiry and is therefore irrelevant and inadmissible. Facts supporting highly speculative inferences, such as identification by police tracking dogs, are similarly inadmissible as entering on ‘a region of conjecture and uncertainty’. This does not of course mean that the evidence of the fact tendered must conclusively indicate the inference to be drawn from it. There is a clear distinction between relevance and sufficiency. As stated in the definitions of relevance quoted, the inference need only be a permissible or reasonable one.

Thus evidence of the accused’s motive to commit the crime charged, or threats by him to commit it, are relevant to the inquiry as to whether he did commit it. Evidence of his mental condition is always admissible—at the instance of the prosecution as well as of the defence—as relevant to whether or not he can be fixed with criminal responsibility. Evidence of his possession of property is admissible to show his guilt of a crime which must or may result in possession, such as illicit liquor selling, counterfeiting, theft, receiving or bribery. That he and his family have been living above his lawful means is relevant to the inference that he had an unlawful source of income, as where he is charged with illegally transporting passengers for reward or illicit selling of some kind. Where a state of affairs is alleged to exist, evidence that it existed before and after the date alleged is receivable to found the inference of prospective or retroactive continuity. On the other hand, evidence of a subsequent state of affairs is not admissible if the situation in issue is one of a continuing nature as no inference could helpfully be drawn from it. Facts constituting part of the res gestae—those intimately related in time, place or circumstance to the issues, or which lead up to or explain the issues—are relevant and admissible to give the court as complete a picture of the events; but although their mere proximity to the facts in issue will usually suffice for their admission, they can be excluded if they are demonstrated to be unconnected with the issues.

Evidence which is prima facie relevant may yet be rejected under the exclusionary factors. These, in order of their importance, are listed by McCormick as follows:

"First, the danger that the facts offered may unduly arouse the jury's emotions of prejudice, hostility and sympathy. Second, the probability that the proof and the assessment of evidence that it provokes may create a side-issue that will unduly distract the jury from the main issues. Third, the likelihood that the evidence offered and the counter-proof will consume an undue amount of time. Fourth, the danger of unfair surprise to the opponent when, having no reasonable ground to anticipate this development of the proof, he would be unprepared to meet it."

More than one of these categories may of course apply in any particular case. The second and third were invoked in Delow v. Town Council of Springs, in an action for payment of an electricity account where evidence of the amount of statements of account submitted in previous years was excluded. All four have been advanced as the reason why the bad character of the accused person—both his reputation and his other uncreditable or criminal acts—are irrelevant in law, in the sense that it may not found an inference as to his guilt on a particular occasion. The exclusion here is based on policy rather than logical relevance, as is shown by the fact that the character or reputation of persons other than the accused may be proved if relevant, and the character (in the sense of reputation) of the complainant has been held to be relevant on charges of crimini injuria or seditious or similar offences, or where legitimacy in issue. The complainant's previous voluntary intercourse with the accused is also relevant to the issue of consent, but not her acts of connection with other men, which would involve the 16 D. v. H. (1938 (2)) P.R., H. 229 (C).

---

20 See Carroll v. Caroll, 1947 (4) S.A. 37 (D); R. v. De Beer, 1949 (3) S.A. 740 (A.D.); 23 1949 T.P.C. 128.
24 See below, pp. 602 ff.
court in a lengthy investigation of collateral issues. Evidence of a course of dealing or systematic bad conduct on the part of persons other than the accused is not excluded. Thus the practice of a government department was held relevant to establish the scope of the authority conferred by it in a letter of appointment in Randles Bros. & Hudson, Ltd. v. Estate Horner, and in S. v. Letsoko, evidence of a police system of interrogation technique including assaults was admitted to establish that the same technique had been used on the accused by that investigational team, for the purpose of showing that a confession had been elicited from him by force.

The exclusion of evidence of the accused’s misconduct on occasions other than those charged, does not of course extend to cases where the offence charged requires proof of more than one act, such as charges of unlawful dealing or unlawful practice. Whether proof of repetitious acts is required is a question of interpretation of the statute creating the offence. A single purchase of unwrought gold has been held to constitute a dealing, but for illegal trading or living on the earnings of prostitution more than one act may have to be proved. More than one act of witch-finding was required to prove the accused was ‘by habit and repugn’ a witch-doctor, but a person may unlawfully ‘practise’ as a doctor by putting up a nameplate and advertising himself as such even though only one act of treating a patient is proved.

The rule against hearsay and evidence which is privileged from disclosure on some ground, discussed elsewhere, are the other main exclusionary rules, apart from those already mentioned, limiting the pervasive effect of the relevance principle.

II. CHARACTER OF THE ACCUSED

1. Good and Bad Character

The question of the admissibility of evidence of similar facts on the grounds of their irrelevance, or insufficient relevance, to the facts in issue, is discussed above. Under this heading the admissibility of evidence which is logically relevant to the issue is now to be dealt with.

The character of the accused—the law-abiding or law-breaking disposition he has manifested during his past life—is not without relevance to his guilt on the particular charge for which he is standing trial. Deductions from a man’s character are commonly relied on in everyday life, and its relevance is recognized in the law of evidence by permitting the accused to call evidence as to his good character to persuade the court of the improbability of his guilt as well as if the creditworthiness of his testimony. Good character may be established not only by evidence of his reputation for uprightness, but also apparently by proving particular virtuous acts. If such evidence is tendered, however, the accused's character is put in issue. If he testifies, he may be held to have forfeited his shield against cross-examination as to character under section 228(a) of the Criminal Procedure Act, and further, though the prosecution will not necessarily become entitled to lead evidence in rebuttal and attack his character in every circumstance where he loses such shield, if his character has been put in issue by the defence the prosecution may introduce evidence of his bad character either in cross-examination of his witnesses or by leading evidence from its own witnesses. In the latter case the prosecution witnesses may apparently speak only as to the accused's general reputation and may not narrate specific incidents or their own personal opinion of him.

When the defence has given evidence of the accused's good character in any respect its witnesses may be cross-examined upon the whole of it, even on those aspects unrelated to the charge.

"[There is no such thing known to our procedure as putting half your character in issue, and leaving out the other half."

Apart from these cases of cross-examining on or rebutting defence evidence of the accused's good character, the prosecution witnesses may not in general give evidence of the accused's bad or suspicious character (except in so far as this is elicited as part of proper answers to defence cross-examination) to support an inference that he is a man who would commit the offence. The prohibition applies to State evidence of his bad reputation, but in its most frequent application is formulated as excluding evidence of the misconduct of the accused on any occasion other than that charged, where the relevance of the evidence is solely to indicate the accused's propensity or disposition to criminality in general or to particular forms of criminal or otherwise reprehensible behaviour. The reason for this exclusionary rule is not its irrelevance, since the fact that a person has on previous or subsequent occasions transgressed moral or legal boundaries would certainly indicate that he is the kind of person on whom these standards have little restraining effect. The basis of the rule is rather the undue prejudice to the prisoner the reception of such evidence may cause, by clouding the issue of his guilt on the limited charge with the wickedness of his ways in general. However many crimes he may have committed the series must stop at some point; but if crimes a, b, c, and d could be proved against him when he is charged with crime e, the trial of fact may tend to forget

---

50 See below, pp. 59-62.
56 This is in R. v. Simon, 1925 T.P.D. 297, where the accused were charged with indecently assaulting two young girls they had met casually at a railway station, evidence by a policeman that he saw the accused looking about the station every night was held to have a sinister connotation reflecting upon their respectability and was therefore held inadmissible. See, too, Diamond v. A., [1933] N.P.D. 380; R. v. Wayo, 1933 G.W.L. 56. that it is as possible that he terminated his criminal career after crime A as that it included also crime B. The accused is to be protected from reasoning as to his guilt on one occasion via his criminal propensity as shown on other occasions, for he is not on trial for the whole of his past life. Nor is any relaxation of the exclusionary rule to be permitted merely because the charge may be difficult to drive home without propensity evidence, or, as was at one stage thought to be the case, where he is accused of an unnatural offence.

It is therefore to ensure the fairness of the trial that evidence which supports only reasoning from propensity is excluded. Evidence of repeated misconduct does not, however, necessarily support reasoning from propensity. Thus, the charge may involve proof of a series of acts, for example, unlawful peddling; and repetitive conduct would therefore constitute the facts in issue as to which evidence could not be excluded. Another type of case where propensity is not shown by the similar fact evidence is exemplified by R. v. Lee, where the accused woman was charged with murder by arsenic poisoning. Evidence that she and the deceased had been associated in perpetrating a number of thefts, and had substantially increased the size of his estate which she was to inherit, was admitted as highly relevant to the establishment of the accused's motive to commit the crime. Tindall A.C.J. stressing that "it is clear that no reason... tribunal could... for a moment regard the accused as more likely to commit murder because she was capable of committing theft. No prejudice to the accused could therefore arise."

Further, evidence of the accused's previous misconduct may have multiple relevance. It may be capable of supporting an inference from propensity, but also have relevance to some other proper aspect of the case. The leading case of this kind is Makin v. Attorney-General for New South Wales, which arose out of a charge of infanticide against a husband and wife. The body of the baby whose death formed the subject of the charge had been found together with the remains of three others, and the disputed evidence showed that the remains of a total of nine other babies had been found buried in the gardens of two houses previously occupied by the accused, and that the deceased and several other children had been adopted by the accused upon payment of a sum inadequate for their support for more than a limited period. In ruling that the evidence was admissible, Lord Herschell L.C. said:

"It is undoubtedly not competent for the prosecution to adduce evidence tending to show that the accused had been guilty of criminal acts other than those covered by the indictment, for the purpose of leading to the conclusion that the accused is a person likely from his criminal conduct or character to have committed the offence for which he is being tried. On the other hand, the mere fact that the evidence tends to show the commission of other crimes does not make it inadmissible, if it be not relevant to an issue before the jury, and it may be to relevant if it appears upon the question whether the acts alleged to constitute the crime charged in the indictment were designed or accidental, or to rebut a defence which would otherwise be open to the accused."

The exclusionary rule therefore relates only to the use of similar fact evidence as an index of the accused's propensity or disposition, but not to its use for other purposes. If it is relevant for any other reason, it is not excluded. 68

---

Lord Herschell’s statement of the rule was analysed by the Appellate Division in R. v. Zawala. 69 Stratford J.A. pointed out that it was not contemplated in that passage that there should be two rules, one allowing the evidence on the ground of relevancy and the other allowing it on the ground of necessity to rebut a defence. The only test, said the learned Judge of Appeal, was one of relevancy, and the allusion to possible defences was merely to illustrate relevancy. 69 But the mere theory that a plea of not guilty puts everything in issue cannot be applied to determine relevance, for ‘the prosecution cannot credit the accused with fancy defences in order to rebut them at the outset with some damming piece of prejudice’. 70 The evidence is usually said to be required to relate to some real issue in the trial, 71 and if as a result of an admission by the defence some aspect of the charge is no longer contested, evidence of the other misconduct might be excluded. For example, in R. v. Salomon, 72 on a charge of murder by stabbing, the trial court had refused to allow the State to lead evidence that the accused had stabbed two other persons earlier the same evening. During subsequent cross-examination of the accused, he denied any knowledge of the crime, or that he had had a knife in his possession on that evening, and the court had then ‘rightly and properly’, in the view of the Appellate Division, instructed prosecuting counsel to investigate the prior assaults. Had the accused not denied possession of a knife the earlier ruling excluding the evidence as not relating to a matter really in issue would have stood. A man may therefore paradoxically render evidence inadmissible by contesting only one issue, whereas if he makes no admission and contests two the evidence would have to be admitted. 73 But if the evidence is relevant to establish the State case as well as relevant to the defence abandoned by the admission, the paradox is avoided, as the defence admission saves the accused nothing. Thus in R. v. Zawala, 74 on a charge of fraud, evidence of similar false misrepresentations made to other persons was admitted as relevant to prove the mens rea of the accused, which was of course an issue to be established by the prosecution. The fact that the evidence supporting the State case might incidentally also rebut a defence of mistake or accident could not render it retroactively inadmissible just because the accused happened not to raise these defences.

The prosecution could not be said to be “crediting the accused with fancy defences” if the act alleged may be capable of an innocent explanation and

69 1937 A.D. 342.
70 At 346.
72 Cowen and Carter, above, suggest at p. 157 that Lord Herschell’s phrase, in Model, about rebutting defences open to the accused means, in effect, defences logically open to the accused.
similar fact evidence is tendered to prove its guilty complexion, or where statements suggesting the line of defence were made by the accused on his arrest or at the preparatory examination, for the prosecution cannot be obliged to withhold its evidence until the defence has actually been revealed and thereby risk the discharge of the accused at the close of the State case or at the completion of the preparatory examination.

In R. v. Naapwal, Davis A.J.A. warned that nothing more should be contained in the State evidence than is absolutely necessary for the purpose for which it is admissible, so that matters extraneous to the issue to which it is relevant should be excluded. That this dictum is not to be applied to limit the range of relevant similar fact evidence is clear from R. v. Matthews, where Schreiner J.A. said:

'The Crown case is essentially that there was concerted action by persons who, as a group, the Modet gang, had a motive to seize the defendant (a member of a rival gang, the Spells) and, if circumstances so indicated, to kill him. It was contended (for the defence) that, gang rivalry being established by proof of inter-gang fighting, the issue of motive was then exhausted and evidence could not properly be led of gang violence not directed against the other gang. I do not agree with this contention. Whenever it is relevant to prove motive, to order to prove that an act was done, it must be relevant to show the full strength of the motive since, while the commission of the crime by the accused might be understood by the presence of any measure of a particular motive, it might be more readily explained, and therefore more probable, if the motive were present in a more powerful form... if it is clearly relevant to consider the scope of the gang operations and the events to which it might render probable the resort to extreme violence in the furtherance of gang interests.'

In pursuance of the general principle, evidence relevant to the accused's criminal propensity has been admitted, inter alia, where it was also substantially relevant to establish his guilty knowledge or intent, a systematic course of criminal conduct, acts of preparation or attempts, it has been found relevant to the res gestae, to establish the identity of the criminal or the commission of the actus reus, to corroborate witnesses on other counts in the indictment, or to prove the guilty association between co-criminals. Detailed discussion of these or other examples would not, it is felt, be warranted since decisions finding

---

Hess v. defence 1952 A.C. 694 (H.L.) at 707.

e.g. R. v. Kletz and Parker, 1914 A.D. 58. e.g. R. v. Pharaoh, 1972 A.D. 57.

S.A. 512 (A.D.).

e.g. R. v. Trottick, 1920 A.D. 466.

e.g. Thompson v. R. [1918] A.C. 221 (H.L.); R. v. Davis, 1925 A.D. 20; R. v. H, 1947 (2)

S.A. 708 (A.D.); R. v. Af, 1963 (3) S.A. 181 (T). The evidence admitted in Thompson was actually relevant to corroborate an act of Identification, as pointed out by Montrose (1954) 70 L.J.E.R. 527.

e.g. S. v. Green, 1962 (3) S.A. 886 (A.D.) at 895; S. v. Gade, 1965 (3) S.A. 671 (A.D.) at 674.

e.g. R. v. Seele, 1945 A.D. 496; R. v. Quay, 1934 (2) S.A. 512 (A.D.); R. v. Mafi, 1960 (2)

---

For an exhaustive analysis of this kind, see L. H. Hoffmann, South African Law of Evidence, 2nd ed. (1930), pp. 41-55.
relevance in the facts of one case cannot invariably be treated as precedents for holding comparable evidence to be relevant in another: relevance being a matter not of law but of logic and common sense. On principle, however, there cannot be said to be any decision in relevance between the misconduct of the accused before the commission of the charge, and those subsequent to it; in a suitable case, either could be relevant. Nor does relevance depend on proximity in time between the other acts and the charged, this being a matter affecting merely the weight and not the admissibility of the evidence. On the other hand, relevance to the offence charged does depend both on the degree of similarity between the previous acts and those charged, and on the strength of the evidence implicating the accused in the other misconduct, for "evidence of other occurrences which merely tend to exclude suspicion does not go to prove guilt".

In this respect weight and admissibility cannot be clearly demarcated, for even if the evidence is not believed it may be the odd coincidence of repeated and similar allegations being made against one individual which gives those allegations their relevance, though coincidence alone is not equivalent to credibility.

The principles of relevance then, are not rigid ones, depending as they do on matters of degree varying in every case. In addition, the flexibility of the rules of admissibility in this branch of the law is further increased by the court's discretion to exclude technically admissible evidence if its reception would unfairly prejudice the accused, a discretion flowing from the overriding power of a criminal court to control in all aspects the fairness of the trial, but which is of particular importance where evidence of other misconduct is tendered. Clearly the degree of prejudice caused by such evidence is conditioned less by the strength of its non-proximity relevance or by the degree to which the accused is identified as the perpetrator of the other acts, than by the unpleasantness or viciousness of the conduct alleged against him. Where, therefore, the evidence tendered could influence the trier of fact because of its relevance to propensity in addition to its relevance to the issues in the case, the court in exercising its discretion must weigh the strength of the potential prejudice against the probative value of the evidence, and receive it only if the desirability of admitting it because of its importance clearly outweighs the danger unavailing occasioned by its reception. It has been pointed out that the application of this test means, put crudely, that strong similar fact evidence will be accepted and weak similar...

---

45 S. v. Green, 1921 (3) S.A. 106 (A.D.) at 194. See also (1934) 10 L.R.Q. 586 (reprinted in (1937) 54 S.A.L.J. 201).
47 R. v. Plouegre, above at 60-1.
53 By Cohen and Carter, op. cit., p. 145.
fact evidence rejected. A somewhat different criterion was applied by Fagan J.A. in R. v. Khan,8 there was no reason, he said, why the trial judge should have exercised his discretion to exclude the evidence since its connection with the issue of the accused's guilt was 'very direct'. This test seems a less satisfactory one than that already set out, which was enunciated in R. v. Norkhiet, as it fails to take account of the prejudicial effect of displaying the accused's dirty linen regardless of the peg of relevance on which it is hung.9

2. Previous Convictions of the Accused

Section 300 of the Criminal Procedure Act excludes evidence before verdict that the accused has a criminal record,10 since the disclosure of that record inevitably prejudices him in the eyes of the jury or other trier of fact.11 Even inadvertent disclosure of the accused's previous convictions will amount to an irregularity. For instance, in R. v. Meyer,12 a witness on being asked where he had first met the accused, replied, 'In prison'. Although this answer was unexpected and unsolicited, Rumpit J. discharged the jury. Where the previous convictions were disclosed at the preparatory examination and thus included in its record, it was held in R. v. Mignenyo13 that they should if possible be expunged from the copy handed to the trial judge (but the same does not necessarily apply to the record before an appeal court).14

The accused's bad record, however, cannot always be successfully concealed, as where he is charged with trivial offences in a superior court or where the fact of a previous conviction is an integral part of the charge.15 In addition, the scope of section 300 is subject to the common-law principle relating to character evidence discussed immediately above, and accordingly if similar fact evidence is substantially relevant to anything other than the accused's propensity, its admissibility does not depend on whether or not the accused has been convicted as a result of his previous conduct but only on relevance as already defined in this connection.16 Thus a conviction was upheld in Mpanza v. R.17 where, in the course of proving certain admissions made by the prisoner, the State witnesses disclosed the fact that these had been made while they and the accused were

15 1954 (2) S.A. 340 (A.D.) at 342.
17 As to the manner of proof of previous convictions after verdict, for the purposes of sentence, see Ashby v. Trenchard, 1848 Eng.C.R. 582. Ex Parte Sidley, 1848 Eng.C.R. 584.
18 Bright v. J. in R. v. Dominic, 1913 3 D.L.R. 152 at 154. 'One knows, from one's own experience in trying criminal cases, the effect which is produced on the mind of a judge when he learns that there is a record of previous convictions against the accused. A magistrate, I think, would be more than human if a matter of that kind did not affect his mind. In the light of this, the comment by Davis J.A. in R. v. Saffey and Brown, 1941 A.D. 391 at 443, that prejudicial evidence will more easily be found to have affected the mind of the jury than of a judge, seems unrealistic.'
20 1911 A.D. 3 at 7.
inmates of the same prison. Similarly, evidence of the accused's previous convictions will be received to rebut defence evidence of his youthful experience tolerated for the purpose of establishing extenuating circumstances. Such evidence is also admissible for the defence to establish the plea of autrefois convict, an alibi (the accused's presence in gaol at the time of the alleged commission of the offence), or for any other relevant purpose.7

There are two statutory exceptions to the relevance principle; sections 276 and 277 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1956, which, by way of facilitating proof that the accused is a fence, provide that on charges of knowingly receiving stolen property, evidence is admissible to show that the accused was found in possession of other property stolen within the previous twelve months, and that he has been convicted within the previous five years of any offence involving fraud or dishonesty. Three days' written notice must be given to the defence of the prosecution's intention to lead such evidence.

The common law in respects other than relevance is not altered by these provisions; previous convictions not falling within the statutory limits continue to be admissible if relevant; and although in terms sections 276 and 277 provide simply that on the giving of the statutory notice proof of the accused's previous convictions becomes receivable, the common-law discretion of the court to disallow the evidence in the interests of the fairness of the trial is not excluded.8

3. Previous Acquittals

In Maxwell v. Director of Public Prosecutions,9 Viscount Sankey L.C. remarked that an acquittal is in general not evidence of bad character, but simply a misfortune. Normally, therefore, the fact of an acquittal of or unproved suspicion against the accused is irrelevant and inadmissible,10 though if relevant it will not be excluded, e.g. in R. v. Waldman11 the accused was charged with receiving property stolen by X; a previous acquittal on an identical charge was admitted as relevant to show the accused's knowledge that X was a thief.

III. THE RULE AGAINST HEARSAY

1. What is hearsay

Evidence is hearsay when it consists in a witness's reporting to the court, or putting in a document containing, assertions by another where the assertions are relevant only because of the facts asserted. The rule excluding hearsay, historically 'the result of marking off the functions of witnesses from those of jurors',12 was developed in order to ensure that manifestly untrustworthy evidence should not be laid before the jury. Hearsay evidence, although of course frequently relied on in everyday life, is said to be untrustworthy because the assertion reported was not made on oath, and the declarant cannot be subjected to cross-examination whereby his sincerity or honesty, or his powers of observation or of recollection can be investigated. However, in its modern application, out-of-court assertions may be excluded even where these supposed guarantees are present. Sworn affidavits by persons who are not or cannot be called as witnesses are excluded as hearsay, as are statements made by persons giving evidence on oath in previous proceedings where they were or could have been cross-examined. Further, the rule has been invoked to exclude evidence where the persons whose utterances were reported were in fact present and testifying. It accordingly seems clear that the hearsay rule is closely linked with the basic principle of our procedure that evidence be given orally in open court.

Thus date stamps in a passport have been held to be hearsay if tendered to prove the dates on which the holder of the passport left or entered a country, and invoices and delivery notes are mere hearsay evidence of the contents of a parcel or the fact that it was dispatched. A person’s own evidence of his age or parentage is hearsay, as is a birth certificate, though the latter has been made admissible in evidence by statute, as discussed below, p. 606.107

Where the assertion was made by the declarant through an interpreter, the person to whom it was interpreted cannot give evidence of what was said unless either he had sufficient knowledge of the language used to follow what passed between the declarant and the interpreter, or the interpreter testifies also. The principle was explained by Davis A.J.A. in R. v. Mutche as follows:

"It seems to me to be clear that it is sufficient if B, the interpreter, deposits to the fact that he has interpreted correctly all that was said to him by A, and if C, the person to whom he interpreted, then deposes to what B, the interpreter, said at the time. For here we have no hearsay. . . . The interpreter deposes to a fact within his own knowledge, namely that he interpreted correctly. The person to whom he interpreted also deposes to a fact within his own knowledge, namely what the interpreter told him. The sum of the evidence of B and C, each speaking to his own knowledge, proves what was said by A."

The learned Acting Judge of Appeal was here dealing with the case of a confession, but the same problem arises whenever an interpreter has been used, even if only to prove, in cases of perjury, that an oath was administered.

---

18 See E.M. Morgan, "Hearsay Dangers and the Application of the Hearsay Concept" (1963) 62 Harv. L.R. 177 at 185-8, for an analysis of the supposed effectiveness of the oath and cross-examination in ensuring the reliability of evidence.
21 R. v. Motchley, (1946) O.P.D. 49. Though the previous consistent or inconsistent statements of a witness can be put to him in certain circumstances, they are not evidence of the facts asserted but are admissible only to affect credibility. See above, pp. 606-608.
22 See Michigan L.R. 1306. If the witnesses in Motchley had been parties to the action their statements might have been received as admissions, which constitute an exception to the hearsay rule. See below, pp. 606-610.
26 1946 A.D. 874 at 878. For an argument that the rule against hearsay does nevertheless apply to such situations, see Prof. R. Cross in (1966) 7 Melbourne L.R. 9.
The admissibility of statistical evidence and of police records to prove the prevalence of certain types of crime has been considered in a number of cases. It was admitted without comment as relevant to the facts in issue by the Appellate Division in Suter v. Brown, but in the Rhodesian case of R. v. Nyoka, where it was necessary to establish the existence of a state of public disorder, it was undoubtedly hearsay and has therefore been excluded in several cases, except where it is tendered after conviction for the purposes of sentence, under section 186(2) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1936, where, subject to cross-examination, the rules of evidence need not be strictly applied.

The application of the exclusionary rule may on occasion prevent certain matters from being proved at all, for original non-hearsay evidence may be not only more expensive or inconvenient to obtain: it may simply be unobtainable. In large organizations, for example, the number or turnover of the personnel may make it impossible to trace the person who has first-hand knowledge of the facts. For this reason, suggestions were made in the provincial divisions that, where no better evidence is available, hearsay evidence of matters recorded in the ordinary course of official or business practice could be given. Under this heading they received trade union records reflecting the size of the membership, a mining company's records of the numbers on its staff, and railway records showing the weight of a particular load. This trend was, however, firmly checked by the Appellate Division in Vulcan Rubber Works (Pty.) Ltd. v. S.A.R. & H., where, after distinguishing the rule against hearsay from the best evidence rule, Schreiner J.A. said:

‘No doubt the difference between evidence and hearsay can be said to be an illustration of a broad rule favouring the use of the best evidence, but the better way of stating the position is that hearsay, unless it is brought within one of the recognized exceptions, is not evidence, that is, legal evidence, at all. … There is no doubt that the exceptions to the rule against hearsay have come into existence mainly because there was felt to be a strong need for such exceptions if justice was to be done. But that is a different thing from recognizing a principle that the rule against hearsay may be relaxed or is subject to a general qualification if the court thinks the case is one of necessity.’

A similar conclusion was reached by the majority of the Court in Myers v. D.P.P. where the House of Lords was concerned with the identification of motor-cars alleged to have been stolen. The identifying evidence was given by an employee of the manufacturers, who stated that the practice was for the vehicles' chassis and engine numbers to be noted on cards by the assembling workmen, and the information on the cards then to be recorded on microfilms of which he was in charge. His evidence was reluctantly excluded by the Law Lords: original evidence by the unidentifiable workmen that they had actually seen on 35. Garment Workers' Union v. De Freis and others, 1949 (1) S.A. 1121 (W) at 1125.

---

38. 1928 (3) S.A. 288 (A.D.).
40. (1961) A.C. 1001 (H.L.); (1964) 2 All E.R. 881 (H.L.). See however the persuasive dissents of Lords Pearce and Donovan.
the case the numbers entered in the records should have been produced. In such a situation clearly the danger of deliberate misrepresentation being embodied in the records was minimal, and the possibility of error no longer in the hearsay evidence than it would have been in the original. Myers's case has therefore been overruled in England by statute, and no doubt it was the manifest inconvenience and absurdity of exclusion which led the Appellate Division to refuse to recognize as hearsay the almost identical evidence received in S. v. Naran. Even where what is technically hearsay is daily acted on by hundreds in their daily transactions, as produce brokers throughout the country act on lists of the market prices in the major centres, the courts must exclude the evidence.

The mere fact that an assertion is reported in evidence does not necessarily bring the rule against hearsay into play, for an assertion may be tendered for non-hearsay use, that is, where the making of the assertion is relevant for some reason other than the truth of the matters asserted. Where the fact that a statement was made at all or in particular terms is in issue or relevant to an issue—for example, to prove that the speaker was alive at the time, or that a fraudulent misrepresentation or inquiries were made, a contract entered into, or perjured evidence given—the reporting witness is giving original evidence of what he perceived with his own senses. Statements spoken or contained in letters by one spouse to another, or even to a third person, are admissible to show the terms of affection or otherwise on which they lived; and the fact that a statement was made may be used to prove the hearer's knowledge of the information communicated or that as a result of threats he was in fear or was provoked.

Implied Assurances as Hearsay

As formulated by Cross, implied assertions may be of two kinds, 'statements which were not intended by their maker to be assertive of the fact that they are tendered to prove, and non-verbal conduct not intended to be assertive of the fact it is tendered to prove'.

---

34 Criminal Evidence Act, 1965 (c. 20), which is similar in outline to the Evidence Act, 1938 (1 & 2 Geo. V, c. 28) cmich, secs. 54 ff., of our Civil Procedure Act, No. 2 of 1937, are modelled. The full text of the Act appears in (1965) 62 S.A.L.J. 244.

36 See Bland & Son v. Pellock and De Villiers, 1945 E.D.L. 26. In Robinson v. Randfontein Estates Gold Mining Co., Ltd., 1924 A.D. 151, stock exchange price lists were accepted as evidence of the price of shares, on the basis of a limited exception to the hearsay rule, but newspaper lists of share values, however carefully prepared, would apparently not fall within the exception (see at 157). See now, esp. sec. 25(b) of the Stock Exchanges Control Act, No. 7 of 1947, as inserted by sec. 3 of the General Law Further Amendment Act, No. 93 of 1963.

37 See E. Schlamn in (1912-13) 28 Har. L.R. 146 esp. at 153.

An example of the first kind is S. v. Van Niekerk, where a magistrate was charged with stealing a gun from a prisoner. Letters written by the prisoner (who had since died) to his brother, reminding him to get the gun back from the magistrate, were excluded as hearsay. Watermeyer J. pointed out that had it been stated directly in the letters that the prisoner had not given the gun to the magistrate, they would clearly have been hearsay; it would make no difference to their admissibility that the same statement was made by way of implication.

The same reasoning would appear to account for the decision of the House of Lords in Teyler v. R., but in Stobart v. Dryden Parke B. held that the signature of an attesting witness to a bond was not an assertion of the bond's due execution. It could be contended that to sign describing oneself as witness to a deed is a shorthand form of asserting, 'I witnessed the execution of this document', and no more abbreviated than a drowning man's shout of 'Sharks!' or, at sea, a lookout's call of 'Land!', but Baker argues in support of the decision that the signature should be treated rather as presumptive evidence of due execution than as an exception to the rule against hearsay.

Where conduct is intended to be assertive there would seem to be no doubt that it falls under the exclamatory rule. A communication by signs or gestures is indistinguishable in principle from a spoken or written communication, and to report it was held by the Appellate Division to be hearsay in Sutter v. Brown. More recently, however, in S. v. Qole, while excluding as hearsay a statement by the deceased in a murder charge identifying the accused as his assailant, Williamson J.A. held admissible evidence that the deceased had then slapped the accused's face. It may be that the distinction between this case and Sutter v. Brown lies in the fact that the slap was not intended to be assertive, but Williamson J.A. expressly found that the inadmissible statement was repeated by the act which was therefore of the same weight. As the two decisions therefore cannot stand together, the correctness of Qole's case in principle is doubtful.

Recognition of the hearsay nature of conduct not intended to be assertive is no less dubious. In Weight v. Doe d. Talbot letters written to a testator whose sanity was in issue were rejected as constituting hearsay assertions of the writers' opinion that the addresssee was sane, an assertion implied by the treatment of him as capable.44 On the other hand, in Lloyd v. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co., Ltd., statements by a man, since deceased, of his belief that he had fathered a child were admitted to prove the issue of paternity and of his intention to support the child. The statements of belief were relevant only because the facts on which the belief was founded could be inferred from them, and it was these facts and not the belief which were of importance. The use made of the evidence was therefore indistinguishable from the use to be made of the evidence rejected in Wright v. Doe d. Talham.45

A comparable situation arose in the South African case of Levin v. Barclays Bank D.C.O.,46 where, in order to prove that two persons not parties to the action were partners, evidence by a bank manager of their joint operation of a partnership banking account was received. Potgieter J.A. rejected the argument that the conduct was hearsay in the following terms.47

...Although some of this evidence may amount to conduct of the alleged partners, it was not conduct which is, and is not relied upon as conduct equivalent to an assertion or an admission that they were trading in partnership; but is relied upon as independent facts from which the court is asked to draw the inference that they were trading in partnership.

If a conversation between A and B had been overheard in the course of which A had offered to enter into a partnership agreement with B and B had agreed, clearly the reporting of this would not have been hearsay evidence of the agreement. But if B had thereupon told his wife that he and A had entered into such an agreement, for the wife to so testify would surely have been mere hearsay, and no different in principle from the evidence received in Levin.48 The opening and operation of a partnership banking account would be admissible to prove that certain performance of the agreement had been embarked upon, but, properly viewed, not to prove the historical event of the agreement having been concluded at all. As Henstra J. put it in Estate Parry v. Murray,49 in dealing with the admissibility of bank entries:

...When the point at issue is: Was there such an agreement, then the books are not admissible to prove that there was. When the point at issue is: If there was such an agreement, did Parry carry out his part of the bargain, did Parry say: 'I did so by means of bank entries', then the books are admissible to show that he made the entries. They are then on a parallel with, for instance, a cheque put in to prove that payment was made.

As the authorities now stand, however, it cannot be stated with any confidence whether the rule against hearsay does not apply to conduct not intended to be

---

44 Pleaton on Evidence, 10th ed. (1952), p. 222, explains the decision as an application of the opinion rule (see below, p. 406); but as E. M. Morgan has shown (1948) 62 Har. L.R. 177 at 180 it seems clear from the examples given in the judgments—not all of which involved opinions—that the Court would have considered the hearsay objection alone to be insurmountable. See ibid. Baker, above, pp. 4-5.

46 See Morgan, above, n. 54, at pp. 208-11, and Rice Flour Mills (Pty.) Ltd. v. Adelams (3), 1958 (2) S.A. 711 (T) at 712-13.

47 1958 (2) S.A. 45 (A.D.), at 47.

49 1961 (2) S.A. 496 (T) at 498-9. The evidence in Levin certainly falls within the definition of hearsay given by E. M. Morgan in 'Hearsay and Non-Hearsay' (1934-5) 48 Har. L.R. 1138 at 1159: 'Hearsay is defined so as to include evidence of all conduct of a person, verbal or non-verbal when not intended to operate as an assertion and offered either to prove both his belief and the external event or condition which caused him to have that belief or to prove that such conduct truly reflected his belief.'
assertive, or whether it does so apply and is received in certain cases, such as to show relationship,\(^{61}\) under an exception to the rule.

2. Res Gestae and the Rule against Hearsay

Res gestae as referring to a super-category of admissibility is a much abused phrase. Lord Tomlin in Harrs v. Nevin\(^{62}\) accused it of being a phrase adopted to provide a respectable legal cloak for a variety of cases to which no formula of precision can be applied\(^{63}\), and writers have designated it in terms of far less judicial moderation.\(^{64}\) The phrase is commonly employed to cover facts in issue as well as those closely related by factors of time, place and circumstance to facts in issue, and is therefore descriptive of an inclusionary rather than an exclusionary principle.\(^{65}\)

Many schemes of subdivision of the law of res gestae, of varying complexity, have been suggested.\(^{66}\) It is not proposed to suggest another here. The term has been used to refer to evidence of conduct or of statements when these are themselves facts in issue, to circumstantial evidence, and to matters relevant only to the credibility of witnesses, such as complaints in sexual cases. In so far as it refers to statements, it undoubtedly leads to confusion since it is applied not only to those which are hearsay but are admitted as exceptions to the hearsay rule, but also to those which are received as original evidence and those which are received as showing only that a witness has or has not contradicted himself. The categories of res gestae statements to be treated of under this general heading are those which do not readily fall under any other heading, and the treatment which follows is not intended to give comprehensive coverage of the different res gestae concepts but rather to illustrate their interaction with and where necessary their independence of the rule against hearsay. The headings adopted are not necessarily mutually exclusive and in many instances the decisions mentioned could be dealt with under more than one heading.

2.1. Statements as issue or relevant to an issue

Statements as facts in issue are dealt with above in the discussion of what is a hearsay use of a statement.\(^{67}\) The admissibility of statements which are circumstantial evidence, not put to hearsay use, is illustrated by R. v. Houseman.\(^{68}\) The accused, a farmer, was charged with failing to destroy locust swarms, and evidence of his neighbours' complaints about this failure were received not for the hearsay purpose of proving that failure, but as introducing and explanatory of the inspector's frequent visits to the accused's farm.

---

\(^{61}\) See below, pp. 986–99, 87–8

\(^{62}\) [1931] 2 Ch. 112 at 120.

\(^{66}\) See above.

\(^{67}\) 1935 C.P.D. 51. Harris, supra, regards R. v. Alexander, 1913 T.P.D. 561, as an example of this type of case (see at 250–1), but it is, arguably, to be treated as a vicarious admission by implied assertion.
(Further examples of statements used as circumstantial evidence will be found in Wigmore, who stresses that in such cases the hearsay rule is not concerned.)

2.2. Statements as conduct evidencing treatment

Where the manner in which a person is treated by others is relevant in any case—usually, to establish that person's relationship to those others, though this is not the only type of case—evidence is admissible of their conduct towards him, including their statements in so far as these are conduct. Statements of this kind are not admitted under any exception to the hearsay rule, but as verbal conduct constituting circumstantial evidence from which inferences as to the matters in issue may be drawn. Whether, therefore, the declarant is alive or dead at the time of the trial, present or unavailable as a witness, is irrelevant to the admissibility of the statement.

Thus, for example, to establish the paternity of a child, the fact that his mother's husband treated him distantly or more unkindly than her other children is relevant to rebut the presumption of paternitatem. Statements made by the husband which are conduct, such as manifestations of dislike or indifference, may be proved. Similarly, the relevant conduct may consist in instructions given by the mother's paramour as to the child's upbringing, his naming the child as his son and heir in his will or his promise to marry the mother.

On the same principle, evidence that a woman was introduced by a man as his wife to the priest of his church or to the midwife attending her confinement, that she registered her children as legitimate, or that she habitually ordered goods for his account describing herself as his wife, has been received in proof of the marriage.

The evidence of conduct and statements in this type of case was said to be received as part of the res gestae in The Dysart Peerage case, where what was in issue was whether an irregular marriage had taken place in Scotland. The words and behaviour of the alleged husband both before and after the date of the alleged ceremony were proved as casting light on the probabilities of the ceremony having taken place; but his purely narrative statements on the point, uttered subsequent to his marriage in facie ecclesiae to another woman, were excluded as not being part of the res gestae of the first ceremony. The reasoning seems to be that narrative statements are not conduct from which relevant inferences may be drawn, but simply assertions which depend for their relevance on the truth of the matters stated. As such, they are mere hearsay and inadmissible unless they can be brought under one of the exceptions to the rule against hearsay, e.g. as pedigree declarations. Subsequent narrative statements were admitted by the House of Lords in The Aykroyd Peerage case, but no reasons are given for the ruling and it is submitted that on principle the decision on this point in The Dysart Peerage case is to be preferred.

2.3. Verbal parts of relevant acts

Where the fact that a statement was made is in itself in issue or relevant, evidence of its making is not hearsay, and is receivable without anything further being shown just as evidence of any other fact in issue is received. But where what is in issue or relevant is not the making of a statement but an act, both verbal and behavioural, components of that act may be proved. The reporting of those verbal components or statements is not hearsay; in this second type of case, the statement is admitted because it is part of an act of which evidence is admissible, and if the act would be irrelevant were it not for the contents of the statement accompanying it, neither the act (being irrelevant) nor the statement (being more hearsay) may be proved. In Wright v. Doe d. Tatham, the facts of which are given above, just because the letter-writers' statements were made in the course of the act of writing letters did not render them inadmissible, Colman J. pointing out that he knew of no case 'where the act done is, in its own nature, irrelevant to the issue, and where the declaration per se is inadmissible, in which it has been held that the union of the two has rendered them admissible'. Thus in Naidoo v. Kamal, interlocutory proceedings where the ownership of goods was in issue, whether the claimant had bought the goods of which the attachment debtor was custodian was itself a relevant question, and a statement by the person who had sold it to him was therefore received; but in Hyde v. Palmer, the fact of a sale having taken place at all was held to be irrelevant, and the seller's comments while entering into it had to be excluded.

Statements cannot be regarded as verbal parts of conduct unless the words are spoken by the person whose conduct is the subject of investigation and the words accompanied the conduct. Strict contemporaneity of words and acts is therefore required though if the conduct is of a continuing nature a statement

---

61 The husband's declarations in The Dysart Peerage case were held, at 502 f., not to satisfy the requirements of this exception, on which see below, pp. 508-90, 503-4.
63 See above, p. 506. Verbal conduct evidencing treatment, discussed immediately above, is of this kind.
65 (1837) 7 Ad. & E. 311 at 312 E.R. 488.
68 Sidney v. Sidneys (1840) 2 H. & C. 477, 48 E.R. 1254. In Lea v. Crake and Myr Mm., 1815 (1815) 8 S. & R. 388 (R.), where the issue was whether a will had been destroyed ante mortem, depositions on the previous occasion to and from the attorney's office where the actually destroyed the will were held to be sufficiently contemporaneous. made at any time during its continuance satisfies this requirement. It follows also from the fact that the declaration is only admitted because it is part of the act, that if the act is complete in itself, the declaration is not part of it. The act is incomplete if it is legally equivocal in nature, and the declaration is received in so far as, but only in so far as, it completes or explains the character of the act. Thus in Johnson v. Attorneys, Notaries and Conveyancers' Fidelity Guarantee Trust Co. Board of Control, statements made by a client on handing money to his attorney were received to explain the nature of the handing over, in itself ambiguous, for money can change hands as a loan, or a donation, or to be held by the recipient in trust for another, or to be kept for himself in settlement of a debt; though statements made by either party thereafter, such as the attorney's book entries reflecting his disposal of the money, would, the Court indicated, have been rejected as purely narrative and not required to complete the act. On the other hand, in R. v. Plummer, a postal official was charged with the theft of a bill of exchange from a letter in the post. A statement on the envelope, 'Two shillings paid' (being the postage payable for a letter and enclosure) was rejected as evidence that the letter had contained the enclosure alleged, presumably on the ground that the act of posting, though relevant, was in no way ambiguous so as to need explanation by the accompanying declaration.

2.4. Statements of physical or mental condition

A person's subjective feelings of the state of his mind or the state of his body, which are essentially internal, are susceptible of knowledge by others only by the indications he himself gives of them by words or by conduct. Where the indications are verbal, it is controversial among the writers on the law of evidence whether the reporting of the verbal indications is hearsay or original evidence, though the better view appears to be that it is not hearsay. Although the oral examination is hazy, however, its admissibility is undoubted, whether as an exception to the rule against hearsay or as non-hearsay by a line of cases tracing their origin to the fragmentarily reported 1663 decision of Thompson v. Trenanor. Where anyone's mental or bodily condition is in issue or relevant to an issue, his contemporaneous statements respecting those topics are admissible in proof of that condition. The leading case is Armitage v. Kleinert, an action on a life insurance policy, where the state of health of the life assured—the plaintiff's wife—at the time of taking out the policy was in issue. A friend of the wife's gave evidence that when visiting the latter she had found her in bed at an unusual hour, and she was permitted to relate the reasons—her illness—the wife had then assigned in explanation. An example of the reception of statements showing mental condition is R. v. Money and the accused was charged with the 12 See Lessing v. R. 1805 7 S. 156; Senkina v. Cartwright (1864) 5 R. & S. 1 at 18.

---

1257 (1) C.A. 493 (C). The accused's attempted suicide after arrest was held to be relevant and admissible in R. v. C. 1949 (2) K.A. 458 (E.R.), so as to be in evidence of his declarations in the suicide note explaining his reasons for the attempt.
126 (1846) 194 168 R. 179.
127 (1843) 838 R. 189, 102 E.R. 1258. See, also, R. v. Bulmer (1847) 2 C.A. 354, 375
128 E.R. 162.
murder of a woman. He had stated to a policeman that he had fought with two persons the same evening because of his suspicions that one was harboring with his (the accused's) wife, and that the other was harboring her. The policeman's evidence of this statement was admitted by Murray J.90

1['Any evidence which throws light upon [the intention of the accused] is prima facie relevant and admissible...'] If the deceased was a stranger to him it is a relevant question whether he stabbed her mistakenly for his supposed wife, and if so, what motive he had for injuring her and what was the extent of the injury he contemplated inflicting upon her, having regard, inter alia, to any excusable lack of control resulting from lawful provocation.91 Statements expressly or implicitly assertive of state of mind have similarly been received to show the declarant's ignorance,6 knowledge8 or belief9 of facts, his motive10 or state of confusion11 and the presence or absence of a fraudulent intent.12

It must be stressed that for statements to be received under this heading, the state of body or mind must itself be the fact in issue or relevant to an issue,8 and may be used only to establish that state: for example, declarations of belief are admissible only to show the belief but not the truth of the facts believed in,8 and in so far as the declaration is narrative it is similarly excluded. Thus in Anns v. Barton9 a doctor's evidence that his patient had stated his pain had been caused by a wasp sting was excluded, and in R. v. Larcombe,10 a charge of extortion, evidence that the complainant said he was in fear was received, but not his report of what had passed at the conversation between himself and the accused.

The requirement that a statement must relate to contemporaneous feelings only is apparently a flexible one. In Aveson v. Kinnaird11 declarations referring to the duration of the illness were received, and in In re Fletcher12 and R. v. Malof13 subsequent declarations showing state of mind were admitted, although Warrington J. in the former case agreed that contemporaneous ones might have had greater weight. In cases like Fletcher and Malof, the declaration is, according to Professor Cross,14 tendered as evidence of a person's feeling at a particular date, as circumstantial evidence from which the court may draw the inference that the feelings had existed at a date in the past or continued to exist to a date in the future.15 Where no such inference can reliably be drawn because 90 At 282.

96 R. v. Flour Mills (Pty.) Ltd. v. Addison (3), 1938 (4) S.A. 311 (T).
97 Subject to what is said below.
98 The exceptions to this principle, including the cases relating to the execution of wills or to patriarchy, are discussed at pp. 109-110 and pp. 110-116 respectively.
100 [1805] 6 B. & C. 1018.
103 Evidence, 3rd ed. (1967), pp. 470-1. See also the illuminating analysis by E. Seigman in 'An Exception to the Hearsey Rule' (1912-13) 26 Harv. L.R. 146.
104 This is in accord with the view of Laurence J. in Aveson v. Kinnaird, but is not quite reconcilable with the grounds of invalidation relied on by the other members of the Court.
intervening circumstances have created too great a danger of fraud, a subsequent statement will be excluded.22

However the contemporaneity requirement is interpreted, of course, it does not exclude testimony by a witness of what his past feelings or intentions were, though such evidence is of little weight.23

2.5. Declarations of intention to prove intention carried into effect

A related problem to that just discussed, and one to which no clear answer can be given, concerns the admissibility of evidence of a person’s statements of his intention to do an act, tendered to prove not his intention, but the fact that he did the act. In the American case of Mutual Life Insurance Company v.
Hillmon,24 a man’s letters from Kansas — his sister and his sweetheart telling them that he intended leaving for Colorado with a Mr. Hillmon were received as tending to prove that he and Hillmon had in fact left together. In England the admissibility of a declaration of intention for such a purpose is unsettled,25 but in South Africa statements of intention have in several cases been employed to support an inference that the intention was carried out. For example, a husband’s statements that he was going to give his wife a motor-car were admitted in Pietserse’s Executors v. Pietserse,26 to prove that he had in fact given it to her.27

In Glenegles Farm Dairy v. Schoembecker28 the judge held that such evidence, although inadmissible in criminal cases, could be received in civil cases for the purposes of corroboration only. The point was expressly left open by Van den Heever J.A. on appeal,29 but neither branch of Hoexter J.'s proposition can find unquestioning support on the authorities. Clayden J. would have excluded the evidence entirely in the civil case of International Tobacco Co. (S.A.) Ltd. v.
United Tobacco Companies (South) Ltd.30 As to criminal cases, while the judgment of Stratford C.J. in R. v. Blom31 appears to be in line with English cases such as R. v. Wainwright32 in holding that evidence of the deceased’s statement that she was going to meet the accused could not properly be used to prove she 22 See Langham v. Allen, 1961 (1) S.A. 911 (N) at 915.

23 Elliot v. Ilen, 1963 (1) S.A. 703 (A.D.) at 709; Kelly v. Buttershaw [1949] 2 All E.R.
380 (Q.B.) at 383.
24 (1892) 145 U.S. 285. It is argued by E. Seligman in ‘An Exception to the Heasman Rule’ (1912-13) 26 Harv. L. R. 146 that the Hillmon case logically means the abolition of the entire heasman rule, but see J. A. Mapstone, ‘The Hillmon Case—Thirty Three Years After’ (1925)
39 Harv. L. R. 703. The United States court has not been prepared to extend the Hillmon decision in the direction Seligman pointed out as implicitly: see Seabrook v. U.S., 290 U.S.
96 (1933).33
Gooderson in (1956) Cambridge L.J. at 207, the Court admitted a statement by X as to Y’s suicidal intention as tending to prove that Y had attempted to carry out that intention. See 26 1921 E.D.L. 214.
27 See also, Harris v. Conlon, 1926 O.P.D. 91; Sproat v. Popes (Pty.) Ltd., 1938 C.P.D.
372 at 376. In R. v. Boulman, 1939 (4) S.A. 457 (T), Mannis J. went even further in relying on the terms of the instructions given to a trap participating in illicit diamond buying to prove that the instructions had been obeyed. Cfr. Ex parte Ford and Langhans in re Estate Bodenker, 1939 (4) S.A. 338 (N) at 346.
28 1947 (4) S.A. 56 (E).
29 1953 (2) S.A. 343 (W) at 348.
30 (1875) 13 Cox C.C. 171.
did so, a compromise position is that taken by Fischer J.P. in R. v. Apter in admitting, on the same basis as an admission, evidence of the accused's statement of intention to prove the act intended; the English authorities were distinguished on the ground that they had all concerned statements made by persons other than the accused.

It should be noticed that although evidence is frequently received of the fact that the accused previously threatened to commit the act of which he is then charged, this is done as being relevant to the issue of the identity of the criminal, the commission of the act by someone being required to be proved ad eundem.26

There is one clear case where statements of intention are admissible as circumstantial evidence of probability to prove the act done. Ante-testamentary declarations by a deceased testator of his intentions regarding the disposal of his estate are received to prove the contents of his will,29 and also apparently its due execution.30 In view of the confusion of authority outlined above, however, it is not clear whether this is to be regarded as an example of the general principle of admissibility, or (as seems more likely) as an exception to the general rule of exclusion.

Post-testamentary declarations by a testator are discussed below, p. 304

2.6. Spontaneous declarations

This class of statements stems, like the category of assertions concerning physical condition, from *Thompson v. Tremain*31 but, unlike that category, has been held clearly to constitute an exception to the rule against hearsay.32 The following passage by Wigmore,33 which has twice been approved by the Appellate Division,34 gives the ground upon which this exception has been recognized:

"This general principle is based on the experience that, under certain external circumstances of physical shock, a stress of nervous excitement may be produced which stills the reflective faculties and removes their control, so that the utterance which then occurs is a spontaneous and sincere response to the actual sensations and perceptions already produced by the external shock. Since this utterance is made under the immediate and uncontrolled domination of the senses, and during the brief period when considerations of self-interest could not have been brought fully to bear by reasoned reflection, the utterance may be taken as particularly trustworthy (or at least, as lacking the usual grounds of untruthfulness), and thus as expressing the real tenor of the speaker's belief as to the facts just observed by him; and may therefore be received as testimony to those facts."35

A clear illustration of the principle is afforded by R. v. Taylor,36 a charge of culpable homicide arising out of the death of the accused's wife. To prove that it was the accused who had assaulted her, testimony from the neighbours was received that on the day in question they had heard sounds of a scuffle, thuds

---

26 1941 O.P.D. 163.
28 Bayley v. Lord St. Leonards (1876) L.R. 1, P.D. 154 (C.A.) at 151, 152; De Lange v. Rudman, 1928 R.D.L. 430; R. v. Barton, 1965 (1) S.A. 697 (C) at 695-700 (through at 698 such evidence was said to be of little weight). See also, Ex parte Shad, 1972 T.P.D. 226, where the testator's declarations of his intention not to revoke his will were received as evidence that he had not revoked it.
29 De Lange v. Rudman, 1928 R.D.L. 430 at 441. See also, the discussion of the maxim omnis praestumatur rite esse acta, below, p. 600, n. 25.
30 (1893) 5 S.J. 432, 90 E.R. 1057.
31 1963 (3) S.A. 174 (A.D.) at 180; S. v. Levis, 1966 (4) S.A. 563 (A.D.) at 577.
32 Wigmore on Evidence, 3rd ed. (1940), VI, § 1,747.
33 In Gleb's case, above, at 160, and Tiger's case, above, at 573.
and the deceased’s voice crying out, ‘John, please don’t hit me any more, you will kill me!’

In S. v. Tuge William J.A. listed the four requirements he conceived a statement would have to satisfy to be admissible as a dying declaration.

First, the declarant must be shown to be unavailable as a witness. In Tuge’s case itself the declarant in fact could not be found, but it is submitted that on Wigmore’s reasoning, if the declarations are accepted because they are the best evidence, indeed better, because fresher, than the declarant’s testimony on the stand, they should not be rejected even if the declarant is available. It is accordingly to be hoped that the requirement of unavailability mentioned by Williamson J.A. is not to be regarded as settled beyond the possibility of reconsideration.

The second requirement is that there must have been an occurrence startling enough to produce a state of nervous excitement in the declarant, whether he was a participator or a bystander. The typical cases have concerned explosions, collisions, or assaults, but it is not necessary that any physical shock has been present: in Tuge’s case the startling event was a robbery.

Third, the declaration must have been made while the stress was still so operative upon the declarant that his reflective powers may be assumed to have been in abeyance. How strict a degree of contemporaneity was to be insisted on before the requirement could be regarded as satisfied was until recently controversial. Our law in this regard has now been settled by S. v. Tuge, which gave approval to Wigmore’s view that the proper course of inquiry is not a judicial weighing up of minutes or hours to determine whether objectively considered a story can be devised or contrived in four or five or fifteen minutes. Rather, the inquiry must be directed to a determination by the trial court whether, as a question of fact, the particular declaration tendered was in truth made spontaneously at a time of stress—an approach already adopted in R. v. Le Roux, R. v. Nicholls, and Pan Zyl v. S.A.N.T.A.M., Bpk. There is no reason why the 17 As with any statement admitted as an exception to the hearsay rule, the declarant and not the reporting witness is in fact the person on whose credit the court must rely. See S. v. Qolo, 1965 (1) S.A. 77 (A.D.) at 181; Wigmore on Evidence, 3rd ed. (1940), VI, § 2731. Provided he speaks from personal knowledge, there would seem to be no reason why an onlooker’s declaration should not be received: 'The Schwartz' (1859) 4 HL 153 E.R. 1244; Agasie v. London Tinplate Co., Ltd. (1972) 27 L.T. 492. See, too, Milne and Searle v. Leister (1962) 7 H. & N. 786 at 795, 158 E.R. 686 at 689.

---

19 e.g. Bickart v. Mason, 1921 N.P.D. 530; Vermeule v. Parity Insurance Co., Ltd. (In liquidation), 1956 (2) S.A. 372 (W).
21 The learned Judge of Appeal was apparently unaware of the inconsistency between this fact and his approval of the passage from Wigmore quoted above.
22 The controversy corresponded to the distinction between those cases based on R. v. Dodingfield (1879) 14 Cox C.C. 341, and those based on R. v. Foster (1894) 6 Car. & P. 325, 172 E.R. 126.
23 1966 (4) S.A. 553 (A.D.), Sec, however, (1967) 84 S.A.L.J. 15, where doubts are expressed as to whether the declaration admitted could in fact be regarded as a spontaneous response to the occurrence.
24 Wigmore on Evidence, 3rd ed. (1940), VI, § 1750.
28 1931 N.P.D. 357 at 560. spontaneous declarations should not have been made immediately before as well as immediately after the startling event.\footnote{See A. P. O'Dowd, Law of Evidence in South Africa (1963), p. 82; L. T. C. Harms in (1965) 28 T.H.R.-R. 256.}

The nature or contents of the declaration may afford a guide as to its spontaneity. An offer by one driver involved in a collision to pay the other, though made immediately, was held to be too deliberate an action to qualify, in Mohizela v. Yorkshire Insurance Co., Ltd.,\footnote{1961 (3) S.A. 430 (N).} but the deceased's wish that the murderer would enter Paradise, her husband being charged with her murder, was held in R. v. Le Roux\footnote{(1897) 14 S.C. 421 at 421.} to negative any idea of her having maliciously devised a story against him. It was made clear in Tuge's case\footnote{1965 (4) S.A. 555 (A.D.) at 573-4, overruling Kelly v. S.A.R. & H., 1928 T.P.D. 671, where reliance was placed on Austin v. Arnold & Sons (1917) 64 L.R.B. 2214.} that a declaration in appropriate circumstances may be regarded as spontaneous even though it was made in answer to a question and even though it is written and not oral.

The fourth requirement for admissibility as a spontaneous declaration, as formulated in Tuge, is that the statement must not be a reconstruction of a past event, but must relate to the circumstances of the startling occurrence preceding it. The distinction drawn by Lord Normand in Teper v. R.\footnote{[1931] A.C. 483 at 486, discussing L. v. Gibson (1887) 14 Q.B.D. 537. In Gibson, the accused was alleged to have wounded the complainant by throwing a stone at him. Evidence that a woman was heard to say 'The person who threw the stone went in there' (pointing to the house where the accused was found) was excluded as pure hearsay. This was followed, on very similar facts, in R. v. John, 1929 W.L.R. 50.} between declarations relating to the commission or circumstances of the act in question, which would be admissible, and declarations relating to the identity of the actor, which would be inadmissible, has no validity in principle\footnote{See Wigmore on Evidence, 3rd ed. (1940), § 1750.} and was not adopted in S. v. Tuge, where the declaration received was a note of the registration number of the robbers' getaway car—which was clearly relevant only to identification.

Purely narrative matter contained in the declaration will be excluded, as in Joberti N.O. v. S.A.R. & H.,\footnote{1939 T.P.D. 164.} which arose out of a collision between a trolley and a train. A declaration by the trolley driver immediately thereafter as to his authority to drive his trolley on that line was rejected as not referring to the incidents of the actual collision. If the absence of the declarant's reflective faculties is considered to provide sufficient guarantee of the trustworthiness of the declaration, there seems to be no reason in logic why its narrative portions should be regarded as less reliable than its descriptive ones, but the distinction is sanctioned by authority, and Wigmore points out that 'it is possible to argue that such utterances imply to some extent a process of reflection or deliberate reasoning'.

3. Exceptions to the Hearsay Rule: Declarations by Deceased Persons

These six exceptions to the rule against hearsay are variously justified but, as applied in England, all require as a prerequisite to admissibility the death of the declarant. This has not been uniformly insisted on in the South African cases, apparently influenced in this regard by Naik v. Pilley’s Trustee, where unavailability of the declarant even from causes other than death was said to suffice. However, most of these cases anticipate the decision in Vulcan Rubber Works (Pty.) Ltd. v. S.A.R. & H. and must therefore be regarded as having been overruled.

Many of the conditions of admissibility are illogical and antiquated. In civil cases the scope of admissibility as regards documentary hearsay has been considerably extended by the Civil Proceedings Evidence Act. Unfortunately the old rules have not been similarly relaxed in criminal trials in this country. The recent English Criminal Evidence Act may provide a useful legislative precedent, being similar in conception to the civil act. Perhaps most desirable of all would be legislation on the lines of those in force in Massachusetts and Rhode Island where all declarations of deceased persons based on their personal knowledge are received, and the circumstances under which they were made affect merely the weight of the evidence.

It may be mentioned that all these exceptions to the rule against hearsay are governed by section 252 of the Criminal Procedure Act and therefore governed largely by English law. The dying declarations exception is in addition dealt with specifically by section 252, to the same effect.

It should be borne in mind throughout that the deceased whose words are being reported is the real witness, and it must be shown that had he been alive he would have been competent to testify.

3.1. Declarations in the course of duty

Written or oral declarations made by deceased persons in the ordinary course of duty contemporaneously with the act or transaction of which they were under a duty to speak, may be received in evidence. This exception to the rule against hearsay is usually dated from Price v. The Earl of Torrington, where, in order to prove the quantity of beer the plaintiff had supplied to the defendant, evidence was received of an entry made in the plaintiff’s shopbook by a deceased drayman recording, as was the practice in the plaintiff’s brewery, the deliveries he had made that day. The reason for this exception is said to be the unlikelihood of someone misrepresenting facts where the person to whom the duty is owed could easily discover inaccuracies or falsifications.

The declarant must have had personal knowledge of the facts asserted and must be speaking of his own acts and not those of others. The latter condition

2. G. v. Ferguson, 1949 (3) S.A. 69 (N) (declarations in the course of duty); Pateh v. Port Elizabeth Municipality, 1944 E.D.L. 284 (declarations as to public and general rights).
3. 1923 A.D. 471 at 477; per De Villiers J.A.: ‘As the rule springs ex necessitate reg the principle applies equally to cases where the best evidence is not available, such as the declarant’s grave illness in the present instance.’
4. 1958 (3) S.A. 283 (A.D.) at 294, quoted above, p. 98, n. 2.
5. Act No. 25 of 1965, sec. 34.
8. See above, chap. 16.
10. (1764) 1 SaK. 283, 91 E.R. 232. was not satisfied in The Henry Caxon,\(^9\) an action which arose out of a collision between two ships; entries in the logbook of one of the ships, by its deceased first mate, describing the incident, were excluded because the description of both ships' manoeuvres was inextricably intermingled, so that it was impossible to tell what had been done at what time. The fact that the defendant had been under a duty to record the acts of the other ship as well, and had seen those acts personally, could not make the entries admissible. Lack of personal knowledge was the fault in Van Vreden v. Bourhill\(^10\) where a merchant's ledgers were tendered in evidence, and Gregorowski J. commented:

I cannot see how an ordinary ledger can be of any use, because the bookkeeper probably knows nothing of the transaction; he would probably get the details from a rough day-book.\(^\)

The existence of the declarant's duty to record or assert the facts must be proved a fortiori before any evidence of the declaration can be received, as must the fact that it was made contemporaneously with those facts.\(^8\) The duty must have been owed to another, such as to the declarant's employer,\(^9\) and not a mere practice of convenience adopted by the declarant for his own purposes in dealing with his employer or with others.\(^7\) Thus records made by a physician of the results of his examination of a patient were excluded in Simen v. Simon,\(^8\) and a stockbroker's records of his purchase of shares for a customer in Massey v. Allen,\(^7\) on the other hand, in Doe v. Pattershall v. Turford,\(^2\) where a firm of solicitors had given instructions to their clerks that the time and date of service of notices should be recorded, on the one occasion when a partner served a notice his record of that fact was received. '[W]e must assume', Lord Tenterden C.J. remarked,\(^8\) 'that when a principal served the notice, he would do what he required his clerk to do.' In other words, since the principal was performing a duty owed by his clerks to him, he was under the same duty as they were to record that performance.

The declaration is required to have been made a fortiori contemporaneously with the occurrence of the facts recorded, but this requirement is not strictly applied, and declarations in the evening reporting the morning's transactions would be admissible. In The Henry Caxon,\(^8\) a gap of two days was held too great, but in Wistan v. Winter and Company,\(^8\) Lansdown J.P. appeared satisfied to admit the declaration despite the lapse of a similar period of time. A case where contemporaneity was clearly lacking is Polini v. Gray,\(^2\) where the record of an appli-tion for a government appointment tendered to prove the applicant's date of birth was rejected, inter alia, because the birth had obviously occurred many years earlier.

Unlike declarations against interest, declarations in the course of duty are rendered inadmissible if the declarant is shown to have had a motive to misrepresent the facts asserted. Another point of difference from declarations against interest is that declarations in the course of duty are admissible only to establish those facts of which the declarant had a duty to speak. Collateral facts asserted, however closely connected with the duty, cannot be proved by the declaration. In Chambers v. Bernasconi, where a deputy-sheriff was under a duty to inform the sheriff of the fact and date of any arrest, it was held that his return could not be used to establish the place where an arrest had taken place. The extent of this principle can be seen from Stapleton v. Clough, where it had been shown that the declarant was under a duty to keep a written record, which was received, his oral declaration made at the same time and contradicting the writing had to be excluded. Had his duty been one more general in scope, as in Nolan v. Bernard, where a farm manager was charged with keeping a complete record of all daily events of the farm, the declaration might have been received.

3.2. Declarations against interest

Evidence may be given of declarations made by a deceased person if, to his knowledge, the declarations were against his pecuniary or proprietary interest at the time he made them, and provided he had personal knowledge of the facts asserted. The theory of this exception is that a statement asserting a fact against interest is unlikely to be either deliberately false or heedlessly incorrect. Declarations against penal or social interest cannot, however, be received under this exception to the hearsay rule, whatever the gravity of their possible consequences. An admission by the deceased declarant that he committed fraud is received because it amounts to an acknowledgment of liability to repay the amount fraudulently obtained, even though the criminal consequences would almost invariably be uppermost in his mind.

Provided the declaration is against pecuniary or proprietary interest, the extent of the interest is apparently immaterial, though if it is trifling it does not necessarily provide any motivation to tell the truth. Apparently it suffices that the declaration is prima facie against interest: it is not necessary to go to the

---

Footnotes

- Chambers v. Bernasconi, where a deputy-sheriff was under a duty to inform the sheriff of the fact and date of any arrest, it was held that his return could not be used to establish the place where an arrest had taken place.
- This inexplicable and unjustifiable restriction dates from the Sussex Rexage Case (1844) 11 CL & P. 85, 8 E.R. 1034.
- See Bernard S. Jefferson, 'Declarations Against Interest' (1944) 38 Bernard L.R. 1 at 19, n. 42.
- This test, associated in Taylor v. Williams (1878) 3 Ch.D. 606, was approved by the Court of Appeal in Coward v. Motor Insurers Bureau (1942) 3 All E.R. 531 (C.A.) at 536. extent of showing that it could never be self-serving. Nor is it required that the declarant would have had any interest in the action in which his declaration is tendered, this being the distinguishing feature between declarations against interest and admissions.

The underlying concept of purely mercenary psychology requires that the declarant must have had personal knowledge of the facts asserted, failing which the supposed guarantee of truthfulness is lacking. Similarly, the theory requires that the declarant must have been aware that the declaration is against his interest, though this requirement has not always been insisted on.

A declaration is against pecuniary interest if it admits a liability of the declarant or repels a claim he would otherwise have against another, e.g. entries in the books of a deceased creditor that a debt has been discharged, or a statement abandoning a claim for damages, or an acknowledgment that money received are being held for the declarant's employer or partner. A declaration is against proprietary interest where, for example, the declarant would inherit on another's intestacy and his declaration upholds the validity of a will whose maker he does not take, or where the declaration predicated a lesser title in property than the declarant appears to have, such as a statement that he holds as tenant or bailee rather than as owner. This is subject to the limitation that a tenant's assertions cannot be received to derogate from his landlord's title.

In some of these cases it will be seen that the question of the declarant's conscious awareness that he is speaking against interest is a highly theoretical one, presuming, for example, his knowledge that possession is prima facie evidence of ownership; and if the fact that he is a tenant is implied from his assertion that he has paid his rent, this requirement becomes even more remote since he himself would no doubt regard his statement as highly self-serving. Logic would therefore require at least that if there is evidence showing that he was not in fact aware that the statement was against his interest, it should be excluded. Unlike with some of the other exceptions to the hearsay rule even the proved existence of a motive to falsify goes only to the weight of the declaration and does not affect its admissibility.

---

1 This was said to be the test in Smith v. Blakley (1867) 1 L.R. 2 Q.B. 325 and was preferred to that of Taylor v. Witham in Ward v. H. S. Pitt & Company (1913) 2 K.B. 130 (C.A.) at 137, but Baker, The Hearsay Rule (1920), pp. 71-2, points out that the prior false fact accords with the bulk of older authority.

3 Stott v. Ferretti (1880) 3 H.L. 629; Ward v. H. S. Pitt & Company (1913) 2 K.B. 130 (C.A.) at 137; In re Jentin (1927) Ch. 454 (where the declarant's assertion of ownership was held not to satisfy this requirement).

6 Blund-y-Jenkins v. Earl of Dunraven (1939) 2 Ch. 121 (C.A.); Williams N.O. v. Eagle Star Insurance Company, 1961 (2) S.A. 531 (C).

8 Relief v. Estate Du Plessis, 1928 C.P.D. 381.

9 In re Adams (1922) 2 Ch. 340.

10 E.g., E. v. Exeter (1869) L.R. 4 Q.B. 341. If the declarant has no apparent title his statements to this effect cannot be against his interest: Re Gardner's Will Trusts (1936) 3 All E.R. 938. Cf., on pecuniary interest, In re Senior (1952) 2 Ch. 654 (C.A.) at 655.

12 Taylor v. Witham (1876) 3 C.B. 450. It is of course manifest that the declarant's motive to misrepresent or his belief that the declaration is self-serving destroys the supposed guarantee of reliability. See (1944) 58 Harvard L.R. 1 at 53.
The fact that the declaration was made in contemplation of death, so that it really made the interest of the declarant's estate, does not render it inadmissible. Since the restriction to pecuniary or proprietary interests in any event limits this hearsay exception to patrimony rather than personal interests.

The interest impugned by the declaration need not be a legally enforceable one: an acknowledgement of a friendly non-contractual arrangement to share travelling expenses between workmates with a lift scheme has been held to be a declaration against interest. A declaration that is neutral, equally self-sacrificing and disinterested, is inadmissible, but a declaration which is against interest is received even if in pecuniary terms refer to other favourable assertions. The interest must, however, be one existing at the time the declaration is made. In Smith v. Blake an agent's letter to his principal acknowledging the receipt of three huge cheques excluded, since the possibility of this making him responsible in the event of their loss was held to be too remote a contingency.

In Lloyd v. Powell [1961] Steam Coal Co., Ltd., a man's admission that he was responsible for a woman's pregnancy was rejected as importing only a future liability for maintenance of the child, though his interest might have been regarded as a presently existing one if the woman had been married and her husband had had a claim for damages for the adultery.

A declaration against interest is admissible to prove not only the fact which is against interest but also collateral facts contained in the declaration, even where these are highly self-serving. In Stuart v. Grant a deceased purchaser of land had noted the price he was to pay on a copy of the diagram distributed at the auction sale where ... night, and this was held to render admissible his further statement on the plan indicating the situation of a proposed market. A tenant's statement that he is such is admissible to prove further facts asserted, such as the identity of the landlord, and a confession by the declarant that he participated with X in perpetrating a fraud is received in so far as it proves X's complicity as well. In Higgin v. Ridgway an entry in the books of a midwife reflecting payment of charges 'or attending the delivery' were received to establish the child's date of birth.

It appears from the latter case that the entire entry need not have been made. at the same time, for the midwife entered the debit for attending delivery some five months before receiving and recording payment, and it was the later entry which rendered the whole admissible.

3.3. Dying declarations

The doctrine governing admissibility under this exception to the hearsay rule has been described as ‘the most mystical in its theory and the most arbitrary in its limitations’. It may be formulated as permitting the reception, in criminal cases where the accused is charged with criminal responsibility for a death, of declarations made by the deceased victim as to the circumstances of his death, provided these were made at a time when the declarant’s death was impending and when he had a settled hopeless expectation of death. The requirements for admissibility are as strictly applied where the dying declaration is tendered by the defence as where it is tendered by the prosecution.

As the declarant is in effect the real witness, it must be shown that he would have been testimonially competent had he been alive. The declaration tendered must be a complete one, not in the sense of being a full description of the causes or symptoms of the fatal injury or disease, but as representing all he wished to say. Incomplete, as in Wagh v. The King, where while speaking the declarant fell into a coma from which he never recovered, the partial statement must be excluded in toto. It is not necessary for the post mortem verba of the declarant to be given, as long as the court is satisfied that the meaning of the deceased is being accurately conveyed.

The use of such declaration is confined, typically, to charges of murder or culpable homicide—a restriction which, though manifestly illogical, is well established. It is not enough that the death of the declarant in fact resulted from the alleged act of the accused, if the charge is not based on the death. Thus in R. v. Huttenius on a charge of administering an abstinence, the fact that the patient had died in consequence of the drug did not render her dying declaration admissible. The requirement that the death charged be the death of the declarant is equally illogical, as can be seen from the American case of Westberry v. State, where a husband and wife were shot by an intruder at the same time. The accused was charged with the murder of the husband only, and accordingly the dying declaration of the wife had to be excluded.

[13] Although the recognition of this exception is usually dated from Wright v. Closser (1858) 1 M. & W. 82 at 825, 139 E.R. 581 at 585, that dying declarations are inadmissible in civil cases. See, also, Katsan v. Capou (1829) 1 Meiz. 430.
[17] The limitation was apparently disregarded in R. v. Relov (1817) 2 M. & Rob. 33, 174 E.R. 211. The accused was charged with the murder of A, by feeding him with a poisoned cake. The cook, i.e., partner of the cake, and her dying declaration, that she had put nothing bad in the cake when she prepared it, was received as forming part of the whole transaction. The case is perhaps to be regarded as an example of the overriding inclusionary role the res gestae doctrine can play.
To be admissible, a dying declaration need not have been spontaneous. It may have been elicited by questions, even leading questions, though these should if possible be recorded along with the answers, and will in any event affect the weight to be attached to the declaration. This follows from the underlying rationale of admissibility which is found in the deceased's conscious and deliberate awareness of the implications of his situation. The declarant's mind, said Baron Eyre in R. v. Drummond, impressed with the awful idea of approaching dissolution, acts under a sanction equal to that which it is presumed to feel by a solemn appeal to God upon oath.

The declarations therefore of a person dying under such circumstances, are considered as equivalent to the evidence of the living witness upon the oath.

The declarant's awareness of the retributions at hand in the after-life is therefore a prerequisite. In R. v. Pike, the declarations of a 4-year-old child were rejected as he could not have any such awareness, but those of a 10-year-old were received in R. v. Perkins upon proof that he believed he would go to hell if he told a lie and to heaven if he were truthful. Oddly enough, the question of whether the declarant's scheme of beliefs include the conception of sanctions in an after-life has never been considered in South Africa, but the Australian courts have excluded the dying declaration of a native of Papua and New Guinea on the ground of his belief that the next life will be a comfortable one irrespective of death-bed veracity or falsehood.

That the declarant was in extremis is more readily proved than his awareness of that fact—his 'settled, hopeless expectation of death'. His expectation of impending death may be indicated directly by the words he used or by the fact that he was so told by his attendants; or it may be proved circumstantially by his demeanour or his conduct such as the fact that he gave instructions as to his funeral or took leave of his family. Or it may be shown that the nature of his injuries or illness was such that he must inevitably have had the required realization. Even the words used are not conclusive for the deceased's settled 18 (1853) 1 Ex. & P. 598, 172 E.R. 562.

---

20 Anthropology has amply documented the fact that in most African tribes, there is no conception of an after-life corresponding to that of Christianity, but that the concept is expressed in the form of ancestor worship which is far from amicable (see M. Fortes, 'Some Reflections on Ancestor Worship in Africa', African Systems of Thought (1965), ed. M. Fortes & G. Digerlen, pp. 128 ff.; and that ancestor worship does not necessarily play any part in the upholding of morality (see, e.g., J. D. & E. J. Krige, 'The Lorende of the Transvaal', African World (1954), ed. Darril Ford, esp. at pp. 79 & 80).

23 R. v. Perry 1909 12 K.B. 697 (C.A.)

26 R. v. Spillbury (1835) 7 Car. & P. 187 at 190, 173 E.R. 82 at 84.

expectation of death has been held not to be sufficiently established where he said 'I have no hope of recovery, I think I shall die', or 'I feel so weak that I do not think I will succeed in getting well'. Further, the courts have recognized that in certain African languages expressions such as 'I am dead' or 'I have been killed' do not have their literal meaning but are used idiomatically to indicate a feeling of faintness, unconsciousness or serious injury.

If there is any doubt as to the extent of the deceased declarant's knowledge of his condition, the declaration will be excluded—for example, if he gives some indication that he retains some hope of recovery, however faint. But if after the declaration is made his hopes revive or his expectation of death recedes, it is not thereby rendered inadmissible, provided death in fact ensues, no matter how long after. If in the required state of mind he reaffirms a previous declaration made before he was in hopeless expectation of death, it must be clear that he remembered to adhere in articulo mortis to all the details of the previous declaration, which should therefore be read over to him when he reaffirms it.

3.4. Declarations as to pedigree

Where genealogical or pedigree matters are in issue, and not merely relevant to the issue, hearsay declarations by deceased members of the family as to the relationship in issue, made ante ilicem moriendum, are admissible as an exception to the hearsay rule.

These declarations are received as reflecting the family tradition as to its history, so that it need not be shown that the declarant had personal knowledge of the facts asserted; but only members of the family are presumed to be sufficiently acquainted with the family tradition to be qualified to speak to it, and declarations made by friends or servants whatever their degree of intimacy with the family cannot be received under this exception. The testimonial qualification of the deceased declarant—which must be proved adiuvi in the declarant itself—requires the declarant to have been legitimately related by blood, or have been the spouse of a person so related, to either the family or the person alleged to be related to the family. Relationship to both need not be shown, because if this could be established ad litem the declaration itself would be superfluous. This principle was apparently overlooked in R. v. Ndabaconke, an incest charge where the State alleged the complainant to be the daughter of the accused's illegitimate child. A declaration of the complainant's deceased grandmother, whose illicit intercourse with the accused had resulted in the birth of the complainant's mother, was excluded on the ground that she was not legitimately connected with the accused, but the judgment cannot be supported as she was clearly legitimately connected with the complainant, on the principle
"nouer makk't geen baard". The deceased declarant as a member of his own family may have spoken as to his own parentage, legitimacy, etc., as in Jenks v. Davies, where Lord Denman C.J. commented that "neither the admissibility nor the effect of the evidence is altered by the accident that the fact which is for the judge as a condition precedent is the same fact which is for the jury in the sense."

The identity of the declarant need not be shown if the declaration has been accepted by the family generally as representing its tradition, such as entries in family Bibles or a pedigree displayed by the family in its reception room. It is only if such general family acceptance is lacking that the identity of the maker must be established.

Pedigree declarations are received on the theory that events affecting the family or its members would naturally be the subject of discussion within the family: in particular, the time or place of birth, marriages and deaths and the identity of the participants in these occasions, but also matters of an individual's personal history such as the fact that he ran away from home, committed a murder, or took up a particular occupation or residence. Declarations on

---

21 H.L.C. 1 at 53, 13 H.L.R. 1 at 10-11.
23 1913 E.D.L. 131.
24 As laid down in In Re Deventer, 1906 (3) S.A. 162 (A.J.) at 204-5, it is clear that our courts must apply South African and not English substantive law in determining who is a relative legitimately connected by blood, and the cases based on the English doctrine that an illegitimate child is father sole are therefore not to be followed. It should be noted, however, that even in English declarations by a deceased father that his children are illegitimate have been admitted; e.g. Sheldon v. Patrick (1860) 2 Sw. & Tr. 170, (64 E.R. 956; Murray v.
Edler (1870) L.R. 12 Ch.D. 845; In Re Turner (1882) L.R. 29 Ch.D. 993. As to statements by the putative father, see B v. Attorney-General (1962) 1 All E.R. 62. For South African cases on the point, see Fitzgerald v. Groves, 1911 E.D.L. 432 at 444, 465, and Wilkinson v. Estate Sieym
1947 (2) S.A. 140 (C).
25(1847) 10 Q.B. 315, 116 E.R. 129. See also, Sheldon v. Patrick (1860) 2 Sw. & Tr. 170, 164 E.R. 956; In re Turner (1882) L.R. 29 Ch. 985.
26 1847) 10 Q.B. 315 at 324, 116 E.R. 122 at 125.
28, 29 E.R. 11; Hubber v. Louis (1860) 1 L.R. 1 Exch. 255.
29 The Perth Perceval (1845) 2 H.L.C. 255 at 275, 9 E.R. 1322 at 1327. See, too, Sowle v.
Froiss (1851) 5 App. Cas. 623 (H.L.) at 641.
30 Edmond v. Attorney-General (1831) 2 Russ. & Ad. 146 at 149, 29 E.R. 350 at 356-7; The Shrewsbury Perceval (1838) 10 Ch. & F. 159, 6 E.R. 716; The Shrewsbury Perceval (1838) see Fitzgerald v. Groves, 1911 E.D.L. 432 at 444, 465, and Wilkinson v. Estate Sieym
1947 (2) S.A. 140 (C).
33 The Late Perceval (1853) 10 App. Cas. 969 (H.L.)
34 Doe v. Baring v. Griffin (182) 3 East 293, 104 E.R. 855; Richon v. Neches (1844) such matters are received, in the oft-quoted words of Lord Eldon L.C. in Whitehouse v. Baker, > 'the natural effusions of a party, who must know the truth; and who speaks upon the occasion, when his mind stands in an even position, without any temptation to exceed or fall short of the truth'.

If, therefore, the declarations were made at a time when a controversy (though not necessarily actual litigation) as to the very point had arisen, that is, post litum motam, they will be excluded. There is no for disqualifying the declaration even if it was made for the purpose of avoiding a controversy which it was foreseen might arise in the future, but which had not yet caused dispute, though this circumstance may impair the weight to be given to the declaration.

3.5. Declarations as to public or general rights

This exception to the hearsay rule allows evidence to be given of declarations made ante litum motam by deceased persons of competent knowledge, to establish matters of public or general interest. 'Interest' here is used not in the sense of gratifying curiosity or desire for information, but refers to matters 'in which a class of the community [has] a pecuniary interest, or some interest by which their legal rights and liabilities are affected'.

Private or individual rights cannot be established in this fashion, even though a number of individuals may have similar rights. The presence of a cluster of private rights does not make the issue one of general interest—it is not a mere matter of degree or quantity, but of the nature of the right. Thus the question whether, in a particular district, it was the sheriff or the local authority which was charged with carrying out a death sentence was held to be a matter of purely private rights in R. v. Anstruther, though in Rogers v. Wood, in contrast, the establishment of jurisdiction as between the city of Chester and the county of Chester was treated as a matter of general rights. On the other hand, though the issue may be a private one, it may coincide with questions of public right. For example, in Thomas v. Jenkins evidence of *v. *v. vation as declared by deceased persons was received once it had been shown that the boundaries of a farm coincided with the boundaries of the hamlet in which it fell, e. the same would presumably apply if the private rights derived from the homestead upon the existence of public rights.

---

2 The Berkeley Peerage (1811) 4 Camp. 426, 171 E.R. 125; The Lovet Peerage (1833) 30 Apr. Cas. 703 (E.L.) at 709, 277.
3 A declaration made when a has on a collateral point has arisen is admissible: Gan v. Word (1857) 7 E & B. 586, 119 E.R. 1335; The Shawbury Peerage (1830) 8 H.L.C. 1 at 22-3, 4 E.R. 1 at 10.
6 Monkton v. Attorney-General (1833) 2 Russ. & M. 144 at 146, 30 E.R. 350 at 357.
8 119 E.R. 196 at 198. It is doubtful whether the issue in Foster & Downey v. Port Elizabeth Municipal Council, 1944 E.D.L. 254, compiled with this test (though Cane v. I., appeared to rely on this exception to the hearsay rule), but it seems, in any event that the evidence was not put to a hearsay use.
10 (1835) 2 Ad. & E. 788, 111 E.R. 304. Another case is Widium v. Gartham (1793)
13 (1837) 5 Ad. & E. 525, 112 E.R. 291.
Naturally, evidence under this heading is equally admissible whether it asserts reputation as to the existence of a public right, or as to the non-existence of the right.\textsuperscript{72}

The reason advanced for the admissibility of such declarations is that matters of reputation necessarily predicate the concurrence of many and, being matters of general concern, are likely to be discussed by and therefore known to those affected, so that contradiction could be expected from others with conflicting interests.\textsuperscript{73} It follows that only the declarations of persons with personal knowledge of the reputation prevailing in the community are admissible.\textsuperscript{74} In the case of public rights, such as whether a particular road on private land is a public highway,\textsuperscript{75} any member of the public would be competent,\textsuperscript{76} although unless the declarant had had some connexion with the rights or their user his assertion would be of little weight. In the case of rights of a more restricted kind, which are confined to members of a particular community,\textsuperscript{77} only members of that community are considered competent.\textsuperscript{78} The fact that the declarant was personally interested in the rights does not disqualify his declarations.\textsuperscript{79} If, however, the declarations were made per flammam, the possibility of misrepresentation is thought to become too immediate and the declarations will be excluded.\textsuperscript{80}

The competency of the declarants, although a prerequisite for the admissibility of their statements, need not be shown directly. In Newcastle v. The Hundred of Braxton\textsuperscript{81} it was implied from the nature of the position held by them. The decision of Gane J. in Fuchs and Downing v. Port Elizabeth Municipality,\textsuperscript{82} admitting the evidence without proof of even the identity of the declarant, seems, however, to be an unwarranted extension.

The requirements as to competent knowledge of the declarant do not mean that the declaration is admissible in so far as it refers to facts within his personal knowledge.\textsuperscript{83} In so far as anything other than reputation is asserted, the declaration is 	extit{pro tanto} inadmissible. Hear-say evidence of particular facts is therefore excluded even though inferences as to rights may be drawn from those facts. The physical features of land, e.g. the location or condition of houses or streets, the existence of a road or acts of user\textsuperscript{84} have been held to be particular facts. The \textsuperscript{74} e.g. Transkeian Territories General Council v. Magistrate, 1923 E.D.L. 256.

\textsuperscript{75} Rogers v. Wood [1851] 2 B. & Ad. 295, 109 E.R. 1124. Inference on this requirement was held to be unnecessary in Du Tint v. Lydenburg Municipality, 1907 T.S. 527 at 528, but the case cannot be regarded as authoritative since the requirement that the declarant be dead also seems to have been disregarded.

\textsuperscript{78} Merthyr v. Davies [1832] 11 H.L. 103, 147 E.R. 434.

\textsuperscript{79} The last of its name in this context is the same as that applying to pedigree declarations (Moore v. Davies [1832] 11 H.L. 103, 147 E.R. 434; 440) and is discussed above, p. 698, n. 16.

\textsuperscript{80} [1835] 2 B. & Ad. 295, 112 E.R. 428.

\textsuperscript{81} 1944 E.D.L. 254 at 260. But see n. 67, supra.

\textsuperscript{83} This requirement was apparently overlooked in Opperman v. Owen, 1933 E.D.L. 34 at 36.

evidence must relate only to the legal quality or attributes of such facts or acts, to their character as being the subject of or the exercise of public rights. A particularly striking example is Mansor v. Donau where it was necessary to establish that from time immemorial the inhabitants of a district had had a customary right to dry their fishing-nets on a bank between the sea and a castle. Depositions taken during the seventeenth century, from which it appeared that the bank had at that period been covered by the tides, were held to be inadmissible as relating only to particular facts, for they did not go directly to establish or disprove the custom but merely to negative it by way of inference.

No confirmation of a declaration as to public or general rights by proof of user is necessary for the admissibility of the declaration. Evidence of user would of course strengthen the reputation evidence—which has been said to be of little weight—but may not be shown by the declaration itself, as this would amount to the assertion of particular facts.

3.6. Post-testamentary declarations by testators as to their wills

In Sudgen v. Lord St. Leonard, the Court of Appeal created a new exception to the rule against hearsay, on the grounds that the declarant had peculiar means of knowledge and is usually without motive to lie. This exception permits the reception of evidence of a testator's post-testamentary declarations as to the contents of his will, in proof of its contents. Though Sudgen's case was doubted obiter in the House of Lords, it has continued to be followed in the Court of Appeal, but its principle has not been extended in England to admit a testator's declarations where the issue is not the contents of a lost will, but whether the testator in fact made a will at all or in particular terms.

In South Africa, no case so far appears to have turned on proof of the contents of a lost will by the testator's assertions, but the execution of a will has been in issue in several cases. In Brink v. Brink, such declarations by the testator were admitted to prove due execution, but in Dukada v. Dukada's Estate a statement by the deceased that she had not made a will was said to be inadmissible as hearsay. Dukada's case cannot be reconciled with Kunz v. Swart, where the Appellate Division admitted without question a large volume of evidence as to the deceased's assertions in order to determine whether or not he had executed the will which was alleged to be a forgery. Accordingly, Dukada was not followed by the Natal Supreme Court in R. v. Foreman (1908) where the testator's 28 (1905) 2 Ch. 532 (C.A.).

---

30 See preceding note.
31 (1876) L.R. 1 P.D. 154 (C.A.).
32 cf. the refusal of the House of Lords to exculpate another exception in Myers v. D.P.P. (1865) A.C. 1001 (H.L.), (1865) 1 All E.R. 381.
34 In re Estate of MacGregor (1945) 2 All E.R. 101 (C.A.).
35 e.g. In re the Goods of Ripley (1883) 1 Sw. & Tr. 66, 1 All E.R. 652; Adkinson v. Morris (1897) P. 40 (C.A.).
37 1917 A.D. 618 esp. at 627 ff.
38 1932 (1) S.A. 423 (S.R.). In re the Goods of Non worthy (1865) 4 Sw. & Tr. 43, 164 E.R. 143, is distinguishable, for there the reception of evidence of the testators' declarations to identify, which of two documents was his will was relevant to the issue of her testamentary intention, and not inference from the assertion of her intention to the facts on which the state of mind was based had to be made. Cf. Ex parte Ford and Langham, 1933 (4) S.A. 338 (N).
declarations were received in order to establish which of two instruments he had in fact executed as a will. In turn, Foreman's case was apparently overlooked in Ex parte Currie and May N.N.O., where Lewis J. indicated obiter that he would not have admitted hearsay declarations by the testatrix as to whether she had destroyed her will.

Both Kunz v. Swart and R. v. Foreman may be distinguishable from the Cape case of R. v. Basson, though Ogilvie Thompson J. there approved Foreman and purported to follow it. Basson's case was concerned with whether the testatrix had executed a particular will or whether it had been forged by the accused; the testatrix's statements after the date of the disputed will, referring to an earlier will proved to be genuine, were received as evidencing her lack of intention to revoke the earlier will, and this decision may therefore be regarded as an illustration of the admissibility of declarations of mental condition received to prove past state of mind. But it is not clear whether the Court considered her state of mind to be independently relevant, and if not, and that state—her belief that she had not revoked—was employed merely as supporting an inference as to the facts on which that belief was based, then Basson's case is indistinguishable in principle from those where this exception to the hearsay rule is properly brought into play.

4. Public Documents

At common law, public documents are evidence of the truth of their contents provided they were made in pursuance of a public duty by a public official after inquiry into the matters stated. It need not be shown that the maker of the document is dead or otherwise unavailable, the evidence being received on grounds of convenience rather than necessity. Nor is its admissibility affected by the possibility that the official had an interest in the matters recorded—a consideration which affects only the weight to be given to the evidence.

The subjective operation of the duty on the mind of the maker of the document is said to afford the circumstantial guarantee of its trustworthiness. It follows that foreign documents are equally admissible, provided the existence in the foreign country of a public duty to make the document is shown, and it is proved that the document is in the form required by the law of that country and is properly authenticated.

Public documents are those made under common-law or statutory authority, express or implied, original or delegated. Thus a magistrate's reasons for judgment and official births and marriage registers have been held to be public documents, but South African baptismal registers do not qualify, however

---

4.1 1966 (2) S.A. 184 (S.R.).
4.2 1965 (1) S.A. 697 (C) at 701.
1 See above, pp. 699-700.
3 The High Society v. Bishop of Derry (1846) 12 Ch. and Fin. 641 at 658-9; 8 E.R. 1561 at 1573.
5 R. v. De Villiers, 1944 A.D. 493 at 500; Krabbe v. Nank, 1952 (1) S.A. 331 (A.D.) at 340;
6 Mercer v. Deme (1905) 2 Ch. 335 (C.A.) at 354.
9 These are in addition now governed by statute; sec. 42(3) of the Births, Marriages and Deaths Registration Act, No. 81 of 1963, and see below, p. 681, 1.12.
reliably maintained, since in this country there is no legal duty to make them. Even if made under authority of law, however, a document is not a public document for the purposes of this exception to the hearsay rule, unless it is compiled for the purpose of affording members of the public a right of access to it. Because of this requirement, a police occurrences book tendered to prove the fact of an arrest and the nature of the report made by the arresting officer was rejected in Lenders v. R. and in Northern Mounted Rifles v. O’Callaghan. A regimental musketry register was excluded as having been kept purely for the domestic regulation of the corps. For the same reason a passport, and post office records of the delivery of telegrams have been held not to be public documents. It follows that confidential official documents could never be admitted under this heading, irrespective of any claim of State privilege. Official documents made for a temporary purpose and not intended to be incorporated in a permanent public register are likewise excluded. Finally, public documents must be produced from proper custody, i.e., from the custody of the official properly having control of them. Court records must be put in by the clerk of a magistrate’s court or the registrar of a superior court, as the case may be, not, for example, by a court interpreter. On this principle, ancient maps in the possession of public libraries were held not to be public documents in Attorney-General v. Horner (No. 2).

The officer who made the documents must be shown to have had a public duty both to inquire into the matters stated and to record them. If his duty was merely to record information given to him with no obligation to satisfy himself personally as to the facts, the document is inadmissible. For this reason, it was held in R. v. De Villiers that a motor-car registration certificate could not be received to prove the engine and chassis numbers of the vehicle in question, since the licensing officials were under no duty to ascertain that they were correctly informed when registering the number. The extent of the duty of inquiry required is unclear. In De Villiers the Appellate Division purported to follow Doe d. France v. Andrews, but in that case the maker of the document

---

2 Frederick v. Mayoral, [1911] 1 K.B. 412. A foreign examination register may well be admissible if the law of that country requires it.
4 Sturle v. Freccia (1880) 5 App. Cas. 623 (H.L.) at 636-7; Beningfield v. Darb'an Corporation (1897) 16 N.R. 31; Armon v. Hutchinson (1952) A.C. 84 (P.C.) at 92. This requirement was apparently overlooked in R. v. Fright, 1938 1 K.B. 231, but the records there received were no doubt admissible as declarations made in the course of duty (see above, p. 490).
5 1943 3 W.L.R. 34.
10 *All E.R. 393.
15 [1913] Ch. 140 (C.A.) at 135-6.
17 1944 A.D. 493 at 501. had no personal knowledge of the matters recorded. Absence of such personal knowledge was held to be a fatal bar to admissibility in Doe v. Warren.26 On the other hand, it appears from *In re Stollery*28 that in England it is sufficient if the officer may satisfy himself by making inquiries from others, and the likelihood of his error, presumably based on the probabilities as to how far in the circumstances the inquiries are likely to have been pursued, may mean that different parts of the document may differ in weight. On the face of it, De Villiers is more in accord with Bray than with Andrews and Stollery, but the Appellate Division decision may have turned on the peculiar consideration that the licensing officers in fact never did make inquiry, and in the absence of such showing the Court might well have been prepared to assume, with Andrews and Stollery, that reasonably sufficient investigations had been undertaken.

In any event, the document is only admissible to evidence those matters which were a duty to ascertain and record. In so far as it contains particulars not covered by the duty, it must be rejected.29

It is not apparently a requirement that the maker of the document have been a public official, as long as he was carrying out a public duty imposed by law.30

Where an original document satisfies the requirements of the public documents exception to the hearsay rule, sections 261 and 263(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1955, render certified copies or extracts admissible, and section 262 provides that the original of an official document may only be produced in court upon the order of the attorney-general. The provision for such copies or extracts sets the permissible minimum, so that oral evidence of the original register's contents is inadmissible.31

5. Statutory Exceptions to the Hearsay Rule

Many statutes provide that documents prepared in connection with their administration shall be admissible as prima facie proof of their contents. In some of these, the documents might in any event be admissible at common law as public documents.32 e.g. birth, marriage and death certificates received under section 42(3) of the Births, Marriages and Death Registration Act, 1963.33
In other cases, the general provisions of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1955, would probably cover the circumstances specially provided for under particular Acts, so that, for example, section 11(2) of the Maintenance Act, 1963,34 adds little to the field already included under section 249 of the Criminal Procedure Act. A simple and comprehensive code regulating the whole field of 26 (1829) 8 D. & C. 313, 108 E.R. 1245.

---

27 (1926) Ch. 284 (C.A.).
28 Evans v. Taylor (1858) 4 Ad. & E. 617, 112 E.R. 602; In re Stollery [1926] Ch. 284 (C.A.)
29 (1926) 2 Ad. & E. 617, 112 E.R. 602; In re Stollery [1926] Ch. 284 (C.A.)
30 (1926) 2 Ad. & E. 617, 112 E.R. 602; In re Stollery [1926] Ch. 284 (C.A.)
31 (1926) 2 Ad. & E. 617, 112 E.R. 602; In re Stollery [1926] Ch. 284 (C.A.)
32 Richardson v. Meilish (1834) 1 Bing. 229, 120 E.R. 294; C. v. Weltly (1838)
35 Lords Blackburn seemed to regard it as essential 36 that the document have been made by a public officer, but as Wigram points out (Wigram on 37 Evidence, 3rd ed. [1909], § 162(a), this need not mean more than that a private individual may 38 have a specific and limited public duty to discharge although he has otherwise no official status.
39 e.g. the duty imposed on medical practitioners to give death certificates, by see 24 and 34 of 40 the Births, Marriages and Deaths Registration Act, No. 81 of 1953.
42 See above.
43 Act No. 81 of 1953.
44 Act No. 23 of 1963, as amended by sect. 2 of the Maintenance Amendment Act, No. 19 of 1967.
documents would bring desirable uniformity, and would obviate the necessity for frequent repetition of the statutory formula that the contents of a document may be tendered as prima facie proof.

The effect of this formula was discussed by the Appellate Division in R v. Cie, where Steyn C.J. held, overruling R v. Offi, that the particulars stated in the document do not become valueless as soon as challenged. Rather, the judicial officer must rely on the document unless he is convinced to the contrary, and whether he is so convinced depends on the nature of the evidence refuting or throwing doubt on the document. Relevant factors, though not the only ones, would be whether the maker of the document had personal knowledge of the matters recorded or whether he acted on inquiry, and from whom he inquired. If the reliability of the document is left in doubt, a prima facie proof created by statute remains undisturbed. An example of a case where the court was persuaded not to rely upon the document is Leenen v. R., where a marriage certificate was tendered in proof of the husband's place of birth. The certificate was contradicted in this respect by the evidence of his parents, which as original evidence was obviously stronger than the double hearsay of the certificate, a mere record of the husband's having recounted to the registering officer what he himself had been told as to his place of birth.

5.1. Bankers' books

The admissibility as evidence of the matters recorded in the books of a bank, where the bank is not a party to the proceedings, is provided for by section 264 of the Criminal Procedure Act. Such books need to be identified only by an affidavit by an officer of the bank. Section 265(1) allows copies of extracts of the entries in the books to be received, again verified only by affidavit. Ten days' notice must be given to his opponent by the party intending to put in such copies or extracts, to enable the opponent to inspect the original entries. The court must be satisfied that the verifying affidavit was made by an officer of the bank, who must state that he personally examined the books, and that the ten days' notice required by section 265(1) was in fact given. The absence of such introductory evidence not only bars the admissibility of the bank documents, but should the document have been received without it, will result in the conviction being set aside on appeal.

---

32 1950 (1) S.A. 435 (A.D.) at 442-3.
33 1950 (4) S.A. 199 (C) at 201-2.
34 1950 (2) P.M., H. 222 (T).
35 Sec. 263 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1855.
36 Sec. 265(1).
37 Sec. 265(2).
38 Sec. 266.
40 Van der Westhuizen N.O. v. Xekyeni, 1968 (3) S.A. 174 (T).
5.2. Documents of companies, organizations and associations

Various provisions of the Companies Act render documents directed to be prepared by that Act prima facie evidence of their contents—the register of members, the minutes of company meetings, and so forth. In applying these provisions it is merely a question of the wording of each whether the document is evidence against all persons or only against a limited class of persons.

The strict construction which the courts have given to the bankers’ books provisions of the Criminal Procedure Act has unfortunately not been equally insisted on as regards the most far-reaching of the statutory exceptions to the hearsay rule, those contained in sections 263bis and 263ter of the Criminal Procedure Act, section 12(4) of the ‘suppression of Communism Act, and section 2(3) of the Terrorism Act. The scope of all these sections is markedly similar, and, broadly, they provide that documents purporting to be made or issued by an organization or association (or copies or extracts thereof) are admissible as evidence of the truth of their contents. From an evidentiary view the provisions may be classified into three types:

(a) Where a basis for the reception of the document must first be laid by introductory evidence, e.g. that the document was found in certain premises or in the custody of certain persons, or is certified by the Secretary for Foreign Affairs as being of foreign origin. In these cases, unless the statutory preconditions are first established, the document remains mere inadmissible hearsay.

(b) Where the document is only admissible as proof of its contents if certain types of allegation are made in the charge, e.g. where the accused is charged with being an office bearer or active supporter of a particular organization. Whether such allegations are made is a question of interpretation of the indictment, but in S. v. Naidoo Harcourt J., dealing with the meaning of the phrase ‘active supporter’, refused to interpret such provisions narrowly, and in manifest contrast to the cases on the bankers’ books provisions, rejected the submission that being in derogation of the common law, the statute should be restrictively interpreted.

(c) Where the document is admissible on its mere production, provided it purports to emanate from a particular organization. All that is necessary here is that the document be exhibited to the court for its inspection, to determine whether or not it does, on its face, identify itself as admissible. An example is S. v. Matsepe, where the fact that a document was headed ‘Constitution of

---

44 Sec. 11.
45 Further examples are secs. 97, 152 and 188.
46 Sec. 12(4). 47 X. v. Raisin and Fother, 1947 (2) S.A. 389 (W).
48 Act No. 83 of 1950.
49 Act No. 44 of 1950.
50 Sec. 12(4)(a) and (b) of Act No. 44 of 1950; sec. 263ter of the Code; sec. 2(3)(a) and (b) of Act No. 83 of 1961.
51 Sec. 263ter of Act No. 46 of 1955.
53 Sec. 2(3) of the Terrorism Act.
54 1966 (4) S.A. 519 (N).
55 The learned Judge appears, to have taken the same approach as that discussed, in a different context, in (1967) 84 S.A.L.J. 362.
56 Sec. 12(4)(c) of Act No. 49 of 1950; sec. 263bis (1)(a) and (d) of the Code; sec. 2(3)(c) of Act No. 83 of 1967.
57 1962 (4) S.A. 708 (A.D.) at 712. See, also, the judgment of the lower court, reported in 1962 (1) P.H., H. 40 (T).
5.2. Documents of companies, organizations and associations

Various provisions of the Companies Act render documents directed to be prepared by that Act prima facie evidence of their contents—the register of members, the minutes of company meetings, and so forth. In applying these provisions it is merely a question of the wording of each whether the document is evidence against all persons or only against a limited class of persons.

The strict construction which the courts have given to the bankers' books provisions of the Criminal Procedure Act has unfortunately not been equally insisted on as regards the most far-reaching of the statutory exceptions to the hearsay rule, those contained in sections 263(d) and 263(e) of the Criminal Procedure Act, section 2(1) of the Suppression of Communism Act, and section 2(1) of the Terrorism Act. The scope of all these sections is markedly similar, and, broadly, they provide that documents purporting to be made or issued by an organization or association (or copies or extracts thereof) are admissible as evidence of the truth of their contents. From an evidentiary view the provisions may be classified into three types:

(a) Where a basis for the reception of the document must first be laid by introductory evidence, e.g. that the document was found in certain premises or in the custody of certain persons or is certified by the Secretary for Foreign Affairs as being of foreign origin. In these cases, unless the statutory preconditions are first established, the document remains mere inadmissible hearsay.

(b) Where the document is only admissible as proof of its contents if certain types of allegation are made in the charge, e.g. where the accused is charged with being an office bearer or active supporter of a particular organization. Whether such allegations are made is a question of interpretation of the indictment, but in S. v. Naidoo, Harecourt J., dealing with the meaning of the phrase 'active supporter', refused to interpret such provisions narrowly, and in manifest contrast to the cases on the bankers' books provisions, rejected the submission that being in derogation of the common law, the statute should be restrictively interpreted.

(c) Where the document is admissible on its mere production, provided it purports to emanate from a particular organization. All that is necessary here is that the document be exhibited to the court for its inspection, to determine whether or not it does, on its face, identify itself as admissible. An example is S. v. Matshiela, where the fact that a document was headed 'Constitution of

---

Act No. 46 of 1926.
Sec. 33.
Further examples are secs. 97, 152 and 158.
R. v. Rolleston and Roth, 1947 (3) S.A. 891 (W).
Act No. 53 of 1950.
Sec. 12(4)(a) and (b) of Act No. 44 of 1953; sec. 2(3)(a) and (b) of Act No. 33 of 1957.
Sec. 2(2) of the Terrorism Act.
1964 (1) B.L.R. 56.
The learned Judge, however, in a different context, in (1967) 84 S.A.L.J. 262, Sec. 12(4)(c) of Act No. 44 of 1953; sec. 2(2)(a) of the Code; sec. 2(3)(a) of Act No. 33 of 1957.
Sec. 7 of the Terrorism Act.
1966 (4) B.L.R. 52.
Sec. 7 of the Terrorism Act.
S. v. Naidoo, 1965 (4) S.A. 319 (N) at 322.
the A.N.C.' was held by the Appellate Division to be proof without more of the aims of the organization concerned.
Some of the provisions here discussed make a document evidence against the accused where it bears a name 'corresponding' to that of the accused. These provisions should, it is submitted, be regarded as an example of category (c) above, where a condition precedent for admissibility must be satisfied, but to date the courts have inexplicably regarded them as falling into the third category so that the document is admissible on mere production. A 'corresponding' name has been held not to require identity but mere similarity, though 'corresponding' does not seem to suggest a loose approximation and in the Afrikaans version 'ooreenstem' is even less equivocal. Nevertheless, in S. v. Sethladi,' 'Scholli' was held to correspond to the accused's name, and in S. v. Motshoeng, 'Motshoeng'.
It should be noted that documents admitted under these sections may not be used in proof of anything more than the purpose authorized. For example, under section 263(b)(1)(c) of the Code, where a document appears to reflect the proceedings of a meeting, it may be used to prove the holding of such proceedings at the alleged meeting, but not that the events reported to that meeting took place.

Evidence in Prior Proceedings
The record of evidence given at earlier proceedings may be used, like any other previous statement proved to have been made by a witness, for the purposes of examining him to credibility. Moreover, that record cannot as a general rule be tendered to prove the facts then deposed to, and it is hearsay evidence if tendered for this purpose. This applies even if the earlier statement was on oath, and irrespective of the nature of the prior proceedings—trials before domestic or foreign courts, inquests, preparatory examinations, insolvency inquiries or meetings of creditors. Accordingly, unless the record of evidence falls within one of the exceptions to the hearsay rule, it is inadmissible, and neither the reading out of the record nor the consent of the defence cures the defec-

If the person who was a witness at the former proceedings is a party to the present proceedings, his previous testimony is admissible against him as an

---

10 Sec. 253(b)(c) and (d) of the Code; see 2(3)(c) of Act No. 83 of 1967.
11 1962 (1) P.L.R. 35 (T).
12 1963 (4) S.A. 414 (1).
13 See above, pp. 98 and 99.
14 E.g. Ar. v. Kriel, 1918 E.D.L. 271. But see below.
17 P. v. Bornburger (1871) 8 Q.B.D. 153; S. v. Nkoze, 1963 (3) S.A. 631 (A.D.). It was held in S. v. Serodii, 1968 (4) S.A. 420 (A.D.) at 425, that if the evidence given at the preparatory examination is to be the subject of a formal admission, it is the facts themselves and not the record embodying the evidence of those facts which should be admitted. This decision has now been overruled by sec. 54(1) of the General Law Amendment Act, No. 101 of 1961. If the accused pleads guilty the preparatory examination record can be referred to for the purposes of sentence, on mere production (S. v. Jafara, 1969 (2) S.A. 466 (A.D.)).
21 R. v. Sichantez (1881) 1 E.D.C. 266; E. v. Xotq (1891) 12 N.L.R. 348; R. v. Xemizes, admission, as an exception to the hearsay rule. The evidence of other witnesses at that proceeding must, to be admissible, be shown to fall into the category of vicarious admissions.

Where the previous evidence was given at an inquiry under the Insolvency Act, 1936, or the Companies Act, 1926, it is expressly provided in these statutes that the evidence so given will be admissible against the witness who gave it. He need not be given notice that it is to be so used. It was necessary to legislate particularly for these cases, since at common law to be used as an admission the statement would have to be shown to have been freely and voluntarily made, which might not have been satisfied where it was made under statutory compulsion and with no right to claim the privilege against self-incrimination. For this reason the inquiry provisions are strictly construed, and any irregularity in the conduct of the meeting will vitiate the admissibility of the evidence taken. It should be noted that although the voluntariness aspect of the depositions is provided for, the depositions are in all other respects subject to the ordinary rules of evidence such as the principle of relevance, opinion evidence, and of vicarious admissions. The evidence given by the insolvent would therefore be admissible not only against him but also against those in privity with him who are bound by his acts, such as a creditor who is alleged to have received an undue preference from the insolvent. Where the evidence at the inquiry was given by officers of a company, since it has been held that they do not in so doing make admissions binding on the company, their evidence cannot be received in an action against the company.

---

74 R. v. Caron, 1926 A.D. 418.
75,Nank v. Pilby's Trustees, 1922 A.D. 471 at 476; Marconi's Estate v. Werners, 1922 E.D.L. 286; R. v. Roisin and Fother, 1947 (2) S.A. 881 (W) at 884-5; R. v. Dhakura, 1943 (3) S.A. 1202 (B). On vicarious admissions, see below, p. 406. vs-
76 Act No. 24 of 1926, sec. 45.
77 Act No. 46 of 1926, secs. 155(c), 156(6), 180(c) (4).
80 R. v. Caron, 1926 A.D. 419; Sullivan v. R. (1923) 4 N.L.R. 221; Langham N.O. v. Milne, 1951 (1) S.A. 811 (N). It has since been settled that statutory compulsion would not prevent an admission being voluntary; R. v. Molin, 1956 (6) S.A. 824 (A.D.); the position regarding compulsion is now unclear. See below, p. 406. vs-
83 R. v. Kitson and Armstrong, 1940 (3) S.A. 307 (W).
To the foregoing principles there are several exceptions. The remittal of a case to the same magistrate, who presided at a preparatory examination, is one situation where the record at the preparatory examination may constitute evidence at the trial. There is a common-law exception which allows the evidence given at previous proceedings to be received provided it is established, in the formulation given in Lennell and Co., Ltd. v. John Swift, Ltd. (a) the proceedings are between the same parties or their privies, (b) the issues involved are the same or substantially the same in both proceedings, (c) the party against whom the depositions are tendered had a full opportunity of cross-examining the deponent while the deposition was being taken, and (d) the deponent is dead, insane, kept out of the way by the opposite party, or too ill to travel. An accomplice of the accused can apparently not be regarded as being in privy with him, but in any event the evidence at the accomplice's trial would not normally have been subject to cross-examination by the criminal unless he was a co-accused at that trial.

These four common-law requirements are restated in section 243(2) of the Criminal Procedure Act, whereby, on corresponding conditions, the evidence given at a former criminal trial is admissible at a later trial against the same accused on the same charge. The admissibility of depositions taken at the preparatory examination is provided for by section 243(1) and (3). Both subsections require sworn evidence that the deposition tendered is an accurate transcript of the evidence, and that the accused personally or through his representative had a full opportunity of cross-examining the witness. In addition, of course, the deposition must satisfy the ordinary rules of evidence as to relevancy, opinion evidence, and so forth. Where these conditions are satisfied, and the deponent is proved to be dead,†1 inexcusable of attending,†2 too ill to attend,†3 or kept away from the trial by the accused, under subsection (1) the court has no discretion in regard to the admissibility of the deposition, which must be received. If the witness cannot be found after diligent search or cannot be compelled to attend the trial, subsection (2) gives the court discretion, even though the conditions mentioned are fulfilled, to reject or accept the deposition. Apart from the pre-conditions, there is no overlap between subsection (1) and subsection (3).†4

---

1. Sec. 189 of the Criminal Procedure Act. 2. Lennell and Co., Ltd. v. John Swift, Ltd. 1920 W.L.D. 112 at 113. 3. *R. v. Southwell (1894) 4 C.D. 275; Van Wyke v. R. (1925) 46 N.L.R. 273; R. v. Fortune, 1940 C.P.D. 287; R. v. Kowal, 1942 O.P.D. 273; R. v. Benadi, 1946 G.W.L. 5; R. v. Need, 1971 S.A. 42 (N). 4. For the common-law position, see R. v. Odonnell (1875) 5 Exch. 172. 5. *R. v. Pilling (1931) 1 Buch. App. Ca. 29; R. v. Morgan, 1959 C.P.D. 453. Cf. R. v. Mall, 1960 (2) S.A. 458 (N). 6. In Lennell and Co., Ltd. v. John Swift, Ltd. 1920 W.L.D. 112, the opposite party was held to have had such an opportunity where he could have made a special application to do so though this would admittedly have been unusual. It is arguable that a similar test should be applied in criminal cases, but the courts have so far shown no inclination to do so. In R. v. McDonald, 1927 A.D. 130, Jones C.J. held that although the accused had been unsuccessful, because of short notice of the preparatory examination, in obtaining a representative, he had still had sufficient opportunity to cross-examine. Where the accused's failure to cross-examine was due to the fact that his representative did not appear at the preparatory examination after informing the presiding magistrate that he reserved his cross-examination, the representative's knowledge that he could have appeared and cross-examined was held to be sufficient opportunity. In *R. v. Telford, 1955 (2) S.A. 572 (N). See also, R. v. Telford, 1930 W.L.D. 194. 7. It is possible that decisions such as McDonnell and Maynard can no longer be followed at their face value, in view of more recent judgments concerning the right to counsel. See, e.g., *E. v. Heyns, 1926 (4) S.A. 596 (A.D.), and S. v. Wieland, 1956 (6) S.A. 59 (C). Discuss by T. J. B. Dixon in *1967 S.A. L.J. 1. In the view of Charles T. McCormick, Handbook of the Law of Evidence (1954), pp. 482-83, "[i]t hardly seems practicable to apply the same rigorous standard to this collateral question of admissibility, as would be applied in determining whether the original trial without counsel was a denial of due process". McCormick would, however, insist that the accused have been afforded adequate opportunity to secure counsel. 8. *R. v. Mackenzie (1927) 49 N.L.R. 382; R. v. Waid, 1928 C.P.D. 14; R. v. Klister and Morgan, 1949 (3) S.A. 607 (W).

Under subsection (1) of section 243, as the Appellate Division has warned, the admission of depositions even of vital witnesses may prejudice the accused and the court has no discretion to prevent this. It has, therefore, a duty to mitigate the possibility of prejudice by warning the trier of fact as to the weight of the deposition of the absent witness, and they should be helped to realize the danger of convicting merely on the record. The danger increases in direct proportion to the significance in the case of the witness's evidence and its credibility, and the warning should be particularly stressed in those situations, such as those involving the evidence of accomplices or of the complainant in a sexual charge, where a cautionary rule of corroboration applies.†5

Where the court is given a discretion under section 243(3), in respect of the reception of the deposition, an appeal court cannot interfere with its exercise.†6 The factors which should influence the judicial exercise of that discretion were summarized by De Waal J. in R. v. Stoltz†7 in a passage frequently approved in subsequent judgments:

“This discretion I know should be exercised guardedly. The court should look at the nature of the evidence sought to be put in. If, for instance, it conflicts with other evidence in the case, if from cross-examination the evidence as recorded would seem to leave a doubt, and generally where from the nature of the evidence much would depend on the credibility of the witness, so that a jury should have an opportunity of judging for themselves from the appearance and demeanour of a witness, the court should be very slow in admitting the evidence under the section.”

A further factor which weighed with the Court in Stoltz's case (which was a charge of theft) in admitting the deposition was the fact that its contents— to the extent that the complainant's shop had been broken into and robbed—could hardly be denied and at the same time did not in itself implicate the accused.

The fact that without the deposition the State case must fail is not a relevant factor in the exercise of the court's discretion.†8 It seems that if the deponent was in fact cross-examined at the preparatory examination this may be taken into

†1 Maton v. R., 1923 A.D. 435.
†6 R. v. Eversheds, 1948 (1) S.A. 135 (A.D.) at 142.
†8 R. v. Andries, 1920 A.D. 250 at 293. It is submitted that the view expressed by Fiebiger J. in R. v. Komu, 1923 Q.P.D. 16, that it is also in the entire discretion of the presiding officer to whether or not it has been sufficiently shown that the deponent cannot be found, cannot be supported on the wording of the section.
†9 1923 W.L.D. 38.
†10 e.g. R. v. Komu, 1927 T.P.D. 72; R. v. Mlam, 1948 (2) S.A. 317 (T); R. v. Steffels, 1948 (2) S.A. 809 (C); R. v. Blomke (T), 1947 (3) S.A. 519 (D).
†11 R. v. Steffels, 1948 (2) S.A. 809 (C). account, as may the extent to which inadmissible matter is contained in the deposition.

Section 243 is clearly conceived in the interests of the prosecution, to permit it to put in at that trial the deposition of a State witness at the preparatory examination. Whether the wording would permit the prosecution to put in the deposition of a defence witness has been doubted, unless of course it is the deposition of the accused which is received as an admission. In S. v. Andrews, the defence was permitted at the trial to put in a deposition from a State witness, a course apparently already permitted, though the report is unclear on the point, by the Appellate Division in Mas/a v. S. The desirability of giving the defence the same facilities as the prosecution is clear from the point of view of policy, but whether the strict wording of the section is susceptible of such an application seems doubtful, and the possibility of this being permitted under the common-law exception as set out in Lenswell's case above is a likelier one.

7. Admissions

Unlike formal admissions made at the trial, which constitute, where competent, a waiver of proof by one or other party, informal admissions made out of court, which cover statements and conduct by a party inconsistent with his allegations, are tendered by the opponent as evidence against that party. Like other such evidence an admission is not conclusive proof; it does not shift the legal burden of proof to the party against whom it is tendered, and in itself may not be believed by the court.

Statements by a party which are admissions are received as an exception to the hearsay rule, the rationale being that no one would be likely to speak against himself unless the statement was true (a formulation apparently influenced by the declarations against interest exception to the rule against hearsay). Certainly he cannot object to evidence of his own statements on the ground of untrustiness as not having been made on oath or subject to cross-examination. The guarantee of reliability is not present where the statements are self-serving, and the accused cannot therefore lead evidence of his previous statements which are favourable.

---

6. 1964 (3) S.A. 803 (C). This was not permitted, however, in R. v. Coz, 1959 (1) S.A. 292 (C).
8. 1960 (3) S.A. 113 (N). See, contra, the recent judgment of S. v. Rell, 1964 (3) S.A. 237 (O).
11. The problem is discussed in more detail in (1965) 82 S.A.L.J. 137, and by Hulstein, above, pp. 503-4.
12. See E. v. Foshe, 1958 (3) S.A. 767 (T) at 774, and above, chap. 17. account, as may the extent to which inadmissible matter is contained in the deposition. Section 243 is clearly conceived in the interests of the prosecution, to permit it to put in at that trial the deposition of a State witness at the preparatory examination. Whether the wording would permit the prosecution to put in the deposition of a defence witness has been doubted, unless of course it is the deposition of the accused which is received as an admission. In S. v. Andrews, the defence was permitted at the trial to put in a deposition from a State witness, a course apparently already permitted, though the report is unclear on the point, by the Appellate Division in Musa v. S. The defence was held entitled to invoke the section to put in the deposition of a State witness in R. v. Mathaba. The desirability of giving the defence the same facilities as the prosecution is clear from the point of view of policy, but whether the strict wording of the section is susceptible of such an application seems doubtful, and the possibility of this being permitted under the common-law exception as set out in Lensvelt's case above is a likelier one.

7. Admissions

Unlike formal admissions made at the trial, which constitute, where competent, a waiver of proof by one or other party, informal admissions made out of court, which cover statements and conduct by a party inconsistent with his allegations, are tendered by the opponent as evidence against that party. Like other such evidence an admission is not conclusive proof; it does not shift the legal burden of proof to the party against whom it is tendered, and in itself may not be believed by the court.

Statements by a party which are admissions are received as an exception to the hearsay rule, the rationale being that no one would be likely to speak against himself unless the statement was true (a formulation apparently influenced by the declarations against interest exception to the rule against hearsay). Certainly he cannot object to evidence of his own statements on the ground of unreliability as not having been made on oath or subject to cross-examination. The guarantee of reliability is not present where the statements are self-serving, and the accused cannot therefore lead evidence of his previous statements which are favourable.

---

1 In R. v. Zefiriou, 1933 N.P.D. 135 at 137.
5 1964 (4) S.A. 303 (C). This was not permitted in respect of R. v. Cale, 1960 (1) S.A. 223 (C).
7 1961 (3) S.A. 113 (N). See, contra, the erudite judgment in S. v. Kohl, 1964 (1) S.A. 237 (C).
10 The problem is discussed in more detail in (1963) 82 S.A.L.J. 127, and by Hileman, above, pp. 303-6.
11 See R. v. Fosch, 1958 (3) S.A. 767 (T) at 768 and above, chap. 17.
12 Of course a party may himself prove his own admission, as, e.g., in R. v. Passmore, 1937 A.P. 51. to his cause. If, however, the statement contains both self-serving and adverse matter, the prosecution may not extract and prove only the latter. The accused is entitled to insist that the whole statement be proved, and the trier of fact must take into consideration both the incriminatory and the exculpatory portions. The statement need not in consequence necessarily be accepted or rejected as a whole, for it is competent to find the incriminatory portions more convincing.

Again because there must be the guarantee of trustworthiness, an equivocal statement or one which is not unambiguously unfavourable is not admissible as an admission, though this does not mean that a statement intended as exculpatory cannot rank as unfavourable if the context so characterizes it. What is required is that it be an unequivocal acknowledgment of a guilty fact. For the same reasons of trustworthiness an admission must be narrowly construed.

It is not necessary that the accused have intended to communicate his adverse statement to anyone else. What he is overheard saying to himself, or his entries in his private diary, are no less admissions.

A further result of the party's being disabled from objecting to the unreliability of his own admissions as proof of the facts it asserts, is that many of the exclusionary rules which might otherwise apply are overridden where an admission is tendered. Thus an admission is not excluded because it is obviously based on hearsay, so that a man may be taken to have admitted his own age or that of others. The rule against evidence of the accused's bad character or previous convictions would not exclude proof of his admission of such facts, and an admission of the accuracy of a copy would avoid the rule requiring primary proof of documents. Where the accused has no means of knowledge of the facts his admission is still received, though it is of very little weight. But the accused's admissions on a charge of bigamy, as to the validity of a marriage contracted under foreign law, have on occasion been rejected, as only an expert could form an opinion, and in Van Lutterveld v. Engels an admission of 14 R. v. Parton, 1941 G.W.I. 39. A striking example is R. v. Bosse (1861) 2 P.H., H. 252 (S.R.), where in answer to a police inquiry as to whether one K was implicated in the crime, the accused immediately replied, 'No, he was not there'—a damming admission of his own presence and knowledge.

---

23 1959 (2) S.A. 689 (A.D.). But contra, Giv v. S., 1967 (1) P.H., H. 135 (A.D.). As to admissions overriding the rule against opinion evidence, Edmond M. Morgan in (1946) 30 Harvard L.R. 538 points out that to reject these is inconsistent with the long line of undisputed authorities admitting evidence of a party's conduct tending to show that he has no confidence in the strength of his case.
paternity was rejected as it was not a matter on which the man could have had any personal certainty.

7.1. Proving the admissibility of an admission

Admissions made by the accused are only admissible in a criminal trial if shown to have been voluntarily made, and not induced by the prospect of advantage or disadvantage held out by a person in authority.

The onus of proving that these conditions were satisfied rests upon the prosecution, which must discharge the onus by proof beyond a reasonable doubt. The circumstances are to be adjudicated upon at a ‘trial within a trial’ before the judge sitting alone, in the absence of the assessors. The defence is entitled to lead evidence in rebuttal on this issue. The amount of evidence necessary for the State to discharge its burden of proof varies with the circumstances of each case. The voluntariness of a statement intended by the accused to be exculpatory may be taken to have been proved where it is not challenged by the defence and the circumstances of its making in themselves suggest no other inference, but where the statement is prima facie inculpatory direct proof positive that it was voluntary and uninduced may be necessary. Should the statement be admitted initially the judge retains his discretion to exclude it subsequently if circumstances later emerging cast doubt on its admissibility.

The issue of whether or not the admission was made at all, is, like that of its truth, one for the full court as trier of fact. The truth or falsity of the admission is therefore not normally a relevant inquiry at the trial within the trial, unless it is inextricably linked with the issue of voluntariness, e.g. because the accused alleges that not he but his interrogators were the source of the statement.

The fact that the accused is not believed in his denial of having made the statement at all does not of course relieve the State of its burden of proving that the admission was free and voluntary, though a false denial is a dangerous argument for the accused as it may tell heavily against his credibility. Where, however, the accused alleges he was induced to make the admission, the rejection of his version would not normally oblige the court to speculate as to the possible existence of other inducements not raised by him.

The making of the admissions in the terms or to the effect alleged by the prosecution must be established by the prosecution just as with any other evidence tendered by it. It is of far more weight if the ipse dixit verba of the accused can be proved, but even admissions obtained in question-and-answer form are admissible.

---

22 R. v. Danga, 1934 A.D. 223. The judge may not admit the evidence provisionally subject to first hearing all the other evidence in the case on the main issue, nor may he leave the question of its admissibility, if the State prima facie satisfies him, to the final determination of the full court.
23 L. v. Lewis, 1944 C.P.D. 290.
25 R. v. Melani, 1922 (2) S.A. 635 (A.D.) at 643-4.
29 Mokolodi v. R., 1957 (2) P.B., R. 203 (T).
31 745.
7.2. Freely and voluntarily made

There is no agreement amongst the authorities for admissions are ditn procured or by the need to remove conduct in relation to the accused been clear from early on that an act of hope or by the torture of fear should not be admitted in evidence.

Whether the admission was freely to be answered subjectively from it. The fact that an improper inducement induced the accused to state what indication of its subjective result.

An inducement to make an aь person in authority who held out a result if an admission was for no purpose is likewise tested subjectively believed, rightly or wrongly, able disadvantage or promised advantage the accused's employer, and so for involved in the offence, e.g. as co-relevant only to the extent to which regarded that a person in suit emanated from a person in suit accused directly by such person.

An admission elicted by violent inadmissibility. Threats of some aп if he remains silent, whether or not the proceedings against him, are speak or an exhortation to tell the implication of a threat or promise trickery is not apparent but benefits, which have led to the promise by the police that they.

Ad n. 47: The inducement may emanate from a person in authority even though it is the accused who first mentions it and the person in authority only acquiesces in it (R v. Zaveckas [1970] 1 All E.R. 145 (C.A.).

48 Authorities are collected in (1968)
49 R. v. Warwickshill (1783) 1 Leach
50 R. v. Leamer, 1958 (2) S.A. 523 (S.
51 R. v. Ngcobo, 1959 (2) S.A. 522
52 R. v. Ndlovu, 1968 (4) S.A. 416
53 Denham v. R. [1968] 2 All E.R.
54 R. v. Barlt, 1976 A.R. esp. at A
58 R. v. Nhlepe, 1986 (4)
59 R. v. Smith [1959] 2 All E.R. 295
60 Commissioned of Customs and 61 S.A. 1.J. 212
62 R. v. Blain, 1971 C.P.D. 24:
64 1961 (2) P.H. H. 252 (S.R.); R. v.
65 1964 (2) S.A. 405 (A.D.) (promise of:}
7.2. Freely and voluntarily made without undue influence

There is no agreement among the authorities as to whether the conditions of admissibility for admissions are dictated by the danger of false confessions being procured or by the need to remove any possible inducements for police misconduct in relation to the investigation of crime; but the common law has been clear from early on that an admission forced from the mind by the flattery of hope or by the torture of fear comes in so questionable a shape that it should not be admitted in evidence.

Whether the admission was freely and voluntarily made is a question of fact to be answered subjectively from the point of view of the accused in each case. The fact that an improper inducement was offered which objectively might have induced the accused to state what was not true is a relevant but not conclusive indication of its subjective result upon his freedom of volition.

An inducement to make an admission is improper if it emanated from a person in authority who held out some advantage or disadvantage which would result if an admission was forthcoming. Who is a person in authority for this purpose is likewise tested subjectively: it must be someone whom the accused believed, rightly or wrongly, able to bring about or influence the threatened disadvantage or promised advantage. Such could be a police officer, a headman, the accused's employer, and so forth, and the extent to which, if at all, involved in the offence, e.g. as complainant or as investigating officer, is again relevant only to the extent to which the accused might be expected to have regarded them as persons in authority. An inducement may be held to have emanated from a person in authority even if it was not communicated to the accused directly by such person, but through an intermediary.

An admission elicited by violence or ill treatment of the accused is a priori inadmissible. Threats of some disadvantage which will accrue to the accused if he remains silent, whether or not the disadvantage relates to the course of the proceedings against him, are obviously improper, and a mere invitation to speak or an exhortation to tell the truth may also in the circumstances carry the implication of a threat or promise of benefit. An admission obtained by trickery is not apparently inadmissible.

Examples of improper promises of benefits, which have led to the exclusion of a consequent admission, are a promise by the police that they would take the accused to his wife to break the

---

119

7.2. Freely and voluntarily made without undue influence

There is no agreement among the authorities as to whether the conditions of admissibility for admissions are dictated by the danger of false confessions being procured or by the need to remove any possible inducements for police misconduct in relation to the investigation of crime; but the common law has been clear from early on that an admission forced from the mind by the flattery of hope or by the torture of fear comes in so questionable a shape that it should not be admitted in evidence.

Whether the admission was freely and voluntarily made is a question of fact to be answered subjectively from the point of view of the accused in each case. The fact that an improper inducement was offered which objectively might have induced the accused to state what was not true is a relevant but not conclusive indication of its subjective result upon his freedom of volition.

An inducement to make an admission is improper if it emanated from a person in authority who held out some advantage or disadvantage which would result if an admission was forthcoming. Who is a person in authority for this purpose is likewise tested subjectively: it must be someone whom the accused believed, rightly or wrongly, able to bring about or influence the threatened disadvantage or promised advantage. Such could be a police officer, a headman, the accused's employer, and so forth, and the extent to which, if at all, involved in the offence, e.g. as complainant or as investigating officer, is again relevant only to the extent to which the accused might be expected to have regarded them as persons in authority. An inducement may be held to have emanated from a person in authority even if it was not communicated to the accused directly by such person, but through an intermediary.

An admission elicited by violence or ill treatment of the accused is a priori inadmissible. Threats of some disadvantage which will accrue to the accused if he remains silent, whether or not the disadvantage relates to the course of the proceedings against him, are obviously improper, and a mere invitation to speak or an exhortation to tell the truth may also in the circumstances carry the implication of a threat or promise of benefit. An admission obtained by trickery is not apparently inadmissible.

Examples of improper promises of benefits, which have led to the exclusion of a consequent admission, are a promise by the police that they would take the accused to his wife to break the

---

119

7.2. Freely and voluntarily made without undue influence

There is no agreement among the authorities as to whether the conditions of admissibility for admissions are dictated by the danger of false confessions being procured or by the need to remove any possible inducements for police misconduct in relation to the investigation of crime; but the common law has been clear from early on that an admission forced from the mind by the flattery of hope or by the torture of fear comes in so questionable a shape that it should not be admitted in evidence.

Whether the admission was freely and voluntarily made is a question of fact to be answered subjectively from the point of view of the accused in each case. The fact that an improper inducement was offered which objectively might have induced the accused to state what was not true is a relevant but not conclusive indication of its subjective result upon his freedom of volition.

An inducement to make an admission is improper if it emanated from a person in authority who held out some advantage or disadvantage which would result if an admission was forthcoming. Who is a person in authority for this purpose is likewise tested subjectively: it must be someone whom the accused believed, rightly or wrongly, able to bring about or influence the threatened disadvantage or promised advantage. Such could be a police officer, a headman, the accused's employer, and so forth, and the extent to which, if at all, involved in the offence, e.g. as complainant or as investigating officer, is again relevant only to the extent to which the accused might be expected to have regarded them as persons in authority. An inducement may be held to have emanated from a person in authority even if it was not communicated to the accused directly by such person, but through an intermediary.

An admission elicited by violence or ill treatment of the accused is a priori inadmissible. Threats of some disadvantage which will accrue to the accused if he remains silent, whether or not the disadvantage relates to the course of the proceedings against him, are obviously improper, and a mere invitation to speak or an exhortation to tell the truth may also in the circumstances carry the implication of a threat or promise of benefit. An admission obtained by trickery is not apparently inadmissible.

Examples of improper promises of benefits, which have led to the exclusion of a consequent admission, are a promise by the police that they would take the accused to his wife to break the

---

119

7.2. Freely and voluntarily made without undue influence

There is no agreement among the authorities as to whether the conditions of admissibility for admissions are dictated by the danger of false confessions being procured or by the need to remove any possible inducements for police misconduct in relation to the investigation of crime; but the common law has been clear from early on that an admission forced from the mind by the flattery of hope or by the torture of fear comes in so questionable a shape that it should not be admitted in evidence.

Whether the admission was freely and voluntarily made is a question of fact to be answered subjectively from the point of view of the accused in each case. The fact that an improper inducement was offered which objectively might have induced the accused to state what was not true is a relevant but not conclusive indication of its subjective result upon his freedom of volition.

An inducement to make an admission is improper if it emanated from a person in authority who held out some advantage or disadvantage which would result if an admission was forthcoming. Who is a person in authority for this purpose is likewise tested subjectively: it must be someone whom the accused believed, rightly or wrongly, able to bring about or influence the threatened disadvantage or promised advantage. Such could be a police officer, a headman, the accused's employer, and so forth, and the extent to which, if at all, involved in the offence, e.g. as complainant or as investigating officer, is again relevant only to the extent to which the accused might be expected to have regarded them as persons in authority. An inducement may be held to have emanated from a person in authority even if it was not communicated to the accused directly by such person, but through an intermediary.

An admission elicited by violence or ill treatment of the accused is a priori inadmissible. Threats of some disadvantage which will accrue to the accused if he remains silent, whether or not the disadvantage relates to the course of the proceedings against him, are obviously improper, and a mere invitation to speak or an exhortation to tell the truth may also in the circumstances carry the implication of a threat or promise of benefit. An admission obtained by trickery is not apparently inadmissible.

Examples of improper promises of benefits, which have led to the exclusion of a consequent admission, are a promise by the police that they would take the accused to his wife to break the news of his arrest to her personally, a promise of a reward for returning the stolen property, or an undertaking by the accused's employer to keep his job open for him. The fact that the admission was made under a statutory compulsion to speak is not construed as preventing it from having been freely and voluntarily made. In several early cases it was held that it was not voluntary if made on oath, unless, apparently, if the oath was sworn voluntarily.

---

119

The accused's intoxication at the time of the admission does not in itself prevent him from acting freely and voluntarily as long as he was not too drunk to know and appreciate what he was saying. The degree of intoxication will also affect the weight to be given to the admission.

The effect of police questioning or interrogation of the accused has frequently been discussed by the courts. The mere fact that an admission was elicited by questioning, subtle or otherwise, does not in itself mean it was improperly induced. Indeed, questions can hardly be avoided by policemen investigating a crime, and it is very often to the advantage of a suspect that he be given the opportunity to clear away if he can the suspicion of his guilty implication. But the admission will be rejected where the effect of the questioning was to trick or bully the accused into making admissions whether by the use of questions designed to put words into his mouth, or by bringing pressure to bear which overcomes his free will, even if it falls short of 'third-degree' methods. The effect of the interrogation remains, of course, a question of fact, but proof of a prolonged interrogation may make it harder for the prosecution to prove beyond doubt that the admission was free and voluntary.

Proof that the police behavior fell within the defined limits of propriety is not conclusive as to the admissibility of an admission so elicited. As Innes C.J. said in R. v. Barlin, legal principle is not sacrificed to administrative reform, and the rejection of improperly obtained evidence is not one of the methods used to discourage misconduct. However, in 1931, at the request of the Minister of Justice, a conference of judges drew up the Judges' Code as a code of conduct to guide the police in their dealings with suspects and accused persons. These rules, which have been officially issued as administrative directions to the police, are not designed to restrain the police from investigating the commission of offences or from narrowing down their investigations to one or other suspect; but they stress that the police duties do not include the function of eliciting evidence from a suspect which may then be used against him. By conducting an informal trial wherein the accused's guilt can be established without the sate-

---

65 1926 A.D. 556.
66 As to illegally obtained evidence generally, see above, p. 800.
guards of full judicial process being observed. The basis of the approach is that suspects and accused persons may be given an opportunity to clear themselves or explain away apparently incriminating facts, but that they should always be cautioned as to their right to remain silent and warned that what they say may be used against them. The full text of the Judges’ Rules reads:

1. Questions may be put by policemen to persons whom they do not suspect of being concerned in the commission of the crime under investigation, without any caution being first administered.

2. Questions may be put to a person whom the police have decided to arrest or who is under suspicion where it is possible that the person, by his answers may afford information which may lead to establish his innocence, as, for instance, where he has been found in possession of property suspected to have been stolen, or if he assisted another to commit a crime.

3. The caution to be administered in terms of rule 2 should be to the following effect:

“Do you wish to say anything in answer to the charge? You are not obliged to do so, but whatever you say will be taken down in writing and may be used in evidence.”

5. Where a person in custody wishes to volunteer a statement, he should be allowed to make it, but he should first be cautioned.

6. A statement made by a prisoner before there is time to caution him is not rendered inadmissible in evidence merely by reason of no caution having been given prior to the commencement of his statement, but in such a case he should be cautioned as soon as possible.

7. A prisoner making a voluntary statement must not be cross-examined, but questions may be put to him solely for the purpose of answering ridiculous or obvious absurdities in voluntary statements. For instance, if he has mentioned an hour without saying whether it was morning or evening or has given a day of the week and day of the month which do not agree, or has not made it clear to what individual or what place he intended to refer in some part of his statement, he may be questioned sufficiently to clear up the point.

8. The caution to be administered to a person in custody should be to the following effect:

(a) Where he is formally charged:

“Do you wish to say anything in answer to the charge? You are not obliged to do so, but whatever you say will be taken down in writing and may be used in evidence.”

(b) Where a prisoner volunteers a statement otherwise than on a formal charge:

“Before you say anything (or, if he has already commenced his statement, ‘anything further’), I must tell you that you are not obliged to do so, but whatever you say will be taken down in writing and may be used in evidence.”

9. Any statement made in accordance with the above rules should, whenever possible, be taken down in writing and in the language in which it was made. It should be read over to the person making it, and he should be given full opportunity for making any corrections therein that he may wish to add and be invited to sign it.

10. When two or more persons are charged with the same offence and a voluntary statement is made by any one of them, the police, if they consider it desirable, may furnish each of the other persons with a copy of such statement, but nothing should be said or done by the police to invite a reply. The police should not read such statement to a person furnished, unless such person is unable to read it or desires that it be read to him. If a person so furnished desires to make a voluntary statement in reply the usual caution should be administered."

Being purely domestic directives to the police force, the Judges' Rules do not have the force of law, and a failure to comply with them will not automatically lead to the rejection of an admission, nor will compliance necessarily lead to the reception of the admission. The extent to which the Rules were observed by the police may be a potent factor in persuading the court to admit or reject an admission, but the issue remains one of fact. Was the accused acting freely and voluntarily? The presence or absence of a caution may assist in establishing this, but other circumstances may well negate or override its effect. The Judges' Rules do not apply to investigating officers of other government departments, but the presence or absence of a caution could still be a relevant factor.

The same principle applies where admissions have been elicited by two or more accused persons being brought into confrontation. Compliance or non-compliance with Rule 10 of the Judges' Rules is relevant but not conclusive on the question whether the confrontation was an improper inducement preventing the admissions from being held to have been freely and voluntarily made.

7.3. Statements in the presence of a party

Where an accusatory statement was made by anyone in the presence and hearing of the accused, the form of his reaction may be such as to give rise to an inference that he agreed to what was said: his behaviour in the face of an accusation may amount to an adoption of the statement as his own admission. An example is Jacobs v. Hume, where a civil action based on an alleged seduction. Evidence was received that when the plaintiff's father asked the defendant if he was responsible for her pregnancy, the defendant started, hung his head, and remained silent. "I cannot believe", said Tim J., "that an innocent man, hearing for the first time a false charge of that character, would remain silent."

The mere fact that an accusation was made is not in itself admissible unless it amounts to nothing more than an act of identification. Standing alone, it is pure hearsay. Only where the form of the accused's reaction is equivalent to an admission is the accusation received, as introducing and explaining the response. In order, therefore, for an admission to be shown, three things must be established: (a) in addition to proof that the admission was freely and voluntarily made in an... chuse with the general principle of admissions:

---

32. 1927 T.P.D. 325.
33. At 325.
36. The reception of such evidence at the instance of the defense, in R. v. Uthwell, 1927 E.D.L.
37. Seem contrary to the principle that admissions are received against but not in favor of the accused, unless it could have been received under an exception to the rule against self-serving statements. See above, p. 599, 599 fff.
accusation was made in the accused's presence and hearing. The accusation itself is not evidence of this fact. Unless he was aware of it, his conduct could not be a response to it. There appears to be no authority on the point, but no doubt it must also have been made in a language he understood; (b) that in the circumstances some explanation or denial could have been expected of an innocent man and that the accused was afforded an opportunity to provide such an explanation or denial. If at the preparatory examination the accused does not at once deny the evidence against him, naturally no adverse inference can be drawn, since the decorum of the proceedings would preclude the opportunity to do so. Further, if the accused is cautioned in terms of the Judges' Rules that he is not obliged to say anything, and he does not then deny the accusation, again this is not a situation in which an explanation or denial would be expected; (c) that the accused's reaction is indicative of guilt as not being such a denial or explanation as could be expected of a man convinced of his innocence. The reaction may be express words of agreement, conduct, or in appropriate circumstances, silence. A denial of the accusation which is not believed may also be treated as an admission.

In R. v. Norton, the Court of Appeal held that these three requirements must be established to the satisfaction of the judge, sitting alone, who may entirely prevent the evidence from going to the trier of fact if not satisfied on the point. A different procedure, however, was prescribed by the House of Lords in R. v. Christie and has been approved in South Africa. The question whether the accused's reaction was such as to amount to an admission is to be determined by the trier of fact, and the function of the judge at the trial within a trial is simply to determine whether there is sufficient evidence on which it could reasonably be found that an admission was made. If the trier of fact then concludes that there was no admission, it must disregard the evidence entirely. The latter procedure is said to increase the risk of unfair prejudice to the accused, since the mere fact that an accusation was made may cause prejudice to him in 11 A. v. Mekeleni, 1952 (3) S.A. 439 (A.D.) at 441-4; R. v. Jogi, 1956 C.P.D. 43; R. v. Afrecy, 1959 (3) S.A. 76 (E) at 81. In R. v. Botha, 1917 T.P.D. 389, the Court inferred a denial from the fact that no mention was made in the evidence of the accused's response, but this decision cannot have survived Mekeleni.

12 A. v. Mekeleni, 1952 (3) S.A. 439 (A.D.);
13 Basina v. Sera (1871) 2 C.P.D. 363 (C.A.) at 372.
15 R. v. Mashoele, 1944 A.D. 51 at 583; R. v. Patel, 1946 A.D. at 307-8; R. v. Hanks [1946] 2 All E.R. 846 (C.A.). In Von L.B. v. S., 1969 (2) P.E., H. 219 (T), it was held to be an iniquity for the court to permit the accused to be cross-examined on his silence after the caution.
16 Fisher v. Malherbe and Ritz, 1912 W.L.D. 15 at 19; Peake v. Williams, 1929 E.D.L. 301; R. v. H., 1948 (4) S.A. 154 (T). The words used should be narrowly construed—they must amount unequivocally to an (R. v. Bell, 1929 C.P.D. 478).
20 [1914] 2 K.B. 496 at 500.
21 [1914] A.C. 545 (H.L.) at 553, 557.
the eyes of the assessors, in spite of an instruction to disregard the evidence. Accordingly, there is much scope for exercise of the judicial discretion to exclude the evidence where it would have little evidential value in proportion to its detrimental effect.

Where a person in the presence of another makes a statement incriminating that other as well as or instead of himself, on the principles of this form of admission the other's reaction may make it his admission or confession as well. For this reason, the courts have frowned on the police practice of deliberately engineering a confrontation between several accused or suspected persons with the object of eliciting either a confession from each or a statement from one which may then be used against the others as having been made in their presence. Such a confrontation is in breach of Rule 10 of the Judges' Rules, and as with the other Rules, contravention may result, though it will not automatically result in the rejection of the resulting evidence. Even where admitted, indeed, admissions so obtained have been held to have little if any probative value.

14. Admissions by conduct

Generally, any previous behaviour of a party which is inconsistent with the stand taken by him at the trial may be taken into account as evidence against him. Many examples of conduct loosely regarded as an admission would more properly be classified as circumstantial evidence than as implied assertions falling under the admissions exception to the rule against hearsay, in particular where the conduct is not intended to be assertive. The indiscriminate use of the term 'admissions by conduct' to cover both types of conduct has resulted in a lack of consistency in the decisions as to whether there must always be proof, as with verbal admissions, that the conduct was free and voluntary. Usually, however, the nature of the conduct itself postulates prima facie that the accused was not induced so to act.

Thus in R. v. Barlow, [1922] 2 K.B. 254, 260, C.J., in treating a false explanation given by the accused as an admission, laid down that it should not have been admitted unless first proved to have been voluntary in the sense that it was not induced by any promise or threat, but in most of the cases where the accused's false explanation has been taken into account against him this point does not seem to have been adverted to at all. On the other hand, where a schoolboy charged with crimes injuriae in writing obscenities on a blackboard was made to write out the offending words, in the presence of the police and the headmaster, for the purposes of furnishing a comparison between those words as written and his handwriting, the sample so obtained was excluded as having been obtained by compulsion.

---

19 R. v. Mutundo, 1961 (2) P.H., H. 253 (S.R.), where the confrontation was found to have been fortuitous and therefore not improper.
20 See above, p. 868, n.d.c.
A similar approach was taken in England by the Court of Appeal, in R. v. Volkin.

Other examples of conduct by the accused which have been characterized as admission by conduct are his attempted flight when apprehended, his efforts to bribe proposed witnesses either to give false evidence or to refrain from testifying against him, his actions in covering up the traces of the crime, or inducements offered to persuade the complainant not to pursue the charge. On the analogy of flight, the accused's attempted suicide after arrest was received under this heading in R. v. C. Payments made to maintain a child were construed by the Appellate Division as an admission of paternity in Gib v. S. Even the possession of letters—whether proved to have been answered or not—may in appropriate circumstances support an adverse inference. For example, a husband's careful collection and retention of love letters referring to his adultery with the letter-writer was regarded as evidence of his adultery in the divorce case of Thompson v. Thompson. A party's own books of account are of course evidence against him.

A party's failure to answer letters he is proved to have received may also amount to an admission of their contents, if in the circumstances a repudiation would ordinarily be expected from one who disagreed. To what inference the circumstances are appropriate is a question which will vary with the facts of every case, and the courts may well be less ready to draw such adverse inferences in a criminal case than in a civil trial. The adverse circumstances are, naturally, greatly strengthened where there is positive conduct rather than mere acquiescence upon receipt of a letter, e.g. payment of a sum requested in the letter may be treated as an admission not only of the amount but also of the cause as stated in the request.

7.5. Viliacrous admissions

Admissions are generally receivable only against the party who made them. Thus, for example, where the accused is charged with knowingly having received stolen property, the fact that the property was stolen cannot be proved by tendering an admission by the accomplice to the theft. The principle applies no less at a joint trial: a confession by one accused is not evidence against any of the other co-accused for any purpose whatsoever, not even to provide corroboration.

---

* [1918] I K.B. 531 (C.C.A.).
* R. v. Gowdley, 1919 E.D.L. 194; Sheaf v. R., 1928 (2) P.H., H. 347 (O).
* Moir v. The London, Chatham and Dover Railway Company (1930) L.R. 5 Q.B. 314.
* Van der Westhuizen v. R., 1908 E.D.C. 468; Ward v. Steinberg, 1951 (1) S.A. 395 (T).
* 1949 (2) S.A. 438 (S.R.). See also above, under Relevance, p. 466.
* 1967 (1) P.H., H. 136 (A.D.).
* Nash v. Pillay's Trustees, 1923 A.D. 471.
* Failure to reply to a letter advising that another was claiming to act as the address's agent was regarded as an admission of the authority in Hendber & Oliff v. Wilson (1887) 8 N.L.R. 148, and Faure v. Neath & Company v. Bepsey (1923) 12 S.C. 498. As to failure to contest the other party's version of the facts, see Stanford & Co. Ltd. v. Parker, 1921 C.P.D. 381; Benefit Cycle Works v. Amore, 1922 T.P.R. 525; Senior v. Tusker's Shoe Store, 1923 (3) S.A. 513 (T). Failure to reply to a letter from the mother of a child alleging the address was the father was held to be an admission in the circumstances of Gib v. G., 1923 (1) P.H., H. 125 (A.D.), but not in the circumstances of Mepham v. Nette, 1926 E.D.L. 78.
* 1966 (4) S.A. 520 (W); Gib v. S., 1967 (1) P.H., H. 125 (A.D.).
* Not, of course, can the extrajudicial admission be evidence in favour of a co-accused: R. v. Jagen, 1940 A.D. 9. nation or strengthen the credibility of other evidence implicating the co-accused.\(^9\)

One result of the rule is that mutual contradictions in admissions made by each co-accused can be ignored, as each need only be considered in violation as evidence against its maker.\(^22\) As, however, there is a real possibility of prejudice resulting from such a situation, there should wherever it arises be a separation of trials.\(^31\)

There are three general categories to be distinguished as exceptions to the rule that the admissions of a party are evidence against him only:\(^33\)

(a) Where there has been a pre-appointment of or a referral to the maker of the statement by the party against whom it is tendered. Van Rooyen v. Humphrey\(^34\) provides a clear example of a referral. The parties to the action having been concerned to determine the cause of a fire which had spread from the defendant's land to the plaintiff's, the defendant, being unable to speak to the matter of his own personal knowledge, put forward two of his employees as persons to whom the plaintiff should refer for first-hand information. As he had himself nominated them to speak, their statements were received against him.

The same applies where the maker of the statement was appointed in advance to speak on the party's behalf, whether or not as part of other duties he performs for the party. In this category have been held to be an accountant who is appointed by the party to keep his books\(^35\) or make his returns to the revenue officials,\(^36\) a stationmaster with the power and duty of reporting losses of property from the railway company's custody,\(^37\) and a scout or look-out deputed, during the commission of a crime, to give warnings if detection seemed imminent.\(^38\) On the other hand, a barman\(^39\) or housekeeper\(^40\) have been found not to have such authority to speak on behalf of their employers, nor normally has an officer of a company authority to speak for the company.\(^41\) In all such cases there must be proof of the pre-appointment before the admission can be received, and the admission itself is not evidence of such pre-appointment.\(^42\)

The existence of the authority to speak is a question of fact in each case. It must have existed at the time the admission was made, not necessarily at the time of the events to which the admission refers,\(^43\) nor at the time of the trial in which it is tendered.\(^44\)

---

\(^31\) This is the class of exceptions is Wigram's (IV. § 1009), approved in Bates v. Van Yveren, 1966 (3) S.A. 162 (A.D.) at 198, per Williamson J.A. Set (1966) 85 S.A.L.J. 416.
\(^33\) 1953 (3) S.A. 392 (A.D.).
\(^35\) R. v. Mount and Erleigh (1), 1930) S.A. 591 (W.).
\(^36\) Kirkwall Brewery Company v. Forrest Railway Company (1914) L.R. 9 Q.B. 468.
\(^37\) R. v. Alexander, 1913 T.P.D. 561. A difficulty of regarding the warning in this case as a vicarious admission is that it would seem to conflict with the principle that what an agent says to his principal is not an admission, only what he says to a third party.
\(^40\) R. v. Hewson (3), 1937 C.P.D. 105; R. v. Govey, 1929 C.P.D. 58; Siemens N.O. v. Gilbert, Hamer & Co., Ltd., 1953 (1) S.A. 897 (N) esp. at 918. Witnesses, called at the party's instance in previous proceedings were not his agents to speak even if they were also in his employment at the time (Richerson Corporation, Ltd. v. Globe & Phoenix Gold Mining Co., Ltd., 1943 A.D. 293. But see sec. 581 of the Criminal Procedure Act. E.)
\(^41\) Estates (Helpo v. Stump, 1933 C.P.D. 279 at 287; R. v. Kora, 1930 (3) S.A. 797 (Q.).
\(^42\) Wood v. Dersley (1882) 2 E.D.C. 266.
(d) Where the party has subsequently adopted as his own the statement made by another, it is treated as though it were his own statement, as it were by ratification.23

e) Where there is privity or identity of interest between the maker of the statement and the party against whom it is tendered. Such privity may take the form of either privity of obligation or privity of title. Whether there is such a privity is a matter of substantive law, not of the law of evidence, and it is therefore South African and not English law which determines this.24

Partners who are fully liable for each other's delictual or contractual acts within the scope of the partnership, would be affected by each other's admissions concerning these matters,25 and a master's vicarious liability for the wrongful acts by which his servant renders himself also personally liable, means that the latter's admissions are receivable against the former.26 Privity of title would cover such as exists between a past and present owner of land, as to its boundaries,27 between spouses married in community of property in relation to the joint estate,28 between the deceased and the executor of the deceased's estate29 and between an insolvent and his trustee30 in relation to estate transactions. On the other hand, the insolvent and his wife would not necessarily be in privity of interest,31 and nor is a mother in privity with her child so as to make her admission of adultery evidence against it on the issue of its legitimacy.32 A creditor and his debtor may in execution proceedings be in privity of title regarding property attached in the debtor's possession,33 and, similarly, an insolvent and his creditor, as against the trustee.34

7.6. Co-criminals: common purpose

Where several persons have associated for an unlawful common purpose, the statements made by any of them in pursuance of the common purpose are admissible against each of the others whether some only or all of the co-criminals are being tried. This is not strictly speaking a form of vicarious admission,35 since the rule permits proof of such statements only in so far as they are executive, i.e. statements as acts performed in pursuance of the common purpose.36 Statements made subsequently as pure narrative, not amounting to acts,37 or statements (whether acts or not) made for an individual not common purpose.38

24 Beets v. Van Deventer, 1956 (3) S.A. 132 (A.D.) at 204. cannot be received under this heading and are admissible only against their maker, unless they can be brought under one or other heading of vicarious admissions proper, as discussed above. An example of an 'executive' statement is furnished by R. v. Mayet, where the accused was charged with the murder of her husband. The prosecution case was that she had deputed one J to hire two assassins who would actually perform the killing. J's statements in attempting to engage two men to assume the task not only constituted his part in effecting the whole criminal transaction but were received against the accused both to define the scope of the common purpose and to identify the persons thus criminally associated. In Mawaz Khan v. R., the statements received were the joint fabrication of a protective tissue of lies, indicative of the common guilt.

The statements of one criminal are only received against another if they were acting in concert, but this does not mean that there must first be full proof of their criminal association, otherwise the reasoning becomes circular. What is required is that at the conclusion of the State case the existence of the conspiracy and the identity of the conspirators should have been finally proved. How this is achieved is for the decision of the trial court, which must keep control of the order in which evidence is presented to it, and determine whether a foundation for receiving the statements has been laid by sufficient prima facie evidence of the conspiracy. The court may even accept simply the firm assurance of the prosecutor, as an officer of the court, that satisfactory proof of the association will indeed be tendered in due course; but in view of the potential prejudice to the accused that will normally prevail the court should as a rule first be satisfied that there is a real possibility of the other facts necessary ultimately being proved. If sufficient proof of the association is, in the end, forthcoming, the statements cannot be taken into account against anyone other than their maker.

8. Confessions

8.1. What is a confession

Confessions are a species of admissions but require separate treatment because they are regulated by statute. Section 244(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act provides that a 'confession of the commission of any offence' shall be admissible when tendered in evidence against its maker, subject to certain conditions as to the circumstances of its making and recording being shown to have been fulfilled. Before these conditions of admissibility are discussed, it is necessary to examine the meaning of 'confession' as used in the Act, since no statutory definition of the term is provided. It will be seen that here as with other aspects of subsection 244(1), a narrow construction is applied by the 41 Of course, evidence which would always be admissible against an accused is not rendered inadmissible, even if not falling under this heading, just because it is given by a seconder (R. v. Tagham, 1958 (2) S.A. 37 (Q.C.).

---

38 [1957 (1)] S.A. 492 (A.D.).
courts, so as to restrict as little as possible the applicability of the common-law rules governing admissions.\textsuperscript{49}

In R. v. Becker, De Villiers A.C.J. considered the use of the term 'confession' wherever it appears in the Act, and concluded that what the legislature intended to denote was an unequivocal acknowledgment [by the accused] of his guilt, the equivalent of a plea of guilty before a court of law.

Several statements by the accused on different occasions which laboriously pieced together may lead to the inference of his guilt, do not amount to a confession within the meaning of section 244, unless they are so linked together by circumstances that they in effect constitute one continuous statement.\textsuperscript{40}

A plea of guilty to the charge, even if later withdrawn or entered as a plea of not guilty, is of course a judicial confession of which the court may take cognizance.\textsuperscript{53}

It follows from the definition given in Becker's case that to be a confession there must be an admission of every component element of the accused's guilt. As Wessels J. put it in R. v. Van Veren,\textsuperscript{60} the accused must have said in effect, 'I am the man who committed the crime'. This is not a test which is easily satisfied. An example where it was is R. v. Hoffman,\textsuperscript{61} where the accused was charged with failing to obey a government notice directing him to hand in his fire-arms. His statement that his rifles were expensive and he was afraid he would not be paid their full value was held to be a confession since it implicitly admitted both the failure to act and the necessary animus.\textsuperscript{62} If, however, the accused's statement is at all capable of a rational explanation other than his guilt, it is not a confession. For instance, in R. v. Lepulo,\textsuperscript{63} a charge of theft of a sheep where the accused admitted the taking, De Beer J. pointed out that it was still open to him to set up the defence that he did not intend to terminate the owner's rights, or that he thought the complainant would not object to his sheep being taken. Thus an admission of the main or of an essential fact, however prejudicial and even if conclusive of guilt in the light of other circumstances, is not a confession.\textsuperscript{64} Nor is an admission of the actus reus unless coupled with an admission of mens rea\textsuperscript{65} if this is an element of the offence.

\textsuperscript{50} The provision was an innovation introduced by sec. 223 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, No. 31 of 1917.

\textsuperscript{60} 1929 A.D. 167 at 171.

\textsuperscript{63} 1918 T.P.D. 218 at 221, approved in R. v. Becker, 1929 A.D. 167 at 171.

\textsuperscript{64} 1941 C.P.D. 65.

\textsuperscript{65} See also, R. v. H., 1948 (6) S.A. 154 (T) (charge of misappropiation, woman's statement to the police, 'You have caught us red-handed', held to be a confession); R. v. Batista, 1960 (1) P.H., 101 (T) (charge of unlawfully cultivating dagga, accused was held to have confessed by saying the field and the dagga were his and he had cultivated it because he needed the money); S. v. Apolos, 1965 (4) S.A. 178 (C) (murder, accused's statement, 'Ek kon dit nie meer meer nie, daarom het ek hul doodgemaakt', held to be a confession).

\textsuperscript{69} R. v. Lange, 1936 C.P.D. 130; R. v. Sidu, 1935 (3) S.A. 228 (A.D.), Cf. R. v. De Vries, 1930 C.P.D. 78, which seems to be of doubtful correctness.
This is sometimes phrased as requiring an admission not only of the conduct charged but also of the unlawfulness of that conduct. An extreme example is provided by S. v. Mole.\textsuperscript{41} The accused, a non-White, was charged with unlawfully occupying premises in a place which had been proclaimed as a White group area. His statement, 'I live here', was held to fall short of a confession although there was other evidence of his race and of the proclamation of the area, since he had not actually stated, 'I live here illegally'.

A common problem in cases where the charge consists in or has as an element the unlawful possession of articles or substances, is the classification of the accused's admission of ownership. There have been provincial division decisions both ways,\textsuperscript{42} but in R. v. Kona\textsuperscript{43} and R. v. Al\textsuperscript{44} the Appellate Division appears to have held that on such charges a mere admission of ownership is not per se a confession. The problem in the form in which it has arisen in the Appellate Division cannot, however, be considered apart from the broader one of the interpretation of a statement which is not directly or explicitly a confession.

In how far can the circumstances in which the statement was made lend confessing significance to the words used? As mentioned already, the fact that in the light of other facts known at the time or subsequently proved, the statement is conclusive of guilt, will not make it a confession.\textsuperscript{45} But some circumstances have been held to affect the interpretation: the circumstances in which the accused is found, as in R. v. H\textsuperscript{46} in a miscegenation charge where the couple were found by the police in flagrante delicto, and the woman's statement, 'Oh, you have caught us red-handed', had clearly to be related to that fact to be meaningful; the circumstances in which the property which is the subject of the charge is discovered, since if it would appear that someone other than the accused is responsible for it, the accused's claim of ownership may be an assumption of liability;\textsuperscript{47} the charge as put to or understood by the accused may have to be referred to, to ascertain whether his statement is a reply,\textsuperscript{48} and finally, the words used in themselves, so that a mere admission coupled with an offer or request to pay an admission of guilt\textsuperscript{49} may be converted by that addition into a confession. An example of the last kind is R. v. Burgess,\textsuperscript{50} a murder charge where evidence was tendered that the accused had telephoned the police station and asked them to send a policeman as 'I have shot somebody'. The admission of the shooting alone would not have been a confession as no defence—e.g. accident, provocation etc.—was thereby negatived, as they \textsuperscript{42} Such an admission was held to be a confession in R. v. Elacio, 1928 E.D.L. 466; R. v. Mololo, 1928 C.P.D. 75; S. v. Gumede, 1963 (2) S.A. 349 (N.); and held not to be a confession in R. v. Manuel, 1934 C.P.D. 98; Buth stein v. (R.), 1941-2 N.P.D. 15; S. v. Mtshane, 1945 T.P.D. 258; R. v. Mabjane, 1950 (4) S.A. 152 (C); Letshulubane, S. 1949 (1) P.H., H. 71 (O).

\textsuperscript{43} 1959 (1) S.A. 420 (A.D.).

\textsuperscript{44} 1956 (2) S.A. 288 (A.D.).

\textsuperscript{45} R. v. Bokweke, 1948 (1) S.A. 1021 (T), which held to the contrary, was held in S. v. Motu, 1963 (3) S.A. 194 (T): 582, to have been implicitly overruled by Gumede and Xulu, above, Sec. also, S. v. Gumede, 1963 (2) S.A. 349 (N).

\textsuperscript{46} 1948 (4) S.A. 154 (T). Another example is R. v. Pabla, 1956 (2) S.A. 145 (E).

\textsuperscript{47} The extent to which the accused's claim of responsibility must go, can be seen from R. v. Kona, 1949 (1) S.A. 229 (A.D.).

\textsuperscript{48} 1947 (1) S.A. 560 (D).

\textsuperscript{49} R. v. Nozum, 1937 T.P.D. 183; R. v. Mabjane, 1940 (4) S.A. 193 (C).

\textsuperscript{50} R. v. Nwabl, 1946 (1) P.H., H. 57 (T); R. v. Dlala, 1951 (3) S.A. 183 (C). perhaps might have been had he said 'I have murdered somebody'. But when the words were coupled with the fact of the voluntary telephoning and the identity of the recipient of the call, the accused must have meant in effect to give himself up into custody, and in the light of the circumstances, a statement amounted to a confession.

Burgess's case is not authority for regarding a confessing intention to be required to constitute a statement a confession. The test is not whether the accused intends to admit that he is guilty, but whether he intends to ... his guilt, whether he realizes it or not. If, all the essential elements of the offence are admitted, the presence of an exculpatory intention will not prevent the statement from being a confession. On the other hand, a statement falling short of admitting all the elements and which is purely exculpatory in intention is not a confession however prejudicial it is. As James C.J. put it in R. v. Barlin, no outside factor can convert an assertion of innocence into a confession of guilt. An explanation found to be false, or found to be contradictory of another explanation given is therefore not a confession; the same, of course, applies to statements completely denying the commission of the offence. Most exculpatory statements naturally are either a denial of an essential element of guilt or postulate a defence, and for this reason alone would fail to qualify as confessions (though the assertion of mitigating factors would not prevent the statement from being a confession).

For example, in R. v. Hanger the accused was charged with theft from his employers' Lennon, Ltd. On being arrested the accused stated, 'I do not look upon that as theft. I took the things to supply [R] who had to pay me, and when I received the money from [R] I would pay Lennon.' In holding that this did not amount to a confession, De Villiers J.A. reasoned that it was exculpatory as clearly repudiating the intention to steal.

A related question is presented by the situation where the accused's statement is exculpatory of the offence charged but is inculminatory in some other respect.
It is clear that, on any charge, a statement by the accused to the effect that he was a sochus criminis to that offence—again usually made with exculpatory intent—is a confession and the conditions of admissibility in section 244(1) must therefore be satisfied. It also seems clear that where the statement is an unequivocal admission equivalent to a plea of guilty to a lesser offence of which the accused could competently be convicted on the indictment (e.g. a confession to assault where the charge is one of murder), it ranks as a confession and

---

49 Per Greenberg J. in R. v. King, 1933 W.L.D. 128 at 129-30. See also, R. v. King, 1932 (4)
S.A. 145 (E).
A.D. 773 at 779-80.
S.A. 398 (T).
55 E.g. Xumalo v. R., 1961 (2) P.H., H. 101 (A.D.).
57 1928 A.D. 459.
H. 271 (O); NXL v. S., 1966 (2) P.H., H. 260 (N). section 244(1) must again be complied with. However, where the offence confessed to is not a competent verdict on the charge, the statement is apparently not a confession. These situations must be distinguished from the case where the accused’s making or failing to make a statement is in itself an element of the offence, where the offence is committed, for example, by the accused failing to furnish information or failing to give a satisfactory explanation. Here the terms of the information or explanation are always admissible without section 244(1) having to be satisfied, even if they would amount to a confession to another offence, and irrespective of whether the accused is actually charged with failing to give the information or explanation or whether this is merely a competent alternative verdict on the charged offence to which he confessed.

Where the accused’s extrajudicial statement fails to satisfy the criterion of a confession section 244(1) is inapplicable, but the statement is not necessarily admissible automatically. It must still be considered whether or not it is an admission and, if so, must satisfy the applicable rules of admissibility discussed above. If the statement, though inculpatory, is admitted under some other heading, e.g. as a statutory explanation, naturally the conditions of admissibility of confessions do not apply.

The special statutory provision made for confessions does not appear to counter the possibility of confessions purely by silence or conduct, however inculpatory, and evidence of such silence or conduct would therefore fail to be dealt with by the common law relating to admissions. Nor is there any possibility of a vicarious confession (as to vicarious admissions, see above, p. 898), since section 246 provides that no confession made by any person shall be admissible as evidence against another person. This means also that a confession by one accused person is not evidence against a co-accused, and to avoid the possibility of prejudice, if one accused has made a confession which implicates a co-accused this is grounds for ordering a separation of trials.

---

80 Naturally, the statement is only admissible where it would ordinarily be so on the charge. Thus, if the charge is failing to account for possession of articles reasonably suspected of being stolen, the accused’s possession must first be shown before the terms of his account are received: R. v. Haddi, 1953 (2) P.E., H. 211 (O); R. v. Scholtz, 1960 (1) S.A. 666 (C) at 670.
86 Ex parte Minister of Justice; in re R. v. Metemba, 1941 A.D. 75 at 82.
88 See R. v. Zun','$ 1937 A.D. 342 at 346 E; and under Vicarious Admissions above, p. 900, 125.
89 R. v. Buschmann, 1960 (3) S.A. 553 (A.D.), where the accused’s conviction, which depended upon his association before and after the crime with one H., was set aside, as there was no proof of H’s connection with the crime apart from H’s confession.
8.2. Proving the admissibility of a confession

The first proviso to section 244(1) of the Code prescribes that, in order to be admissible, a confession by the accused must be shown to have been freely and voluntarily made by him while he was in his sound and sober senses, and without having been unduly influenced thereon. The second proviso lays down the inadmissibility of confessions made to a peace officer other than a magistrate or justice, and the third requires a confession made at a preparatory examination to have been preceded by a caution.1

The prosecution must prove compliance in all respects with these provisos, beyond a reasonable doubt. Compliance will not be assumed; there must be proof positive of each condition of admissibility.2 The issue is tried independently of the issue of guilt at the time the confession is proposed to be proved, at a trial within the trial where evidence and, if necessary, argument from both sides may be heard.3 Where there are several accused persons, all of whom have allegedly made confessions, the trials within the trial may, if convenient, be consolidated.4 Like all rulings on the admissibility of evidence, the decision as to whether a confession qualifies for admission is one for the judicial officer alone, and the trial within the trial therefore takes place in the absence of the assessors.5 If the court is left in doubt as to the voluntariness of the confession, it must be rejected as the State has failed to discharge the onus resting upon it. A decision admitting the confession, however, is only interlocutory, and the presiding judge may review his decision at a later stage in the proceedings, again acting without the assessor's participation.6

Where the accused denies the making of any confession at all, or that he made one in the terms alleged by the prosecution, this issue is one for the trier of fact and not for the trial within the trial. Provided the issue of the making of the confession can be separated from the issue of its voluntariness, the contents of the confession may be referred to in order to determine its source.7 Where the issues are closely linked some of the evidence given on the voluntariness issue may have to be repeated before the full court,8 but as far as possible it should be left to the defence to raise these matters. The prosecution should not force the defence to convince the full court of the truth of a story already rejected by the judge sitting alone.9

It is still open to the court to find, as a matter of law, that the confession was not freely and voluntarily made, though the accused has not contended he was induced to make it but has been disbelieved as to his denial of having made it.10

---

6 S. v. Mbeki, 1956 (5) S.A. 837 (A.D.); S. v. Molyane, 1968 (4) S.A. 832 (W) at 834.
8 R. v. Manjoo, 1965 (4) S.A. 705 (N.C.); S. v. Mkhwanazi, 1966 (2) S.A. 735 (A.D.) esp. at 743. For an example of a link between the credibility of the State witnesses and the voluntariness of the confession, because of police interrogation methods, see Skosana v. S., 1969 (1) P.L.R., H. 23 (A.D.).
10 The point was left open in S. v. Mafebe, 1937 (2) S.A. 401 (W), but it would seem to be settled by the incidence of the onus of proof.
On the other hand, where he is disbelieved as to the presence, nature or effect of the inducement he says he was offered, since he himself would normally be the best judge of what influenced him, the court need not speculate as to other factors which may have been operative. The unsatisfactory nature of the accused's evidence does not in itself, however, discharge the prosecution's burden of proof.

Where a confession is inadmissible as not complying with the requirements of section 244(1), there is no discretion in the court to receive it, nor can the defence consent to its reception, the provisions of the Act being here peremptory. It is improper for the prosecution witnesses to hint at it so as to bring it indirectly to the knowledge of the court, nor may the prosecutor attempt to prove part only of the statement as an admission. On the other hand, if the confession is admissible the accused may be cross-examined on it even though the prosecution has not proved it in chief.

Where the defence takes the initiative in referring to the inadmissible confession by proving a favourable portion of it, the whole statement thereupon, in terms of section 244(2), becomes admissible. It is for the court to determine in each case whether the statement so adduced by the defence both (a) is favourable to the accused, and (b) in fact is connected with the confession, for if the favourable statement is found to be separate and unconnected, section 244(2) is not brought into operation.

8.3. Conditions of admissibility of confessions

8.3.1. Sound and sober senses

This phrase is not to be interpreted disjunctively, but as a single concept, as can be seen from the Afrikaans version of section 244(1), which speaks of proof that the confession was made while the accused was 'by sy volle verstand'. There must be affirmative proof that this condition of admissibility was present, but it need not be shown that the accused was in a state of quiet serenity free of physical or mental discomfort. In R. v. Blythe the accused was held to have been in her 'sound and sober senses' even though when she wrote the letter containing her confession she was in a great temper; and in S. v. Mahala the pain and exhaustion of the accused, who was suffering from a bullet wound in the arm, were found not to have prevented him from being in his sound senses. The test is simply whether the accused was at the time in the full possession of his understanding so as to realize what he was doing. Some degree of intoxication due to... alcohol or drugs does not necessarily mean the test is unsatisfied, as long as he was not too drunk to appreciate what he was saying. The degree of intoxication is, in addition, relevant to the weight as well as to the admissibility of the confession.

The fact that the accused is not always in his sound senses, e.g. where he suffers from hallucinatory spells, as in R. v. Miaela, does not affect the admissibility of a confession made by him at a time when he was not so affected.

8.3.2. Free and voluntary, without being unduly influenced

It does not follow that because a confession is proved to have been freely and voluntarily made, it was also made without undue influence. There must be express and affirmative evidence of both elements although, as they are usually closely related in fact, they are here dealt with together for the sake of convenience. Lack of compliance with the Judges’ Rules does not automatically disqualify the confession, and conversely, that a caution was given to the accused in terms of the Judges’ Rules will not always mean the confession will be admitted. The issue of what operated to induce the accused to confess remains a factual one; observance or non-observance of the Judges’ Rules is a relevant factor in an inquiry into the circumstances but is not decisive.

As formulated by the Appellate Division, a confession is ‘voluntary’ within the meaning of section 244(1) if the confessor’s will was not swayed by external impulses improperly brought to bear upon it which are calculated to negative the apparent freedom of will. There is ‘true influence’ if the confessor was placed in such a situation that a confession, regardless of its truth or falsity, has become the more desirable of two alternatives between which he was obliged to choose, and . . . the risk may be put thus, “Was the inducement such that there was any fair risk of a false confession?”

What is contemplated by these formulations seems to require, first, an inquiry as to whether objectively considered the inducement was undue or improper in law, and second, whether considered subjectively from the point of view of the accused the inducement did in fact operate upon his freedom of will. These tests do not apply to inducements not emanating from a source external to the accused himself. He may have mistakenly believed that he was obliged to confess, as in S. v. Lwane, but this does not prevent his confession being free and voluntary as long as no one induced that belief in him. The same applies if he entertains the hope that by confessing he will gain some advantage, provided the hope arose in him spontaneously, or as a result of advice not amounting to pressure.

---

4 See above, p. 686. V. H. v. A.
6 R. v. Mokoena, 1968 (2) S.A. 712 (A.D.) at 716.
10 This formulation would seem to meet the objections to the tests quoted which were propounded by James J. in R. v. Mandetla, 1963 (2) P.F.H. 370 (T). And see S. v. Roode, 1963 (4) S.A. 410 (A.D.) at 416-19.
11 1966 (2) S.A. 433 (A.D.) at 437. See also, R. v. Steenkamp, 1969 (3) S.A. 951 (T).
Where there was an inducement, it is improper or undue if it could have induced the accused to confess falsely. Whether he did indeed confess falsely, or whether the confession happens to be true, is not relevant although it may be relevant to the separate question of whether or not the accused confessed at all. An exhortation to the accused to tell the truth, or to tell everything he knows, cannot, therefore, be an improper inducement, unless the circumstances of the exhortation give rise to the further implication: "It will be better for you to say you did this even if you did not." A confession encouraged by a promise of secrecy, or by some other trick or fraud, is not admissible unless the trick was such as to create a fair risk of a false confession.

An inducement may be undue even if it did not emanate from a peace officer, nor, probably, from a person in authority, and even if it was of a mild or minor nature, although both considerations are relevant to the inquiry of whether or not the accused was actually persuaded by the inducement. It is not necessary that the inducement related to the charge.

Actual physical violence perpetrated on the accused to force him to confess obviously prevents the confession being free and voluntary and threats of violence are hardly less objectionable. Express threats or warnings of a disadvantage flowing from the failure to confess are naturally undue. Even short of ill-treatment, so are circumstances calculated to put the accused into a state of fear, or constituting an implied threat. A promise of some benefit or advantage, or circumstances giving the accused to understand that such might be forthcoming if he confesses, are no less likely to negative the accused's freedom of will than some variety of unpleasant treatment.

---

24 Apart from the trickery the confession must be shown to have been otherwise freely and voluntarily made.
26 This is a requirement of the common law but is not necessarily imported into sec. 214(1) (see R. v. Gumede, 1942 A.D. 398 at 412-13; R. v. Ramrav, 1954 (2) S.A. 291 (A.D.) at 297).
27 The point was left open in R. v. Gouws, 1960 (2) S.A. 32 (N), and in R. v. Jacobs, 1954 (2) S.A. 210 (N) at 216. S. v. Modise, 1961 (4) S.A. 101 (E), could be read in support of either view.
29 e.g. R. v. Maswana, 1953 (1) S.A. 616 (A.D.).
31 Decisions to the contrary (e.g. R. v. Mkwenda, 1939 T.P.D. 152; Perkins v. S., 1966 (2) P.H., H. 265 (C)) and see (1967) 84 S.A.L.J. 212 were based on the common law as it was then thought to be. See (1967) 84 S.A.L.J. 212.
34 R. v. Moos, 1918 T.P.D. 65; R. v. Gwela, 1960 (2) P.H., H. 327 (C).
To confront the accused with his co-accused, or with their confessions, may be an improper inducement if the accused is thereby tricked or bullied into making a confession, though such a confrontation is not necessarily improper in itself. Prolonged interrogation of the accused may be an undue influence even if it does not amount to 'third-degree'. Interrogation, unlike confrontation, is per se improper, and has been frequently disapproved of by the courts, but disapproval of police or administrative methods does not supersede the ordinary test of whether the accused's will was indeed overborne.

There are conflicting authorities as to whether a statement made under statutory compulsion is inadmissible as a confession because it cannot be said to have been freely and voluntarily made, but the better view would seem to be against admissibility.

Once an external pressure has been established which could have prevented the free exercise of the accused's will as to whether or not to confess, it must further be investigated whether that pressure indeed had the inducing effect. The causal link between the exerting influence and the resulting confession is sufficiently shown if the accused, even though he might have confessed anyway, was induced to confess more fully than he would otherwise have done, or to confess under oath where he would otherwise have made an unsworn statement. The effect of the inducement can, of course, be negatized by showing that it was contradicted or withdrawn, or that sufficient time elapsed between it and the confession for any effect it might have had to be dissipated by the interval.

8.3.3. Confessions to a peace officer

In terms of the second proviso to section 244(1), confessions made to a peace officer, other than a magistrate or justice of the peace, are inadmissible unless confirmed and reduced to writing in the presence of a magistrate or justice. A confession made to a magistrate or justice does not fall within the purview of the proviso and is simply admissible (provided of course that the first proviso is satisfied); and the same applies where the confession is made to a peace officer who is at the same time a magistrate or justice, even where the peace officer of

---

45. R. v. Nchobelelo, 1941 A.D. 502 at 502; R. v. Hlothotshane, 1947 (1) S.A. 567 (A.D.);
46. e.g. R. v. Kleinboon, 1938 T.P.D. 95; R. v. Woodman, 1940 N.P.D. 540. In R. v. Ewert, 1907 (1) P.H. H. 42 (A.), one hour's interrogation was said to raise a prima facie case that the confession had been coerced.
47. R. v. Dhlomini, 1952 (2) S.A. 693 (T.); S. v. Mnweni, 1966 (1) S.A. 726 (A.D.). See, too,
R. v. Amadlax, 1963 (3) S.A. 486 (S.R.), as to illegally obtained evidence in general, see above,
p. 866 et seq.
48. e.g. White v. R., 1944 N.P.D. 189; R. v. Dhlomini, 1952 (2) S.A. 693 (T.) (inadmissible);
S. v. Hloko, 1964 (4) S.A. 429 (B) (criticized in Annual Survey of South African Law, 1994, pp. 408-9) (admissible). The point was left open by the Appellate Division in R. v. Mellow, Ceres, 1925 A.D. 419.
1954 (2) S.A. 320 (A.D.) at 327.
the oath was taken voluntarily; R. v. Fossey, 1941 A.D. 351; (1911) 28 S.A.L.J. 322.
52. e.g. R. v. Middey, 1932 W.L.D. 156; R. v. Sengayi, 1964 (3) S.A. 761 (S.R., A.D.); such rank is himself the investigating officer or, it seems, the complainant.

Section 1(a) of the Code consists in a lengthy enumeration of who is a 'peace officer'. The enumeration is an exhaustive definition, and persons not specifically covered by one of the categories mentioned are not treated as peace officers by analogy. The onus of proving that someone is a peace officer for the purposes of the Act falls on the party so alleging, although it is the prosecution which must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the confession was not made to a peace officer. The following have been held not to fall within the definition as restrictively applied: a person holding an ad hoc appointment to discharge police functions in reference only to a particular case; a mine compound manager or police boy, or other persons appointed by private bodies to the functions of disciplining persons or controlling property; a subheadman, Induna or chief's deputy; and inspectors under the Wheat Industry Control Board. The definition of 'peace officer' has been held to cover the warden of a convict station, the superintendent of a municipal location, and a pass officer for a rural area. In R. v. Debele the Appellate Division assumed, without deciding, that a traffic officer was a peace officer.

A confession to a peace officer remains inadmissible even when in writing, as, for example, when contained in a letter addressed to him or a document which to the accused's knowledge is ordinarily intended for his eyes. The writing need not have been made in the presence of the peace officer.

Whether or not a confession was made to a peace officer is a question of fact. That it was ostensibly addressed to a third person also in the company of the accused and the peace officer is not conclusive, if the court finds it was in truth directed to the peace officer. On the other hand, the fact that the accused made a confession in the presence of the peace officer does not necessarily lead to the inference that it was addressed to him. A peace officer should not attempt to 32 Presumably where it is the accused who so contends, the burden may be discharged upon a preponderance of probabilities (cf. Ex parte Minister of Justice in R. v. Bolon, 1941 A.D. 345).

---

33 R. v. Debele, 1947 (1) S.A. 144 (O); S. v. Letso, 1954 (1) S.A. 329 (O). See also, R. v. Jacobus, 1954 (2) S.A. 320 (A.D.) at 323A.
38 R. v. Dikhanini, 1953 (2) S.A. 653 (T).
40 R. v. Mafatsa, 1918 G.W.L. 5.
41 R. v. Matangane, 1959 (3) S.A. 711 (S.W.A.).
43 S. v. Letsile, 1965 (1) S.A. 329 (O). Cf. R. v. Elphick, 1940 A.D. 355, where, as the letter was addressed to a peace officer who was also a justice, it was admitted.
44 S. v. Burger, 1947 (1) S.A. 500 (D).
47 S.A. 181 (O).
evade the provisions of the Act by taking the accused to confess to some other person, e.g. to the complainant. A third party who heard the confession being made to the peace officer cannot testify to it any more than could the peace officer himself.

A confession to a peace officer becomes admissible if confirmed and reduced to writing before a magistrate or justice. Where this is done, it must of course be proved that the confession was freely and voluntarily made and that the first proviso to section 244(1) is otherwise satisfied, as discussed above; it need not be shown that the original confession to the peace officer also complied with the first proviso.

The purpose of the second proviso, as De Wet C.J. pointed out in R. v. Gumede, is the protection of accused persons, but doubts have frequently been expressed as to whether this purpose is not defeated in practice by the letter of the law rather than its spirit being observed. The intention was that where an accused person manifests a confessing state of mind, he should be brought before an impartial and independent official who would inquire into the possible existence of antecedent inducements which led up to the formation of that state of mind. What has tended to happen instead is that the confirmation of the accused's confession before a magistrate has had the effect of dropping a veil between the treatment of the accused by his custodians and his resulting confession, which "gives an aura of respectability and admissibility to a statement which might be suspect in regard to its being motivated by previous events." As a result of such doubts, departmental instructions have been issued for the guidance of magistrates as to the inquiries they should make of accused persons who come before them to confess. These instructions, like the Judges' Rules, do not have the force of law, though the magistrate's failure to observe them is relevant to whether or not the confession made to him was free and voluntary. Nor have they allayed all suspicion, since the wording of the questions they contain have been judicially criticized as over-formal and the manner of their administration has in many cases been disturbingly perfunctory, but the Appellate Division has indicated that the prosecution should specifically lead evidence of the magistrate's inquiries having been meticulously made. Confusion remains, however, since in the same breath it is said that the magistrate, while not permitting himself to become a mere amanuensis, is not 79 It is insufficient if the confession is only partially reduced to writing: R. v. Bullen, 1945 C.P.D. 386. As to how far the accused may be questioned while he is making the confession see R. v. Afrika, 1948 (3) S.A. 627 (O), where Brits J. said that the magistrate should confine himself to such matters as clearing up ambiguities, and must avoid leading questions. The whole of the statement the accused wishes to make must be taken down, unedited, by the magistrate (R. v. Ndlovu, 1958 (2) S.A. 562 (R) and preferably in the presence of the accused (R. v. Mtimi, 1938 C.P.D. 484; S. v. Cela, 1963 (4) S.A. 62 (A.D.) at 398); Becker v. Nkoko, 1961 (3) S.A. 112 (A.D.) at 115).

---

81 1942 A.D. 298 at 300.
83 Per Harmsrur J. in S. v. Mabasa, 1964 (1) S.A. 68 (N) at 71.
85 S. v. Radebe, 1968 (4) S.A. 410 (A.D.) at 410. obliged to investigate the treatment of the accused by the police unless the accused can persuade him he has cause for complaint, in which case it would be his duty to advise the accused to refrain from making any statement. The rulings that this second proviso is sufficiently complied with even where the justice before whom the confession is confirmed is himself the investigating officer or is a member of the same police unit or where the confession takes place in the presence of the police would also seem to contradict the object of the section. Although further safeguards have been suggested by the courts, notably by Colman J. in S. v. Mafokeng where he recommended that the magistrate should be empowered to have the accused removed if necessary from excess by those of his custodians against whom he is in need of protection, it is submitted that what is really required is a drastic amendment of the statute.

The second proviso of section 244(1) not only seems lamentably to have failed to protect accused persons against undue pressures to confess. It has at the same time been just as strongly criticized because its requirement of a technical procedure often leads to the exclusion of evidence which is clearly highly relevant and possibly highly reliable. The solution to the criticisms from both sides would be either the complete abolition of the requirement and a return to the common law (or first proviso) position where the inquiry is purely whether the confession to whomsoever made, was freely and voluntarily forthcoming without having been induced by any undue influence, or alternatively a tightening up of the provision, so that, as in India, no confession made to a police officer is admissible at all, or only, as in Roman-Dutch law and today in Tanganyika and Zanzibar, if made in the immediate presence of a magistrate.

8.3.4. Confessions at a preparatory examination

When a confession is made by the accused at a preparatory examination, it is, in terms of the third proviso to section 244(1), inadmissible unless he was first cautioned by the presiding magistrate that he is not obliged to say anything in answer to the charge against him but that what he does say may be used in evidence against him. The caution need only have been given before a statement made at the invitation of the magistrate under section 66(1); it is not necessary for the admissibility of other confessional statements made by the accused spontaneously at the preparatory examination.

Even where the magistrate has given the required caution, it is still possible that the confession can be found not to have been made without undue influence, freely and voluntarily, as required by the first proviso. 9

9. Facts discovered from Accused’s Statements or Pointing-out

Evidence may be given both of facts discovered as a result of information given by the accused, and of the fact that the information was imparted by him or the place or thing pointed out by him. It need not be shown that before he did so the information or the connection of the place with the crime was not known. 10 In terms of section 245 of the Criminal Code, the admissibility of such evidence is unimpaired even if the information or indications were given as part of an inadmissible admission or confession by the accused, and whatever the means, even apparently in spite of violence or cruelty, by which he was induced to act. The courts retain, of course, their common-law discretion to exclude evidence which is technically admissible, 11 but the South African cases have thus far furnished no indication of what grounds would induce the courts so to act. The Privy Council in King v. R. 12 considered that the position of the accused, the gravity and type of offence, and the kind of investigation appropriately undertaken by the police, as relevant factors to be evaluated when the exercise of the discretion to exclude is contemplated.

Where evidence of the pointing out is received under section 245, no portion of the inadmissible statement accompanying it can be proved. 13 The purpose of permitting evidence that it was the accused who did the pointing out is, of course, to link him with the crime by proving his knowledge, but whether the inference of knowledge can be drawn from his pointing out alone depends upon the circumstances of the case. It may indeed support no inference at all, but in itself be completely neutral and irrelevant. For example, in S. v. Mzwakhe 14 while evidence could be given that the accused pointed out a bed and a hole in a building, it took the case no further if his concurrent statements to the effect “That is the bed upon which I stood”, “That is the hole I climbed through” were, as they had to be, excluded.

Even if the inference of knowledge can be drawn it is not conclusive of the accused’s guilt. 15 It must still be clear beyond a reasonable doubt that his knowledge could not reasonably have come to him in any way other than by his own complicity in the crime. 16

Although the methods of extraction of the pointing out do not affect its admissibility, they may have other relevance. For example, in S. v. Celote 17 the issue of whether the police had assaulted the accused was held to be relevant to

---

14 [1966] 3 W.L.R. 391 (P.C.) at 400. the credibility of his story that violence had been used on him and that he had not pointed out anything.

IV. OPINION AND BELIEF

1. General Opinion and Reputation

Evidence of what is the public opinion as to particular facts, is admissible to prove the existence or non-existence of those facts only in the following cases:

(a) to establish the character or reputation of individuals, discussed above under Character of the Accused, p. 366, and under Cross-examination as to Credit, p. 366;

(b) to prove or disprove the existence of a public right, as an exception to the rule against Hearsay. See above, p. 366;

(c) reputation as part of a family tradition to establish matters of pedigree, also as an exception to the rule against Hearsay. See p. 366, above. In addition, a special and limited statutory provision allows proof of reputed relationship to be given in charges of incest. See section 271(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act;

(d) where neither direct evidence nor documentary evidence is available to establish a marriage between a man and a woman, evidence of their cohabitation and of their having been generally regarded as a married couple is admitted in civil cases, and may be sufficient to prove their marriage. There do not appear to have been any criminal cases in South Africa concerning evidence of cohabitation and reputation, other than Melin v. R. where strong doubts as to its applicability in criminal law were expressed. Even if it does apply, however, quite clearly it is not even prima facie proof of marriage if either one of the parties went through a marriage ceremony with another, whether before or after commencing the cohabitation with the reputed spouse; or if the association between the reputed spouses could not have been a civil union but, for example, merely a potentially polygamous union.

2. Opinion Evidence

In general a witness's testimony may not include statements of belief upon the matters in dispute. To make findings of fact and to draw inferences from those facts in coming to a conclusion is the task of the tribunal itself, and it would be superfluous and time-wasting for it to hear a witness's views on such matters as the guilt or innocence of the accused or the sentence he deserves. A witness's opinion as to the law applicable to the case is also irrelevant (Foreign law is regarded as a question of fact. As to proof of foreign law, see above, p. 366.)

---

2. 1904 T.S. 804.
3. Ismail v. Registrar of Advertisements, 1911 T.P.D. 1366; Ex parte L., 1947 (3) S.A. 50 (C).
5. Ex parte Scottish In re Estate Pillay, 1948 (1) S.A. 873 (N).
Although a witness’s function is to speak to facts, there is of course no determinable line between statements of fact and statements of opinion. The rule against opinion evidence has its main effect on the form of examination, since the more a question is designed to elicit the most detailed and specific answer the witness can give, the less likely is that answer to infringe the rule. While it is often said that a witness must not express his opinions on the very question the court has to decide, this would seem to mean in effect no more than that the witness’s opinion is in the circumstances of the case irrelevant.

The formulation is a misleading one, since it often seems that a question objected to can, by simply a change in its wording, yet on rephrasing be directed towards eliciting the very same thing from the witness.

The rule against opinion evidence does not apply where the witness’s opinion could tell the court more than it could itself deduce unassisted. This situation can arise with either a lay witness or an expert witness.

2.1. Lay opinion

It is frequently impossible or unhelpful to distinguish between a statement of fact and an inference drawn from observation. For example, for a witness to state his own act of recognition in identifying a person may be of more meaningful assistance to the tribunal than a lengthy and detailed catalogue of each feature he observed, even could the witness’s memory yield such a list. In the same way he may identify objects or substances, state that a person was distressed, afraid, angry, etc. or that a car was driven very fast.

What is necessary here is that the witness’s opinion must be shown to be based on his own observations, and that these observations are more conventionally and comprehensively communicated to the court in opinion form. Thus where the accused is charged with having been in unlawful possession of a drug or intoxicant, the statement in evidence of a State witness identifying the substance is admissible and the results of a chemical analysis of the substance need not invariably be proved. It should be proved that the witness could recognize the substance by virtue of his past experience of it, how he did so, by its taste or smell, for example, since a bald statement identifying the substance would not of course be more than prima facie proof, and the court might require further evidence before being persuaded. However, the facts on which the observation was based need not be stated in advance as a prerequisite of admissibility but can be left to be elicited in cross-examination. The same 18 e.g. R. v. Ndhlovu, 1954 (4) S.A. 482 (N).

21 Rato Flour Mills, Ltd. v. Adicioni (1), 1958 (4) S.A. 235 (T) at 237; S. v. Insight Publications (Pty.) Ltd., 1965 (2) S.A. 775 (C).
29 R. v. Viljoen, 1957 (3) S.A. 223 (A.D.). The prosecution may find it safer to lead this evidence in advance as a precaution against inadequate cross-examination, to ensure that its principles have been applied to allow a lay witness to state his opinion that a particular person was intoxicated or belongs to a particular racial group.

2.2. Expert opinion

An expert witness is one who possesses some special skill, knowledge or experience in a relevant field by which he is better equipped than the court to draw inferences as to the existence and significance of any facts. There can be no fixed list of technical and scientific matters where expert evidence will always be admissible, since each court will have to decide whether in the circumstances of the particular case assistance is needed from a witness with greater skills than it possesses itself. The application of this test is a matter of degree and will vary in the discretion of different judicial officers. This is illustrated by the case of "Publications Control Board v. William Heinemann, Ltd." where the majority of the Appellate Division considered themselves fully able to determine without assistance whether a publication would have a tendency to corrupt and deprave its readers, while the dissenting minority of the judges of appeal felt the need for guidance as to how and why the publication might or might not do so.

If the court decides that expert assistance will be useful to it, the witness tendered as an expert must be proved to be appropriately skilled. The burden of proof is on the party tendering the witness and, like all preliminary matters of fact and competency, is for the decision of the judge alone. Section 239 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1955, provides for expert evidence to be given by affidavit, in which case it is necessary for the expert, in addition to stating his qualifications, also to depose that he is in the service of one of the particular institutions named. Where the expert attends personally, on the other hand, there need only be evidence as to the extent of his training and experience. (As to proving the competence of an expert in foreign law, see above, p. ) His special knowledge must not have been acquired expressly for the purpose of his testimony at the trial. A formal course of study is not always a necessary qualification, unless appropriate, so that, for example, an experienced stock farmer may give expert evidence as to the value of cattle. Conversely, however, purely theoretical knowledge of a field of knowledge, without experience in it, would not normally suffice, though the witness need not be shown to use the skill professionally. In S. v. Linnekart, the unusual course was adopted of proving an experiment which demonstrated the witness’s remarkable skill in identifying footprints.

The witness may only give evidence as an expert in fields in which his competence is established, so that a physician cannot be asked about the shape and type of bullets which caused a wound unless he is also an expert in ballistics, and land surveyors are not regarded as experts in interpreting the relative position of ships from photographs taken at sea. On the other hand, as the data contained within a field may be of enormous scope and variety, it is recognized that no single individual could from personal observation have tested the principles upon which he relies every day as working truths. He is not required to possess proved statistical skills before relying up on s and data which are part of the current and accepted knowledge within his mind, as long as he has the training and experience to ascertain and evaluate the proper sources of information.

He may in the course of his testimony refer to learned books and articles, and incorporate portions into his testimony. Such books and journals do not become evidence in themselves except in so far as they have been put to and assessed to by the expert witness. It is improper and irregular for the court to rely upon other portions of the publications or upon other publications, nor may these be referred to by counsel in argument. The opponent or the court may put to the witness for comment portions of the publications, or other publications, which appear to contradict the witness’s opinion, but unless he (or another expert witness) adopts those portions they may not be used to discredit or to bolster up his testimony.

The expert’s opinion may be based upon facts which he himself has observed or upon facts observed and testified to by others. If he did not himself observe the facts, they must be put to him as assumptions in the form of hypothetical questions. Facts should not be put to the witness in this way which are not going to be proved during the case, or which have clearly been disproved. There is some danger in hypothetical questions in that they may elicit a slanted opinion, because of the partisan selection of data. It may also be unclear to the tribunal precisely which facts the witness is being asked to assume as correct, a precision necessary because, of course, if the evidence of the facts is ultimately disbelieved the opinion founded upon them must also be rejected.

Where the expert has himself made the observations upon which his opinion is based—indeed, his special skill may lie precisely in his trained ability to make observations—the opinion of the expert is evidence in itself. This does not mean that the court is entitled to substitute the witness's opinion for its own without independent investigation. The expert must give the reasons for his opinion, and must explain these as fully as possible, so that the court can make up its own mind. The extent to which it may be guided by the expert's opinion depends partly upon the expert's degree of skill, partly upon the extent to which his evidence is tested in cross-examination or corroborated by other evidence, but the most important factor is the precision and certainty of which the particular branch of knowledge is capable. Some fields, such as that of fingerprint identification, have long been recognized as capable of yielding results upon which the court may safely rely. In these cases, although the court should attempt to see for itself the alleged similarities or differences upon which the fingerprint expert's conclusion is based, even if it is not able to do so his evidence may still be accepted. The judge here really decides whether he can safely accept the expert's opinion, and in such cases it is desirable for him, if he rejects it, to indicate clearly in his judgment his reasons for so doing.

In other less developed or less recognized fields of knowledge, such as handwriting evidence or identification of toolmarks, the court is less likely to be guided by the expert evidence unless it can itself perceive the similarities or differences upon which he founds his opinion, or there is corroboration at his of his opinion. Even where these fields of knowledge are concerned, however, there is no fixed principle that a court cannot rely upon expert knowledge alone. It is purely a question of the weight of the evidence. The law recognizes, too, that fields of knowledge change and grow, and that techniques may be improved or validated. The invention of the microscope has, for instance, advanced the skill of the handwriting expert, and fingerprint evidence, once regarded with caution if not suspicion, has now begun to reach almost the same level of instant acceptability as fingerprint evidence.

Expert evidence has frequently been said to be of little weight. The adversary method of obtaining an expert witness is the principal cause of this judicial scepticism, but it is also partly attributable to the fact that courts may deal in standards which do not accord with scientific criteria to which an expert is accustomed, and to the lawyer's expectation of an absolute certainty which may be alien to a scientific training. It is discernible, however, that the courts of law are not entirely immune from the growing prestige of science in modern

---

56 E. v. Lindeque, 1968 (1) S.A. 540 (E).
58 e.g., R. v. Zelich, 1937 T.P.D. 400 at 402.
59 An extreme example is S. v. Pithouse, 1946 (3) P.H., H. 258 (C), where Sutton J.P. stated that the evidence of an experienced police officer as to whether the accused was drunk was more valuable than that of physicians 'who often have doubts and difficulties and will not express a definite opinion.'
Particular difficulty is still caused by a clash between the experts called on each side, where the task of the court is to give its lay verdict as to which expert is to be believed, and if humanly possible it must try to avoid making its decision merely according to the preponderance in number, qualifications or length of experience of the experts involved. If it can make no decision, being unpersuaded by the experts of either side, the onus of proof governs: the party bearing the onus of proof has failed to discharge it and must lose on that issue.

V. JUDGMENTS AS EVIDENCE

A decision on fact given by another court in other proceedings cannot be used to establish the same fact in later proceedings. The rule applies whether the earlier decision was given in a civil or in a criminal trial. In R. v. Leach, a civil order of ejectment granted against the accused at the instance of the owner of the property was held inadmissible to prove that the accused was a trespasser, and in R. v. Lee, where the accused was charged with receiving stolen property, the fact that the property had been stolen could not, it was held, be established by proving that the accused's accomplice had been convicted of the theft.

The inadmissibility of judgments as evidence is said to be founded both on the opinion rule and the rule against hearsay, and even apart from these considerations the maxim omnia praestantur rite esse acta, which has been urged against the rule, would not be applied to dispense with full proof of an essential element of the case. The one exception to the rule permits proof of a witness's previous convictions or that he was disbelieved by another court, as an attack on his credibility, as to which see above, p. 199. The mode of proof is provided for by section 249 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1955.

As to proof before verdict of the previous convictions of the accused, see above under Character Evidence, p. 129, and under Procedure, p. 132. See also, judgments as evidence, supra, p. 129.
Where a witness is given a privilege by law, his usual obligation to answer all questions put to him in the witness-box is partially suspended, and he is entitled to refuse a reply to certain questions relating to matters covered by the privilege. This does not mean that the information cannot be placed before the court. Other witnesses may speak of it subject to the ordinary rules of relevancy, and the privilege merely allows the privileged witness to refuse with impunity.

In addition to witnesses' privileges, however, there are certain types of information which are themselves privileged, independent of any relation to a particular witness's testimony. Where this is so, the information may not be put before the court at all, by anyone, and even if neither of the parties takes objection to the evidence, the court should intervene mero motu to exclude it.

In addition to the rules of privilege dealt with in this chapter, particular statutes cast a cloak of secrecy over particular kinds of facts. Examples are contained in section 17 of the Population Registration Act, No. 30 of 1950, section 19 of the Railways and Harbours Service Act, No. 22 of 1908, and section 11 of the Group Areas Act, No. 36 of 1956. In each such case it is a matter of interpretation as to whether the information is in itself privileged from disclosure, or whether it is only certain persons who as witnesses are not permitted to divulge it.

No general rules other than those of statutory construction will afford a guide. A recent example is S. v. Forbes where evidence obtained from the accused in the course of an inquiry into his sanity under the Mental Disorders Act, No. 39 of 1916, was excluded. The reasoning was based on the general undesirability of disclosure, the purpose underlying the statute and the possible inhibition of candour rather than on the wording expressed in the Act.

1970 (2) S.A. 594 (C).
1. PRIVILEGE OF WITNESS

1. Privilege of accused as witness

When an accused person was by section 1 of the English Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, given testimonial competence, his position in the witness-box had in some way to be differentiated from that of an ordinary witness, who may be freely cross-examined as to bad character or previous convictions for the purpose of impeaching his credit. If the accused could be subjected to the same treatment, and his disreputable antecedents elicited albeit under the guise of attacking his veracity, there would be a distinction between his guilt and his credit would disappear under the cloud of prejudice towards him in the eyes of the jury. The protection which therefore had to be extended to the accused as witness by section 1(2) of the 1898 Act was in the form of a limitation on the scope of cross-examination of the accused, a provision re-enacted as section 228 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1956, which reads as follows:

‘An accused called as a witness upon his own application shall not be asked, and if asked, shall not be required to answer, any question tending to show that he has committed, or has been convicted of, or has been charged with, an, offence other than that with which he is charged, unless—

(a) he has personally or by his counsel, attorney or lay agent, asked questions of any witness with a view to establishing, or has himself given evidence of, his own good character, or the nature or conduct of the defence is such to involve impeachment of the character of the prosecut or or the witnesses for the prosecution; or

(b) he has given evidence against any other person charged with the same offence; or

(c) the proceedings against him are such as are described in sections two hundred and seventy-six or two hundred and seventy-seven, and the notice required by those sections has been given to him; or

(d) the proof that he has committed or is convicted of such other offence is admissible evidence to show that he is guilty of the offence with which he is charged.’

The section imposes a blanket prohibition on questions tending to reveal the accused’s bad history which is lifted in certain exceptional circumstances. In England, subsection (d), which is more narrowly expressed than the substantive prohibition, is interpreted literally, so that the permission is not as absolute as the prohibition it supersedes. The construction adopted in South Africa, however, is not only more realistic, but also avoids many of the difficulties of applying to the literal construction which has given rise.

The Appellate Division has held that the substantive prohibition in section 228 must be read in the light of the common law, which in any event excludes evidence of other offences or previous misconduct by the accused unless relevant to the charge presently under investigation. In other words, the accused’s shield against cross-examination simply operates to prevent the putting of questions relevant only to his criminal disposition or propensity as evidence of such.

1 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36.
2 See above, p. 208 & 9.
3 Previously sec. 295 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, No. 31 of 1917.

See above, p. 208, 73-82.
disposition cannot be included as part of the State case against him. Where, however, his previous misconduct is relevant to show his guilt or to attack his credit, so that at common law evidence may be led of it, it may properly be questioned thereon. Subsection (d), so far from cutting down the scope of examination addressed to him, is in fact mere surplusage. Thus in R. v. Lipschitz, the accused denied the correctness of a police witness’s identification of him; he was cross-examined as to whether he had been searched two years previously by that police officer. Solomon J.A. pointing out that “the question was put not for the purpose of influencing the jury by bringing to their notice that the accused had been in trouble before, but for the purpose of testing his veracity, when he denied any knowledge of [the detective].” On charges of fraud, cross-examination will be allowed as to the accused’s previous false statements, as relevant to showing his dishonest intention. And in S. v. Mokena, the accused was cross-examined as to whether or not he had made an admission, notwithstanding that other offences were also thereby exposed. The prohibition may therefore be said to exclude cross-examination of the accused as to character solely where this is relevant to propensity alone. An acquittal on an earlier charge, or an unproved suspicion against the accused, is irrelevant to the issue of his present guilt.

It is explicitly recognized that the mere putting of the questions may prejudice the accused and the court should thereupon enjoin the accused of his right to refuse an answer. If the question is permitted, not only is the accused not obliged to respond, but if he does respond without objection his answers remain inadmissible. Whether the questions objected to fall under the purview of the prohibition in section 228 is tested objectively. “Tending to show” does not mean “intended by the prosecution to show.” The test is, “what was the true effect of the cross-examination, what would be conveyed to a reasonable body of jurymen?” In judging of this effect, regard may be had to the whole tenor of the examination and context of the questions.

---

1 Thus in R. v. Knolke, 1916 T.P.D. 472, questions showing the accused had been found in a brothel were disallowed. See above under Character Evidence, p. 466-73-80.
2 R. v. Lipschitz, 1921 A.D. 282 at 290.
4 1921 A.D. 282.
5 At 280. Had the accused not put the identification in issue by his denial, the cross-examination would have been inadmissible as his veracity on the point would not have been raised.
7 1947 (1) S.A. 440 (A.D.)
12 R. v. Mbakela, 1955 T.P.D. 107 at 109-10; R. v. Mbakela [1910] 2 K.B. 746 at 757. In England, because of the construction of the House of Lords has placed on the section: as excluding otherwise relevant examination, it was necessary for ‘tending to show’ to be given the meaning of ‘tending to reveal’ R. v. Jones [1962] 2 W.L.R. 575 (H.L.) at 584, 593, 599, so that if the accused’s bad character has already been touched on by the defence as being relevant to his innocence, he may be cross-examined further on what has been revealed. In his dissenting speech in Jones, Lord Devlin disapproved of the “vega rule which enables the prosecution to ask what Lord Devlin disapproved of at 534 of the ‘vega rule which enables the prosecution to ask what
The accused's shield against cross-examination not relevant to the issues is forfeited in the circumstances specified in provisos (a), (b), and (c) of section 228. Of these, proviso (c) is merely an example of similar fact evidence which has expressly been enacted to be relevant to the issue of guilt by sections 276 and 277 of the Criminal Code. The scope of cross-examination is not restricted by subsection (c) to the matters on which those sections permit evidence to be led, but since section 228 is to be applied subject to the ordinary rules of relevancy, it may be argued that it was not intended to broaden the range of permissible questioning to include matters on which no evidence could be given in chief.

Provisos (a) and (b) differ from proviso (c) in that they contemplate the suspension of the prohibition as a consequence of the conduct of the defence, though not necessarily as a purely procedural penalty. Three situations are covered.

(a) Where the accused has put his good character in issue. Normally evidence of the accused's bad character is inadmissible at the instance of the State. It is however always open to the accused to try to show his good character, to persuade the court either that his evidence should be believed or that he is unlikely to have committed the offence with which he is charged. Where he has done so, the prosecution may correct the misleading impressions he attempts to create by its own witnesses giving evidence in rebuttal, through cross-examination of the defence witnesses, and, under the first part of section 228(a), by cross-examination of the accused himself. On the wording of the provision, whether the accused has put forward claims of his good character depends on the intention with which the evidence is laid before the court. Where a witness volunteers an unsolicited tribute to the accused's character, it has not been put in issue by the defence so as to lay the accused open to cross-examination on it.

In Stirland v. D.P.P., Viscount Simon took the view that the accused's character is indivisible. If he says he is of good character in any respect, he can be cross-examined on the whole of his past record. A different view seems to have been expressed by Mason J. in R. v. Lipsitch, holding apparently that the test of relevancy applies to cross-examination under this heading as in the applicability of the substantive part of the section. The better view seems to be that where the accused lays claim to good character in any respect he may be cross-examined on all aspects of his character: both on those aspects related to the present charge as these are relevant to his guilt, and on the extraneous aspects as these are relevant to the credibility of his testimonial assertion of his virtue.

It is no disproof of good character that the accused was acquitted on a previous charge, or suspected but not tried, and he cannot be cross-examined on these incidents unless he has himself raised the incidents, in which case the permissible cross-examination would be directed to attacking his credit only.

---

Even where it has been so forfeited, it is only otherwise impermissible cross-examination which is then allowed, the prosecution does not become entitled to lead evidence of the accused's bad moral character to strengthen the State case: R. v. Balank, 1938 T.P.D. 427 at 429-30.

See below, p. 569. A.C. 315 (H.L.) at 326-7.

Reference to the accused's good character in his counsel's opening address does not amount to giving evidence of character: R. v. Ellis [1910] 2 K.B. 445 at 453.

The accused does not put his character in issue where he himself refers to his bad record. An example is R. v. Thompson, where he revealed his earlier trouble with the police, in connection with which his fine had not been paid, in order to explain the fact that he had run away when an officer had attempted to arrest him. On the other hand, if he refers to only one previous conviction when in fact he has several, he is in fact giving evidence of good character, and may ask about all.\(^2\)

(b) Imputations on the character of the complainant\(^2\) or prosecution witness.

Both in this case, and under proviso (b), section 233 apparently allows cross-examination of a kind that would not be permitted at common law, i.e. on specific misconduct (rather than bad reputation) to attack credibility even where this is not relevant to the issue of guilt and where good character is not in issue.\(^3\) Where the defence has made imputations on the character of the complainant or the prosecution witnesses, the accused may be cross-examined on his own character, to demonstrate to the jury the unreliability of the source of those imputations.\(^4\)

In England this branch of proviso (a) is also interpreted literally, so that the accused forfeits his shield by any imputation, even if necessarily made in the course of establishing his defence, but always subject to the court's discretion to exclude unfairly prejudicial cross-examination.\(^5\) In South Africa the position is not entirely clear.\(^6\) The general judicial consensus, however, seems to be that the accused does not forfeit his shield where the two conflicting versions are such that the defence version can only be accepted on the hypothesis that the State witnesses are lying—in the words of Greenberg J. in R. v. Hendricks, where the facts sought to be proved [by the defence] are an essential portion of the proof that the conduct of the accused is not criminal.\(^7\) Thus on a charge of assault, evidence of the complainant's undue familiarity with the accused's wife, though a slur on the former's character, was obviously inextricable from the issue of provocation and thus did not lay the accused open to character cross-examination,\(^8\) In R. v. Du Preez, a defence insistence that uncut diamonds had been 'planted' by the police witnesses was held not to bring proviso (c) into operation, even

---

\(^{21}\) [1966] 1 All E.R. 505 (C.C.A.).

\(^{23}\) The statute uses the English term 'prosecutor', the equivalent in our procedure being the complainant. See R. v. Klopper and Roodt, 1940 (3) S.A. 607 (W) at 614.

\(^{25}\) This is so even where the imputations were made on the character of a prosecution witness whose evidence does not implicate the accused: S. v. Nieuwoudt (2), 1938 (1) S.A. 612 (W) at 614.

\(^{26}\) The court's discretion will not always be exercised in favour of the accused, as fairness to the prosecution is a factor to be taken into account: R. v. Selvey (1958) 2 All E.R. 497 (H.L.) at 506, 513. For a survey of the preceding case law, see Florence O'Donoghue, Imputations on the Character of Prosecution Witnesses (1956) 29 Mod. L.R. 483.

though this contained a necessary implication of an allegation of perjury or conspiracy to commit perjury. It follows that an indignant denial of the State evidence, even by alleging it is all lies, is to be treated merely as ‘pleading not guilty with emphasis’.

In R. v. Du Free, Tindall J.

8 distinguished the facts of that case from those in R. v. Dunkley,

9 where a Crown witness had been asked about her bias against the accused because he had been instrumental in her brother’s conviction, and R. v. Jones,

10 where it was alleged that the police had fabricated a confession by the accused. In both cases the learned Judge of Appeal would have permitted the accused to be cross-examined as to character (as the respective courts in fact had done). It seems to be a fair inference from this that the well-established categories of relevance should be applied to section 228(a). Entirely extraneous abuse would in any event be excluded as irrelevant. To be allowed at all, the defence evidence must, therefore, be relevant either to the issues in the case (i.e. to the accused’s guilt or innocence), or to the weight of the State evidence, or to the admissibility of that evidence. Dunkley’s case is an example of the second category, and Jones’s case of the third. On this analysis, therefore, it is only imputations falling into the first category of relevance which do not bring proviso (a) into operation. But where the attack on the prosecution witnesses is relevant solely to their credit, or to the admissibility of the evidence they produce, then the defence is making imputations on their characters within the meaning of the section, and the way is clear for the unrestricted cross-examination of the accused.

Imputations on the character of persons not testifying for the State, such as the deceased in a murder charge, do not bring proviso (c) into operation.

If the same counsel is representing several of the accused persons in the same trial, he should intimate to the court, the prosecutor and the attacked witness on behalf of which accused the imputation is being launched, so that the other accused will remain protected by their section 228 shield.

(c) Giving evidence against a co-accused. Where the accused gives evidence against a co-accused, to deprive the latter of the right to cross-examine as to character would be to fetter his ordinary right to defend himself by discrediting those persons who have testified against him.

13 In this case it is immaterial

---

10 With whom Courtnay J.A. concurred (at 593). The judgment of Watmeyer J.A. is, it is submitted, not inconsistent with the analysis which follows above.

14 Subject to the court’s overruling discretion to exclude prejudicial evidence. See above, p. 980.

15 R. v. Blyth [1926] I.K.B. 213 (C.A.). The imputations in this case were in any event relevant to establishing the defence.

17 Proviso (b) would not allow cross-examination of an accused person where not he but his solicitor have given evidence against the co-accused. In this case, it is the credit of those witnesses which may call for attack. One co-accused may always cross-examine another on the issues but as he may cross-examine any witness who has been called and sworn (cf. R. v. Zareer, 1937 A.D. 242 at 250; S. v. Longa, 1961 (4) S.A. 941 (N)); R. v. Turkhan, 1917 T.P.D. 865 and 1937 A.D. 242 at 250; S. v. Longa, 1961 (4) S.A. 941 (N); *R. v.                                    19 S.A.F.L. 310; the prohibition in sec. 228 intervenes only to prevent cross-examination of any accused as to credibility, unless proviso (b) applies.
whether the attack be made as an essential part of the defence of the attacking accused or as incidental thereto.\textsuperscript{46} Nor is the intention in making the attack of moment, whether it is born of 'pained reluctance or malevolent eagerness'.\textsuperscript{47} An accused thus attacked must have equal means ofdiscrediting the attacker, whether prosecution witness or defence witness, but such character cross-examination in the latter case has no bearing on the guilt or innocence of the co-accused since the general exclusion of propensity evidence continues.\textsuperscript{48}

Evidence 'against' a co-accused was said in \textit{Murdoch v. Taylor}\textsuperscript{49} to mean 'evidence which supports the prosecution case in a material respect or which undermines the defence of the co-accused'—for example, if one accused destroys the alibi put forward by his co-accused.\textsuperscript{50} Where this occurs, the wording of proviso (b) draws no distinction between cross-examination of the accused at the instance of the prosecution, and cross-examination at the instance of the co-accused. In the former case, the House of Lords in \textit{Murdoch v. Taylor} considered that the court retains a discretion to refuse it in the interests of maintaining the fairness of the trial.\textsuperscript{51} This would be consistent with equity and logic, as from this point of view the liability to cross-examination is still incurred as a procedural penalty. But in that case no discretion was allowed to exclude the co-accused from cross-examining— he may do so as of right. The same conclusion is also implied by Van den Heever J.A.'s express rejection, in \textit{R. v. Bagas},\textsuperscript{52} of this situation as involving a procedural penalty. Such a result is not, however, without its dangers.

A compromise view\textsuperscript{53} would allow cross-examination of one accused as of right only where his evidence 'against' his co-accused falls into the second branch of Lord Donovan's definition, in other words where he has in some way undermined his co-accused's defence (as was in fact the position in \textit{Murdoch v. Taylor}). Where he has not done so, has not obstructed his co-accused's avenue of escape, but has only supplemented or strengthened the prosecution case against his co-accused, to deny the court discretion to refuse cross-examination would be to defeat the underlying purpose of section 228. That underlying purpose is surely to protect both accused as far as possible, rather than to expose one to the possibility of prejudice where the other's opportunity to establish his defence remains unblocked.

Where the accused gives evidence against his accomplice who has for some reason not been charged,\textsuperscript{54} or against a co-accused who is not charged with the \begin{footnotesize}

\begin{itemize}
\item \textsuperscript{46} \textit{R. v. Bagas}, 1952 (1) S.A. 431 (A.D.), but in accordance with the general rules of relevance the attack would have to be relevant either to the issue of guilt or of veracity.
\item \textsuperscript{47} Per Lord Morris of Borth-y-Gest in \textit{Murdoch v. Taylor} (1965) 1 All E.R. 406 (H.L.) at 409.
\item \textsuperscript{48} \textit{R. v. Bagas}, 1952 (1) S.A. 437 (A.D.) at 441.
\item \textsuperscript{49} [1965] 1 All E.R. 406 (H.L.) at 416, per Lord Donovan. At 409, Lord Morris of Borth-y-Gest defined it as 'positive evidence [ignoring anything casual or trivial] given by the witness which would rationally have to be included in any survey or summary of the evidence in a case which, if accepted, would warrant a conviction of the "other person charged with the same offence"'. There does not seem to be any difference in effect between this and the test enunciated by Lord Donovan.
\item \textsuperscript{50} \textit{R. v. Masina}, 1932 E.D.L. 108.
\item \textsuperscript{51} See also \textit{R. v. Thompson} (1965) 1 All E.R. 305 (C.C.A.) at 308.
\item \textsuperscript{52} 1952 (1) S.A. 437 (A.D.) at 439-40.
\item \textsuperscript{53} This was prompted by the note on \textit{Murdoch v. Taylor} in [1965] 1 New Zealand University L.R. 547.
\item \textsuperscript{54} \textit{R. v. Masina}, 1926 O.P.D. 1.
\end{itemize} \end{footnotesize} same offence, the terms of the proviso are not met and character cross-examination remains inadmissible.

Judicial Discretion under section 228. Even where the accused has in some way brought into operation one of the exceptions to the prohibition contained in section 228, the court retains its general discretion in criminal trials to exclude technically admissible cross-examination where its reception would prejudice the accused unduly in relation to its usefulness (subject to what has been said above in relation to proviso (b)).

This judicial discretion has as its corollary the duty resting on counsel for the prosecution to intimate to the judge in advance his intention of cross-examining the accused as to character, to enable a ruling on the point to be given in the absence of the jury. Where the examination is allowed, prosecuting counsel should exercise the utmost restraint and avoid any detrimental references in so far as is compatible with the fair presentation of his case. Where the character cross-examination is to be conducted at the instance of a co-accused, counsel for the defence should subject himself to the same restraint as counsel for the prosecution; and an intention to attack the character of a co-accused, in cross-examination or otherwise, should where possible be communicated to the latter's counsel in advance to enable him to consider whether any objection will be taken.

The accused and his witnesses should not be trapped or misled by the opposing cross-examiner into statements which will result in the shield being lost, and defence counsel should be warned when the conduct of the defence veers towards incurring a forfeiture of the shield.

2. Privilege against self-incrimination

A witness is not obliged to answer any questions if he would have been excused from answering in the Supreme Court of Judicature in England because his answer might tend to expose him to 'any pain, penalty, punishment or forfeiture, or to a criminal charge, or to degrade his character'.

Historically, this protection evolved in response to a revaluation against Star Chamber methods, but the rationale advanced for its retention today far transcends its origins. In the words of Warren C.J. in the United States Supreme Court:

"the privilege against self-incrimination—the essential mainstay of our adversary system—is founded on a complex of values... [it] points to one overriding thought: the constitutional foundation underlying the privilege is the respect a government... must accord to the dignity and integrity of its citizens. To maintain a "fair State-individual balance".

---

89 R. v. Kilner and Robinson, 1943 (3) S.A. 807 [W], cap. at 823. The exercise of the discretion is discussed by Livesey in [Cambridge L.J. 299].
95 The substitution of this phrase by 'the thirty-first day of May, 1955', by sec. 20 of the Act, No. 92 of 1953, has in substance left the law unchanged. See above, p. 668-3 96 Sec. 234 of the Criminal Procedure Act, No. 56 of 1953.
to require the government 'to shoulder the entire load'... to respect the inviolability of the human personality, our accusatory system of criminal justice demands that the government seeking to punish an individual produce the evidence against him by its own independent labours, rather than by the cruel, simple expedient of compelling it from his own mouth."68

It has also been suggested that the existence of the privilege is necessary to encourage persons to come forward and testify freely, but it is no doubt because of the constitutional importance of the privilege that statutory encroachments on it are to be narrowly construed.69 However, in South Africa today, the scope of these erasures has expanded to prejudice or much of its significance.

The right to withhold an incriminatory answer is not available to an accused person who has chosen to see evidence on his own behalf, in so far as concerns his inculpating himself in the offence charged.70 (As far as concerns other offences he has committed, see discussion of section 228 of the Code above.)71 Nor, in terms of section 254 of the Code,72 can the privilege be claimed by persons whom the prosecutor believes to be accomplices, or by persons whom he believes may incriminate themselves of an offence he specifies; answers thus compelled, if orally given to the satisfaction of the court, entitle the witness to an indemnity against himself being prosecuted for that offence, and are inadmissible against him at any subsequent trial for that offence.73 If he is charged with any other offence perhaps arising out of the same facts, it is not clear whether his incriminatory evidence remains inadmissible against him, but since the legislature apparently felt it necessary to provide expressly to permit its use for the purpose of a charge of perjury,74 the maxim expressio nullius est exclusio alterius would presumably apply to prevent its being wielded against him for any other purpose. The protection once extended to him should not be circumvented by the device of a different but factually related charge.

The pains and penalties which will entitle a witness to invoke the privilege do not include civil liabilities;75 and the protection against questions "tending to degrade his character" has apparently very little meaning today, as it is accepted that a witness may be broadly cross-examined as to character for the purpose of attacking his credit.76 There are a few situations where forfeitures still exist77 and in respect of these, though they are rare, the privilege is claimable.

The existence of the privilege does not entitle a witness to refuse to take the oath on the ground that any evidence he might possibly give may expose him to 68 See S. v. Cameron, 1962 (1) S.A. 497 (T) at 501.

72 As laid down in the proviso to sec. 234.
73 See pp. 800-806, 140-415.
75 A statement by the prosecutor to the effect that the State has information that a witness is an accomplice was held to satisfy this provision, since the prosecutor is the representative of the State in the trial, in S. v. Govender, 1967 (2) S.A. 121 (N).
76 See sec. 234, Secs. 234 and 235 are discussed under "Compellability", above, p. 666, n. 2.
77 The proviso to sec. 235.
78 See sec. 231. c.g.r.
80 Examples are sec. 19 and 20 of the South African Citizenship Act, No. 44 of 1949; sec. 12 of the Suppression of Communism Act, No. 44 of 1956; sec. 30(3) of the Criminal Procedure Act, No. 36 of 1939; sec. 36 and 41 of the Group Areas Act, No. 36 of 1966.
In S. v. Lucane the Appellate Division held that the presiding judicial officer has a duty as a matter of practice to warn a witness, whenever he seems about to incriminate himself, that he is entitled to decline to answer. The prosecutor is under a corresponding duty to warn the court when the answer to a proposed question may have this result. A failure to warn the witness will not necessarily render the exculpatory evidence inadmissible against him subsequently, but may well do so if it is in fact not known that he could have claimed privilege.

Where a witness claims the privilege on oath, the court is not bound to accept his view of the likelihood of incrimination. He must disclose the grounds of his apprehension so that the judge or magistrate may determine for himself that the witness's danger is not an imaginary or unsubstantial one. A noble praetor offered by the attorney-general has been held to render the fear of prosecution unreal, but a mere promise not to prosecute, which is supported only by the goodwill of the prosecutor, is insufficient. A witness's fear that he would be deprived of his liquor licence was held to be unsubstantial in the light of the evidence sought from him, in Ramsay v. Attorney-General for the Transvaal and the likelihood of restrictions being imposed on the witness in terms of the Prevention of Communism Act, 1920, did not enable him to claim the privilege successfully in S. v. Cameron again on the ground of the relative's trivial information asked for. However, Lindor's view, in the latter case, that the witness could not claim the privilege because the evidence had already shown him to be guilty of an offence, cannot be supported in view of the Appellate Division's pronouncement in R. v. Mabizela that as the witness alone can know the nature and extent to which he may be incriminated, the choice whether he is prepared to jeopardize himself further should be left to him.

Notes and References

20. It cannot be claimed in argument, S. v. Parentman, 1961 (3) S.A. 868 (T) at 871.
21. 1926 (3) S.A. 433 (A.D.) at 439-44; and see R. v. Ramotlo, 1919 T.P.D. 305.
23. There is no such duty on a court in England today, since the knowledge of the right has penetrated throughout the population. In South Africa this has not yet occurred, as both judges in Lucane's case emphasised, and the prosecution thus afforded to any ignorant witness very necessary. See Professor C. H. Schmidt in 1960 T.H.R. H.R. 957.
24. Cf. Minnaar v. Ariston, 38 S.A. 436 (1939) at 466-9, where Warren C.J. said, "Assumptions of the knowledge of the defendant possessed, based on information as to his age, education, intelligence or other contacts with authorities, can never be more than speculation. A warning at the time of the interrogations is indispensable to overcome its prejudices and to inform the suspect that he has the right to remain silent. The burden of proof in such a case is upon the prosecution that anything said can of the right to remain silent must be accompanied by the explanation that anything said in the presence of the authorities, and will not be used against the individual in court. ... It is only through an awareness of these consequences that there can be any assurance of real understanding and intelligent exercise of the privilege."
29. 1960 (3) S.A. 437 (T) at 442.
30. 1960 (3) S.A. 437 (T) at 442.
3. Professional privilege

The attorney-client privilege, the oldest of the privileges recognized by the law of evidence, has as its object the encouragement of members of the public to consult freely and candidly with their legal advisers, without fear that what is said in the course of consultation can be used against them. The privilege, therefore, is that of the client not of the lawyer. In its present form, the privilege is enshrined in section 232 of the Criminal Procedure Act, which refers, for the privilege attaching to legal advisers, to the law as administered in England.

Inevitably, it seems, some degree of disclosure is unavoidable if the witness is to convince the court of the justice of his refusal, particularly where the question or answer is not directly incriminatory but may constitute a necessary link for establishing the chain of his criminal responsibility. It must be conceded that the proper administration of justice could hardly allow a witness's invocation of the privilege to be final in itself without some investigation of its basis.

Broadly stated, all confidential communications, oral or documentary, passing between the client and his legal adviser acting in a professional capacity (and including their respective agents and intermediaries) are privileged from disclosure.

In every case a question of fact whether the occasion and context was indeed a professional and confidential one. For example, the client does not normally give his address to his attorney in confidence, though circumstances are conceivable where he might have done so, but the mere fact that the attorney would not have been in possession of the information had the professional relationship not existed is in no way conclusive. The fact that the attorney has been instructed to act for the client is not confidential, nor are the client's instructions to negotiate a settlement or the contents of an order of court communicated by the attorney to the client.

In ascertaining whether the legal adviser at the time the communication was made was acting in a professional capacity, such factors as whether he received a fee, the place where the consultation was held, and the surrounding circumstances generally may be looked at. Communications to an attorney who is acting in another capacity would not be privileged, e.g., where he is acting as a rent-collector, insurance agent, deputy-sheriff, or confidential friend.

Once it has been established that the occasion was indeed a confidential and a professional one, all communications passing between the lawyer and the client are privileged from disclosure. It is not necessary that the consultations

---

Footnotes:

90 Moffit v. South African Breweries, Ltd., 1912 W.L.D. 104 at 105; Schonberg v. Attorney-General of the Transvaal, 1936 W.L.D. 59 at 64. In Helenus v. Mossel and Barlow, Ltd., (S.A. 160 (W)) it was held that the privilege is not overridden by particular statutory provisions requiring information to be disclosed, unless so expressed.
91 S. v. Mossel, 1969 (1) S.A. 630 (C).
92 e.g., Nathan v. Anderson (N.O.), 1939 W.L.D. 12 at 18, 23. As to the client's giving his name in confidence, see Dite v. Attorney-General, 1936 N.P.D. 345.
95 Vardon v. Deman, 1930 E.D.L. 263.
96 See K. v. Foscher, 1933 (1) S.A. 440 (W); and, generally, Greenough v. Gaskell (1833) I.M. & K. 58. were in connection with litigation; any matter on which legal advice is sought will raise the privilege, both as to facts and as to statements or documents, and not only for the client's revelations but also for the attorney's or counsel's opinion which is in consequence forthcoming. The communications need not have been strictly relevant to the matter on which legal advice was sought, as long as they are 'fairly referable' to the professional relationship. Nor need they have had no additional purpose or contained no collateral matter, as long as the main purpose related to the obtaining or furnishing of legal advice. A statement made so as initially to attract the privilege continues to do so even after the attorney's employment has been terminated, and whether or not that employment related to the particular matter now being adjudicated. The privilege extends apparently only to the contents of the communication, not to the fact that it was made; but the fact that particular matters were not imparted to the legal adviser should be regarded as privileged.

Where the communication is not one passing directly between attorney and client but is obtained by or from a third party, the privilege has a narrower scope.
It covers only statements obtained for submission to the legal adviser in anticipation of litigation, whether on the attorney's initiative or on the client's. Thus ordinary routine reports from an agent to his principal are not privileged, even if they are subsequently used for instructing a solicitor, unless the legal adviser is himself the agent, as in Claremont Union College v. Cape Town City Council, where he was an official of the defendant municipality. Nor does the privilege apply to information regarding a collision given by an insured driver to his statutory third-party insurers, if this is done simply in pursuance of his contract with them.

If the communication was obtained for the purpose of taking legal advice, the privilege is unaffected even though it is not thereafter in fact used for that Midkeldorf v. Zipper N.C., 1947 (1) S.A. 342 (S.R.) 1; S. v. Green, 1952 (2) S.A. 399 (Q);

S. v. Kearney, 1954 (2) S.A. 499 (Q) at 500.
[2] Estate Ramsey v. Union Govt. (Minister of Railways and Harbours), 1912 C.P.D. 1012 at 1017.
[3] Per Backmaster C.J. in Minten v. Pries (1938) A.C. 558 (H.L.) at 566; R v. Fonck, 1953
180 at 184; S. v. Chuma, 1958 (3) S.A. 392 (R.A.D.).
S. v. Meintjies, 1949 (1) S.A. 658 (Q).
N.O., 1912 C.P.D. 127 at 137; Ralston v. African Banking Corp. Ltd., 1912 C.P.D. 729 at 730-9.
Co., Ltd. (1906) 27 N.L.R. 410 at 412; Bell v. Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York(1905)
25 S.C. 421; Estate Ramsey v. Union Govt. (Minister of Railways and Harbours), 1912 C.P.D.
1012 at 1016; Leo v. Barclays Bank, 1931 T.P.D. 153; United Tobacco Company (South) Ltd.
v. International Tobacco Company of S.A. Ltd., 1955 (1) S.A. 66 (C) at 70. was upheld for communications passing between co-trustees where one of them was also acting as solicitor for the others.
The privilege is the privilege of the client himself, not of the attorney. The latter may not withhold the information if the client wishes it disclosed, and if the client chooses not to waive the privilege he can refuse disclosure by himself, his agents or his legal advisor. (Naturally, no privilege can be set up against persons who have a joint interest with the client in the subject.

- International Tobacco Co. (S.A.) Ltd. v. United Tobacco Companies (South) Ltd., (3) 1953 (4) S.A. 251 (W) at 255; Batchle Dairy (Pty.) Ltd. v. Auto Protection Insurance Co., Ltd., 1962 (2) S.A. 408 (C) at 410.
- International Tobacco Co. (S.A.) Ltd. v. United Tobacco Companies (South) Ltd., (3) 1955 (2) S.A. 1 (W) at 10.
- S. v. Dunkle v. Colonial Govt. (1909) 26 S.C. 347. Documents prepared in connexion with foreign legal proceedings, before the domestic proceedings were contemplated, were held to be privileged in R. v. Duncan [1868] 2 All E.R. 365.
- Golding's case, above, at 507; Caldwell v. Western Assurance Co., Ltd., 1916 W.L.D. 114 at 115.
- In United Tobacco Companies (South) Ltd. v. International Tobacco Co. of S.A., Ltd., 1931 (1) S.A. 65 (W.) at 72. matter of the communication, as would co-conspirators or party. Where, however, the information obtained from an outsider who is not the agent of the client, the scope of the privilege is narrower; while the communication remains privileged in the hands of the attorney, his client or the latter's agents, the third party himself cannot be prevented from disclosing it (though the third party cannot invoke the privilege if the attorney's client does so). Similarly, if the information has come into the hands of the opponent, even if by improper means, it is admissible.

Because, too, the privilege is the client's information or documents which would not have been privileged in his hands do not become immune from disclosure simply by being handed to an attorney. Thus in R. v. Davies, as the business records kept by the client were not privileged, when they came into the attorney's custody he was simply an agent to possess and could claim no greater privilege than his principal. For this reason, too, it follows that where no attorney is acting, statements and documents are protected in a litigant's hands to the same extent as if he had employed an attorney, so that, e.g., witnesses' statements in the hands of the police or prosecutor need not be disclosed. The privilege does not operate to relieve a witness claiming it from taking the stand at all. He must be sworn to before he can claim the privilege if and when particular questions infringing it are asked of him.

Despite the public policy in favour of frankness in the legal professional relationship, the existence of the privilege is undoubtedly an obstacle to the free investigation of the truth. In order, therefore, to prevent its abuse, the proviso to section 232 states that there is no privilege where the legal advice was sought before the criminal conduct was embarked on, i.e. in furtherance of an illegal purpose. Where the legal adviser participates in such a purpose he has ceased to act in a professional capacity, whether or not he is aware of his client's illegitimate objects, and accordingly no privilege obtains. The onus of proof is on the

---

60 Case v. Joffe, N.O., 1949 (1) S.A. 73 (T).
61 International Tobacco Co. of S.A., Ltd. v. United Tobacco Company (South East), 1953 (3) S.A. 739 (W). The decision in the former is to be found in 21 L.S.J. 304 (D), which clearly wrong; see Annual Survey of South African Law, 1956 D. 515.
64 1956 (3) S.A. 52 (A.D.) esp. at 59-60, 74-; See, also, Holman, Ministers and Barristers (2) S.A. 160 at 164.
65 R. v. Brumfit, 1956 (2) S.A. 336 (A.D.) at 344. Note, however, that where there is a significant disparity between a witness's statement and his evidence to the contrary, it is the invariable duty of the prosecutor to bring such disparity to the attention of the court, and in the normal course of duties to the defence. See Ex parte Minister of Justice: Ex. v. S. v. Wagner, 1955 (3) S.A. 280 (A.D.)
66 Ditto v. Additional Assistant Magistrate, 1931 W.L.D. 100; Andrews v. Minister of Justice, 1934 (2) S.A. 472 (N) at 476.
67 The tendency was, as a result, to construe it strictly. Thus Lord C.J. in Broad v. Finlay, 172 E.R. 1142 at 1146: "The privilege is an anomaly, and ought not to be extended." More recently, however, the privilege has come to receive more generous treatment. See Seabrook v. Bruitish Transport Commission (1959) 2 A.R.E.R. 1 at 19-20, where Heaver, J., using the evolution, dates the change as having occurred about 1913.
68 R. v. Car and Miller (1866) 24 Q.B.D. 123; Schaffberg v. Attorney-General of the Evacuation, 1936 W.L.D. 59 at 64; Ditto v. Attorney-General, 1936 N.P. 345 at 353-354; as to evacuation for the purpose of the war, see Bullen v. Attorney-General for Victoria (1918) A.C. 196, and (1957) 24 Mod. L.R. 10 at 35 ff.
The attorney-client privilege is the only professional privilege recognized in our law. None extends to the confidential relationship between physician and patient, priest and penitent, accountant and client, or between a journalist and his sources of information. A banker has no privilege for his books at common law, but is given a limited privilege by section 266 of the Criminal Procedure Act, which entitles him to withhold disclosure unless production is specially ordered by the court.

4. Privilege for income tax matters

Section 4(1) of the Income Tax Act, 1962, imposes a duty of secrecy on all persons employed in carrying out the provisions of that Act with regard to matters coming to their knowledge in the performance of their duties. These matters are not to be divulged except to the taxpayer concerned or his lawful representatives, unless the performance of the official's duties under the Act requires disclosure or it is required by order of a competent court. The purpose of the provision is the encouragement of full disclosure to the fiscal authorities who are enabled to retain the confidence of those supplying information to them by the protecting veil of secrecy, but this covers only the contents of documents not the fact that such were made.

The taxpayer is entitled to compel the revenue department to produce his returns, assessments, etc., in a court of law, but no other party has a right to their production. The court has a discretion to order production for the benefit of or at the instance of someone other than the taxpayer, but will not easily be persuaded to do so. However, disclosure was ordered, as not only was the information required four years old, but the taxpayer concerned had since died, so that even if it had incriminated him no punitive consequences could have followed; and in Union Government v. Shi, Rumpff J. exercised his discretion in favour of granting an application by the Commissioner for Inland Revenue to divulge the contents of income tax documents, where the Commissioner was the petitioning creditor in a sequestration application.

Since disclosure by the revenue officials is allowed in the performance of their duties under the Act, and since for them to assist in the prosecution of persons alleging the exclusion of the privilege to give prima facie proof of the illegality. Naturally, the proviso to section 232 does not affect the privilege of a client who has sought out his lawyer for the legitimate purpose of being defended upon a criminal charge against him in respect of acts already committed.

The attorney-client privilege is the only professional privilege recognized in our law. None extends to the confidential relationship between physician and patient, priest and penitent, accountant and client, or between a journalist and his sources of information. A banker has no privilege for his books at common law, but is given a limited privilege by section 266 of the Criminal Procedure Act, which entitles him to withhold disclosure unless production is specially ordered by the court.

4. Privilege for income tax matters

Section 4(1) of the Income Tax Act, 1962, imposes a duty of secrecy on all persons employed in carrying out the provisions of that Act with regard to matters coming to their knowledge in the performance of their duties. These matters are not to be divulged except to the taxpayer concerned or his lawful representatives, unless the performance of the official's duties under the Act requires disclosure or it is required by order of a competent court. The purpose of the provision is the encouragement of full disclosure to the fiscal authorities who are enabled to retain the confidence of those supplying information to them by the protecting veil of secrecy, but this covers only the contents of documents not the fact that such were made.

The taxpayer is entitled to compel the revenue department to produce his returns, assessments, etc., in a court of law, but no other party has a right to their production. The court has a discretion to order production for the benefit of or at the instance of someone other than the taxpayer, but will not easily be persuaded to do so. However, disclosure was ordered, as not only was the information required four years old, but the taxpayer concerned had since died, so that even if it had incriminated him no punitive consequences could have followed; and in Union Government v. Shi, Rumpff J. exercised his discretion in favour of granting an application by the Commissioner for Inland Revenue to divulge the contents of income tax documents, where the Commissioner was the petitioning creditor in a sequestration application.

Since disclosure by the revenue officials is allowed in the performance of their duties under the Act, and since for them to assist in the prosecution of persons alleging the exclusion of the privilege to give prima facie proof of the illegality. Naturally, the proviso to section 232 does not affect the privilege of a client who has sought out his lawyer for the legitimate purpose of being defended upon a criminal charge against him in respect of acts already committed.

The attorney-client privilege is the only professional privilege recognized in our law. None extends to the confidential relationship between physician and patient, priest and penitent, accountant and client, or between a journalist and his sources of information. A banker has no privilege for his books at common law, but is given a limited privilege by section 266 of the Criminal Procedure Act, which entitles him to withhold disclosure unless production is specially ordered by the court.
charged with contraventions of the Act are part of those duties, otherwise secret information may be furnished by such officials both to the prosecuting authorities and to the court. 44

The privilege created by the Income Tax Act extends only to the officials employed under it, so that the taxpayer himself cannot claim to have a privilege under section 4(1), but would have to bring his refusal to produce his income tax returns, assessments, etc., under one of the other headings of privilege if he can, by invoking, for example, the protection against self-incrimination. 45

5. Marital privilege

The only other confidential relationship which gives rise to a legally recognized privilege is the marital one, where the importance of protecting the mutual trust and confidence of the spouses overrides the inconvenience to the administration of justice.

Section 229(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act provides that a witness may refuse to disclose communications made by his or her spouse during the subsistence of the marriage. A person whose marriage has been dissolved or annulled by a competent court can claim the privilege for anything occurring during the marriage before its dissolution or annulment. 46 If, however, the marriage was dissolved by death rather than by order of court, the privilege ceases. 47

The prototype of section 229(1), which was section 16(1) of the English Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, 48 was said in Shenton v. Tyler to confer a privilege on the testifying spouse alone, who alone may elect to waive it and divulge the communication. In the United States, on the other hand, the privilege is said to be that of the communicating spouse, who may therefore prevent the testifying spouse from speaking to it. 49 The solution imposed by our Criminal Code is an amalgamation of these two views, since section 230 provides that a testifying spouse can claim any privilege his or her spouse could have claimed. Thus the witness may refuse to answer questions which would incriminate the spouse, or would reflect on the character or previous convictions of the spouse who is the accused. 50 The witness may invoke the professional privilege for communications made by the spouse to him or her presence to the former's legal adviser, and the privilege contained in section 229(1) to withhold disclosure of communications made by the witness to his or her spouse.

Where the communication between the spouses has reached an outsider, he 44 R. v. Kessis, 1950 (4) S.A. 522 (A.D.) at 527-8, per Oosthuizen J.A.

46 Sec. 229(2) of the Criminal Procedure Act.
47 Shenton v. Tyler (1939) 2 All E.R. 877 (C.A.), 848-9, Cfr. 8 Wigmore, Evidence, § 2241 (McNaughten v. R. (1961), from which it seems that in the United States the privilege does not terminate on either death or divorce.
48 61 & 62 Vict., c. 56.
49 (1939) 2 All E.R. 877 (C.A.) at 833, per Greene M.R.
50 See Wigmore, op. cit., § 2240.
51 Sec. 234, Cf. Lady Jev's Trial (1684) 10 St. Tr. 552 at 565.
52 Sec. 228; R. v. Bishop, 1953 (2) P.H.R., H. 134 (R).
53 The authority at the point so far has concerned cases where the spouses both consulted the adviser as client; e.g. Harris v. Harris (1931) P. 16, but presumably sec. 230 would cover the case where only one of them is the client.
may testify to it even against their will. Thus in R. v. Nelson, a letter written to a woman by her husband while he was in gaol awaiting trial, was intercepted by a prison warder before delivery to her. The contents of the letter were held to be admissible. The same would apply where a conversation between spouses is overheard by a third person.

II. PRIVILEGED INFORMATION

Evidence will be excluded where its reception would be contrary to the interests of the State, 'on grounds of public policy and from regard to public interest'.

This is an absolute privilege in the sense that where it applies no witness can testify to the matter covered (except, under the proviso to section 233 of the Criminal Code, where the disclosure of the information itself constituted an offense); for example, if it is claimed to justify the withholding of documents, no secondary or circumstantial evidence of their contents may be given, even if they have been disclosed inadvertently such evidence remains inadmissible unless the reasons for secrecy have thereby fallen away. Where the privilege is not claimed by the State, it lies in the discretion of the court as to whether it should be treated as having been waived.

As in all cases where the question of privilege arises, counsel may argue the matter for the assistance of the court, but its invocation or waiver may have nothing to do with the parties themselves, as the privilege applies with equal vigour regardless of whether or not the State is a party to the action.

Section 29 of the General Law Amendment Act, No. 101 of 1969, provides that evidence shall be excluded on the mere production to the court of a certificate signed by a Minister of State or other person authorized to do so by the Prime Minister and stating that the signatory is of the opinion that the giving of the evidence 'will be prejudicial to the interests of the State or public security'. This provision was clearly designed to reverse the extensive overhaul to which the whole field of State privilege had immediately before been subjected by the Appellate Division in Van der Lade v. Colitz. It is difficult to imagine that many cases will in the future arise where the simple expedient and total finality of the certificate will not be resorted to. However, as the provision itself expressly preserves the pre-existing law where not inconsistent, the common-law privilege as set out in the case up to the time of the Act will be disclaimed, as being of at least historical significance. It should be borne in mind that the exclusory rule in this regard should as far as possible be less strictly applied in criminal cases than in civil trials.18

As common law privilege policy was held to be that the interests of the State would be adversely affected by the disclosure of matters relating to national security,19 including the maintenance of good diplomatic relations;20 matters of high policy;21 the propriety functioning of the public service;22 and the efficient detection of crime.23 However, the more fact that the communications are made to high officials of the executive does not mean that they will automatically be privileged regardless of content,24 nor is it sufficient that the communications are official ones or of administrative moment25 even if they were made in confidence,26 unless perhaps if made in pursuance of a duty imposed by law.27 The protection from disclosure afforded by parliamentary proceedings, which may give rise to questions of admissibility, is extensively regulated by statute and need not be considered here.28 mentioned are distinguished only procedurally from cases where ordinary ‘administrative’ privilege is claimed, see (1985) 61 L.Q.R. 361. The generalised common-law privilege in Israel is discussed in (1958) 3 Israel L.R. 271.

19 As the plant of a military submarine, in wartime, see Jackson v. Cudmore, Lord, above; Creasy v. Rimer, above. See also Angle v. R. (1939) 30 N.L.R. 197.

20 Privilege has been granted to a high commissioner’s letters to his government (Howe & Son Ltd. v. Chief, 1955) 2 R.R. 291; and see Creasy v. Rimer, 5186, at 101, 1953, but in R. v. A. D. B., 1908 C.T. 181, Cudmore J. expressed doubt as to whether the terms applied to a secret.

22 As letters of complaint against an official addressed by a number of the public to the Minister, the disclosure of which might prevent complaints being made and therefore about being effective. Rudderigh v. Golder, 1956 (2 S.A. 158 (W.) and Rudderigh v. Minister of Justice, 1981 (1) T.P.D. 661 at 679. But cf. Van der Lede v. Catter, 1967 (2) S.A. 379 (A.T.) at 386.

23 as R. v. Peake, 1969 (4) S.A. 181 (C.), where privilege was found not to apply; and see in another context, the subject of the charge had been recorded, see, for example v. Ranner (1958) 5 All E.R. 396; R. v. Acaster, 1960 (3) C.P. 221 at 222.

28 Van der Lede’s case, above, at 250. As 251 Sidney L.C. held that where the official had acted honestly and properly, he would probably be indemnified by the State against the costs against the State, which is an argument that, if the act complained was not of the purposes of State privilege, it can then apply. The fact that the defendant would be covered by the provisions of s. 105 of the State is not one of the purposes of State privilege but can be covered by the provisions of s. 105 of the State. The question of whether the defendant was covered by the provisions of s. 105 of the State is one of the purposes of State privilege but can be covered by the provisions of s. 105 of the State.
In England State interests can only be said to be affected where the central government is concerned. In South Africa, both central and provincial affairs may be covered, but, as in England, local authorities and other official organizations cannot claim privilege for their concerns.

The privilege may be claimed not only on account of the particular contents of the communication, but also where, although the contents of the communication may happen to be innocuous, the communication belongs to a particular class which should be immune from disclosure. In both cases the privilege must be claimed, not by the political head of the department of State concerned, (in the case of provincial matters the political head is the Administrator), but only if this is not possible for any reason—which must be explained—may the claim be made by the permanent head of the department. The deponent must state that he has himself inspected the documents and is of the opinion that the disclosure of its contents would adversely affect the interests of the State. In so claiming the Minister should not weigh the need for the information in the particular thing he is stating not in a judicial but in an administrative capacity.

A blanket privilege cannot be claimed for a number of files of documents. The Minister must consider each one individually when it is asked for or tendered. Formal and not documentary evidence is concerned, objections to the subpoenaing of a witness are incompetent for the same reason.

The affidavit under the common law must describe the nature of the communication and, if this is not obvious, the prejudice to the public interest which might result from disclosure, so that the court is put in a position to decide whether or not the claim for privilege is well founded. In Duma & Company v. Lord and Company [1942] 2 A.C. 629 (L.), see, too, the judgment of Scroggin J. in Buctt v. Home Office [1935] 2 A.C. 119 (C.A.). The utility of the classification was brought home, in the majority of the Law Lords in Conway v. Blythe [1962] 2 W.L.R. 926 (L.) at 103 and 104, and little significance was attached to it by the minority (see at 100A, 103). It is submitted that the sole test should be the public interest as balanced between the administrator of the executive and the administration of justice (in the words of Lord Pearce in Conway v. Blythe, at 104).

14 Van der Linde's case, above, at 200-1.
16 Duma & Company v. Lord and Company (1942) A.C. 629 (L.); see, too, the judgment of Scroggin J. in Buctt v. Home Office (1935) 2 A.C. 119 (C.A.). The utility of the classification was brought home, in the majority of the Law Lords in Conway v. Blythe (1962) 2 W.L.R. 926 (L.) at 103 and 104, and little significance was attached to it by the minority (see at 100A, 103). It is submitted that the sole test should be the public interest as balanced between the administrator of the executive and the administration of justice. (In the words of Lord Pearce in Conway v. Blythe, at 104).
17 Van der Linde's case, above, at 200.
20 [1942] A.C. 630 (L.);
22 1945 (2) S.A. 639 (A.D.). For a criticism of the reasoning by which this conclusion was reached in the face of the legislative discretion, see (1947) 4 S.A.L.J. 245.
23 The question of documents privileged because of their particular contents was expressly left open in Van der Linde's case, at 259.
(Duncan's case was subsequently overruled by the House of Lords, in Conway v. Rimner.\(^a\)) In such cases the courts have the power to order disclosure by overruling a claim of privilege even where it does not appear to have been frivolously or vexatiously made. Further, the court has power itself to inspect the documents privately to determine whether there is any necessity for secrecy.

Stern C.J. warned\(^b\) that the executive was not to be lightly overridden: there might be more reasons of State than were dreamt of in judicial philosophies, and disclosure might entail payment of too great a price for the information sought. On the other hand, said the learned Chief Justice, governmental interest does not exhaust State interest: there is a public interest also in the unfettered administration of justice. But the legislature has clearly indicated, by Act No. 101 of 1969, that in its view judicial evaluation, however cautious, cannot be permitted to compete with executive control and responsibility in the protection of the public interest.

2. Privilege protecting informers

A particular privilege is recognized with the object of encouraging private individuals to disclose to the authorities information as to crimes committed, which they might otherwise be reluctant to volunteer for fear of reprisals from those who would be prejudiced by the disclosures.\(^c\)

This privilege is an aspect of State privilege and as such is governed by the terms of section 233 of the Criminal Procedure Act, which states it is to be accorded in situations where an English court would recognize it.\(^d\) The English statement of the rule excludes, in 'public prosecutions', evidence tending to reveal the identity of an informer or otherwise exposing the channels of communication of a crime.\(^e\) Since in South African procedure in 'public prosecutions' the matter has been considered.

As formulated by Stratford C.J. in R. v. Van Schalkwyk,\(^f\) the privilege will obtain where information which may cause the initiation of a criminal prosecution\(^g\) is given to the officers of justice\(^h\) by someone who should be protected against those who may suffer by his having done so.

A person who has laid a charge would therefore normally be regarded as an \(^b\) At 259.

\(^c\) R. v. Van Schalkwyk, 1938 A.D. 543 at 549; Ex parte Minister of Justice; in re R. v. Pillay, 1945 A.D. 523 at 656. Both judgments stress that the protection of the informer is not the purpose of the privilege, it is merely the means of ensuring the free flow of information.
\(^d\) See above, pp. 999, 3, 146.
\(^e\) Wintor v. Beyers (1936) 25 O.B.D. 494 (C.A.)
\(^f\) For Wattmayer C.J. in Pillay's case, above, at 657, discussing Wintor v. Attorney-General, 1917 T.S. 415, and the many cases which followed it.
\(^g\) 1938 A.D. 543 at 548.

\(^h\) Whether a criminal prosecution has in fact resulted is irrelevant. Nor is it necessary that the information has actually disclosed an offence, if it has suggested or initiated investigation by which an offence would be discovered: Robinson v. Benson, 1918 W.L.D. 1. Cf. A. v. Cherry, 1931 N.P.D. 934.

informers,⁹⁹ except where he is the complainant in a charge involving injury to the person or property of an individual—at least where he is a State witness—for such persons are not considered to be in need of encouragements to lodge their complaints. Persons from whom the police have taken statements in the course of their investigation of a crime are usually not to be treated as informers. One example of this would be a witness to a motor collision, even if he was involved in the collision and has stated in response to the routine inquiry that he desires a prosecution to ensue.⁹⁹ Similarly, persons interrogated by the police when the accused is already under arrest are not informers.⁹⁹

Whether an informer in the strict sense requires the protection of secrecy is tested by the requirements of public policy. Watermeyer C.J. in R. v. Pillay⁶⁹ adopted a flexible measure in state that evidence of the State’s sources of information would be excluded only when public policy requires the name of the informer or his information to be kept secret, because of some confidential relationship between State and informer,⁶⁹ or because the State desires its sources of information to be kept secret for the reason that the informer’s information relates to matters in respect of which he might not inform if he were not protected,⁶⁹ or for the reason that the candour and completeness of his communications may be prejudiced, if he were not protected, or for some other good reason.

On the test of public policy, the privilege has been refused where the informer is in need of no protection since he has already been identified¹⁰ by his own admission or perhaps in earlier trials,¹⁰ or where disclosure of the informer’s identity would be in favorum innocens not only to establish the accused’s defence but also where the reliability of the informer is in issue.¹⁰ In terms of the proviso to section 232, no privilege applies where the making of an otherwise protected communication constitutes an offence,¹⁰ such as incitement, forgery, falsitas, perjury, crimina injuria, or the laying of a false charge.¹⁰ Apart from such cases, however, generally fraud will not defeat a claim of State privilege.¹⁰

---

⁹⁹ Ollantu v. R., 1937 (2) P.H., H. 191 (T).
⁹⁸ 1945 A.D. 655 at 658. See also the judgment of Trindall J.A. at 673.
⁹⁹ A peace officer who witnessed a crime and who himself had power to arrest the criminal, was held not to be in such a confidential relation with the State, in R. v. Makunda, 1949 (1) S.A. 40 (E).

An example of the application of this consideration is March v. Lombard, 1958 (4) S.A. 234 (E), where O’Hagan J. refused to relax the privilege where the crime alleged, stock theft, was both very prevalent and difficult of detection without information being left to the authorities.

1 R. v. Van Schalkwyk, 1938 A.D. 543.
⁶ See Duvenage v. Duvenage, 1936 E.D.I. 147 at 170.
Where it exists, the privilege protecting informers is an absolute one. It is not a matter of judicial discretion but a rule of law, so that the judicial officer has a duty to prevent any questions being put which are directed to ascertaining whether the witness or a third person was the informer, even where the police or attorney-general raises no objection. A similar duty rests on the public prosecutor. The attorney-general cannot be compelled to produce or disclose the information, nor can it be admitted if produced from another source. It seems clear however that although the privilege cannot be waived by quiescence or failure to object, it can be waived by the informer himself. Where he voluntarily identifies himself, whether in testifying as a witness or by extraneous admissions, the evidence will not be excluded.

It may be noted that the privilege apparently extends no further than those matters from which the identity of the informer may be discovered. The actual information given is not automatically privileged from disclosure, unless either it cannot be disclosed without its source also being revealed (as will often be the case), or if it falls under some other heading of privilege, e.g. the professional privilege covering witness’s statements obtained for the purposes of litigation or some general heading of matter which should not be divulged in the public interest.

3. Judicial disclosures

The evidence of judges and magistrates as to the performance of their judicial duties in cases heard by them is inadmissible. A magistrate may, however, testify as to events occurring in the course of the trial, such as whether a statement which is the subject of a subsequent charge of perjury was made on oath, or whether an assault or escape took place during the hearing. It is probable, though not entirely settled, that the evidence of a superior court judge would be allowed in similar circumstances.

Before the Abolition of Juries Act, No. 34 of 1959, evidence as to a jury’s manner of reaching its decision was held inadmissible, not only because it

---

169

16 Marks v. Beyers (1896) 25 Q.B.D. 494 (C.A.) at 498. It is argued in 1899 O.R. 10 that the privilege is an absolute one only in civil cases, whereas in criminal cases it is for the discretion of the judge. This seems, however, to amount to little more than a statement that the public policy test is a flexible one susceptible of individually differing judicial approaches.

20 See Roomeer v. Benson, 1913 W.L.D. 1 at 4-6.

23 e.g. R. v. Berman, 1944 S.A. 324 (A.D.).

24 See Watters v. C., in the extract from P. H. v. C., quoted on p. 304 above.

25 See Waterworth v. C., in the extract from P. H. v. C., quoted on p. 611 above.

27 Harris’s case, above, De Weil I.P. stressed the necessity of the magistrate asking whether the statement was a material one, unless it was established in any other way, e.g. where the materiality turned on the relative credibility of witnesses.

concerns the performance of a judicial function, but also for the protection of the juries. But the evidence of a juror was not excluded where it related to an alleged irregularity in the proceedings, such as an individual juror's inability to understand the language in which the evidence had been given, or breaches of the privacy of the juryroom. There appears to be no authority as to how far assessors are to be treated as jurors or as judicial officers, for these purposes.

---

CHAPTER 25

THE BURDEN OF PROOF

Section
I. General Principles
   A. Prima facie case
   B. Accused's silence
   C. Failure to call a witness
   D. Statutory provisions as to burden of proof
   E. Burden of proving facts after verdict
II. Presumptions
   A. Presumption of law
   B. Some rebuttable presumptions
   C. Presumptions of fact

GENERAL PRINCIPLES

The phrase 'burden of proof' is used in several senses. In its most frequent and probably most correct sense, it refers to 'the duty which is cast on a particular litigant, in order to be successful, of finally satisfying the court that he is entitled to succeed on his claim or defence, as the case may be.' This duty is also termed the legal burden of proof, or the risk of non-persuasion, since the party who fears it must lose if he fails to persuade the court that his allegation is the true one. It is not discharged if he can establish only that his allegation is more likely to be true than is the opponent's allegation, since this would not provide for the situation where the court was unable to decide between the contradictory versions.

Which party bears the burden of proving a particular issue is a matter of substantive law. Once determined, the incidence of the onus remains fixed and does not change from one party to another during the course of the trial.

2. Williams v. Ruggles, 3rd et al., 1949, 41 S.R. 428 R.
several distinct issues need to be decided, the burden of proof on each is separately determined and may fall on different parties. When this occurs the burden of proof is said to give the impression of shifting from one party to another, but properly regarded the burden cannot shift, though one pleading on party A may not arise until another has first been discharged by party B.

The general principle in criminal cases is that the legal burden of proving the accused's guilt rests upon the prosecution. This is often loosely expressed by saying that there is a presumption of innocence in favour of the accused: in favorem vitae libertatis et innocentiae animae processantium. The State must prove every element of the accused's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt—the commission of the act charged, its unlawfulness, and the identity of the accused as the criminal—regarded cumulatively.

What amounts to proof beyond a reasonable doubt is incapable of precise definition, and absolute certainty such as is conceivable in the exact sciences is not to be expected in matters of fact. A high degree of probability is in the mind of the ordinary reasonable man, on mature consideration, which leaves no doubt to the reasonable, honest mind. Such terminology emphasizes the essentially common-sense approach to be adopted. In R. v. Plant [2003] 2 W.N.R. 353, the court held that the test for proof beyond a reasonable doubt is whether the accused is more likely to have committed the crime than not. Proof beyond a reasonable doubt does not mean proof beyond the shadow of a doubt.

The prosecution may have proved its case beyond a reasonable doubt even though there is yet more evidence which could have called to question its case even stronger.

As the legal burden of proof remains fundamentally upon the State, it cannot shift to the defence. The accused bears no onus, in this sense, of proving his innocence. Whether he pleads a general denial or sets up a particular defence, and even where he relies upon facts peculiarly within his own knowledge, the burden of proof rests upon the prosecution.
Another exception is in the case of murder charges, where the defense has the burden of proving, on a balance of probabilities, the existence of extenuating circumstances (e.g., Nkhlovu, 1976 (1) S.A. 450 (A.D.)).

Arm n. 29: But the burden on the defense of establishing extenuating circumstances is a legal and not an evidential burden (e.g., Nkhlovu, 1976 (1) S.A. 450 (A.D.)).

The onus remains on the State to prove its case (apart from statutory cases, discussed below). In this case, the onus of proof lies, and the standard of proof required from the State is the same as in a civil case, viz. proof upon a balance of probabilities. Where the State has adduced evidence of guilt, the onus lies on the defense to adduce evidence of mitigating circumstances (e.g., Nkhlovu, 1976 (1) S.A. 450 (A.D.)).

Apart from this special case of mitigation, the onus is upon the State if the defense does not prove its case negative. However, the evidential burden of establishing murder (as in self-defense, undue provocation, or defense to save life), the onus is on the prosecution to establish the accused’s guilt beyond reasonable doubt (e.g., Nkhlovu, 1976 (1) S.A. 450 (A.D.)).
of murder charges, where the

A balance of probabilities, though of a lesser degree than the standard of probability required of the prosecution, still requires a reasonable degree of probability, not merely conjecture or surmise, and if the probabilities are evenly balanced the defence must have the onus of discharging its onus of ultimately satisfying the court that insanity is more probable than not. This exceptional situation prevailing in regard to proof of insanity by the defence has been extended to apply also where, as has now been recognized, it is the prosecution which wishes to contend that the accused is insane rather than to allow a dangerous person to be at large. The prosecution here bears the same onus as would be borne by the defence under the same circumstances, that is, proof upon a preponderance of probabilities.

Apart from this special case of allegations of insanity, there is the usual burden being imposed on all possible defences. The prosecution witnesses are not required to realize in every case that the accused acted without provocation, not in self-defence, without mistake or duress, and so forth. Rather, if the defence wishes to rely on such a defence and put the prosecution to the disproving thereof, it must raise the particular issue.

This brings us to a further meaning of the phrase 'burden of proof'—the evidential burden or the burden of adding evidence. The accused must add some evidence which puts his contentions in issue. A mere specification in argument is obviously insufficient. It may thus be said that although the State bears the legal burden of proving the accused's guilt and therefore of negating any defence, the accused has at the same time an evidential burden of bringing sufficient evidence of his defence to force the State to prove affirmatively that he is guilty. The nature of the evidential burden also falls to be considered in so far as it rests upon the prosecution, and here Wigmore's characterization of this burden is relevant.
burden as ‘the duty of passing the judge’ is illuminating. In a trial before a judge and a jury, the judge still has to retain control of the trial in order to prevent a completely unreasonable decision by the jury. The division of function between the judge as the arbiter of the law and the jury as arbiters of fact was interpreted to take account of the judge’s controlling function. The judge was therefore empowered to withdraw the case from the jury if, when the prosecution closed its case, he was satisfied that there was no evidence on which reasonable men could convict the accused. Whether or not the necessary amount of evidence had been adduced by the prosecution was then held to be a matter of law. Once this hurdle of the judge’s decision had been passed, the case could then go to the jury to decide on the facts whether or not the prosecution’s case was to be believed. The same test was applied even when the judicial officer sat alone without a jury, and will therefore continue to be applied now that such by jury have been abolished. As trier of law, the question for the judicial officer on a defence application for the accused’s discharge at the close of the State’s case, is whether there is any evidence of the accused’s guilt of the offence in question or any other offence of which he could be convicted on the indictment. The test is whether there is evidence on which a reasonable man could properly convict.

A refusal to discharge the accused does not mean that the judicial officer as a reasonable man should convict. If the defence thereafter closes its case without leading evidence, the prosecution evidence, which is all the evidence put before the court, must then be tested by more stringent disciplines of the quite different legal burden of proof. The inquiry is now, has the prosecution proved the accused’s guilt beyond a reasonable doubt?

A. Prima Facie Case

Whether or not the prosecution can resist an application for the discharge of the accused at the close of its case, as explained above, is often formulated in terms of whether or not the State has made out a prima facie case. Such terminology is not properly applied to the accused’s duty of leading enough evidence to raise his defence. As the close of the defence case is also the stage when all the evidence is in, and the inquiry would be whether, in the light of the defence evidence, there is a reasonable doubt whether the State’s evidence is true.

In making out its case the prosecution may be assisted by statutory or common-law presumptions, or be relieved by law of the duty of proving certain elements of the accused’s guilt. If guilt is sought to be proved by circumstantial evidence, there must be an inference other than evidence which could reasonably be drawn, as the existence of any other reasonable inference amounts that there must be a reasonable doubt as to the accused’s guilt. Where certain facts are positively within the knowledge of the accused, as evidence of those facts need be establish... by the prosecution than when the facts are equally accessible to the knowledge of both sides, but some evidence of those facts there must be.

B. Accused's Silence

If the prosecution has succeeded in setting up a prima facie case which calls for an answer, the accused's failure to disburse its forces by providing an answer may be a significant factor. If the incriminating or suspicious circumstances are susceptible of an innocent explanation his silence may lead to the inference that he offers no innocent explanation because there is none. A satisfactory explanation may be given extrinsically, or the accused may give it in evidence at the trial. If he gives several contradictory explanations, or an explanation found to be false, or gives one so late that the State has had no opportunity to investigate and rebut it, the case against him may again be strengthened.

Where the legal burden of proof is on the prosecution there is, however, no case resting upon the accused to give either any explanation or any evidence at all. If he remains silent, he takes the risk that the prosecution's case will be believed, but uncontradicted evidence is not necessarily acceptable evidence and the risk may not materialize. If he does not wish to take this risk, he may offer an innocent explanation of the incriminating facts, an explanation which he need not further substantiate. If there is an innocent explanation which may reasonably probably be true, or which leaves the court in doubt as to its possible truth, he has raised a reasonable doubt as to his guilt, and the case collapses upon the State to produce evidence destroying that explanation. The explanation need not be found by the court to be credible or acceptable before it can raise a doubt.

The accused's silence does not in itself rise to an adverse inference, but it may in appropriate circumstances give greater weight to the evidence against him and will do so the more the stronger is the case against him, e.g. it is likely to be more significant where there is direct than where there is only circumstantial evidence incriminating him, or where the existence of any explanation would be peculiarly within his knowledge.

---

9 Whether the accused had been authorized or licensed may be so regarded (R. v. Godfrey (1912) 2 C.C. 156; Rees v. Crompton (1916) 11 C.C. 226; R. v. Thompson (1904) 3 T.P.D. 993; regarding the prevailing style of house, at all times to the notice of any person in the vicinity (Oates v. White, 1930 T.P.D. 233): whether accused was employed by another at work on the same account (R. v. Elzine, 1943 T.P.D. 251 at 352): whether he had knowledge of the accused's (R. v. Maximoff, 1944 T.P.D. 188 at 191): what precautions had been taken to preserve the engine (Jones v. Government (1944) 1 E.D. 57); as far as in their possession (Oates v. White, 1930 T.P.D. 233).

The State case is not strengthened by the accused's silence unless there is already a case calling for an answer. His failure to explain, or his false or contradictory explanations, can at most strengthen the incriminating circumstances proved against him; it can never supply them when they are lacking, or point to an adverse rather than a favourable explanation of equivocal facts.

C. Failure to Call a Witness

In civil cases it has been held that not to call as a witness a person who could be expected to elucidate the facts may lead to an inference that the witness's silence is attributable to the fact that he does not support the desired version of the facts. A similar inference may be drawn in criminal cases, but great caution should be exercised in doing so. The witness must first be shown to be both competent and available. If he could equally have been called by either side his silence is open to an inference against both parties not merely against the party bearing the costs. However, the failure to call a witness, even a crucial one, is a weak foundation on which to build inferences, and can never be decisive.

The prosecution has a special duty to call all witnesses who could throw light upon the issues, even if some of them would tend to support the inferences of the accused; he should at least make them available to the court and to the defence. It is particularly desirable that this procedure should be observed in trapping cases and in similar circumstances where independent evidence is most needed, but the prosecution's failure to discharge this duty is not in itself an irregularity.

The failure of a party to produce material documents may be treated in the same way as non-production of a witness.

D. Statutory Alterations of the Incidence of the Burden

The general principle that the legal burden of proof rests on the prosecution is subject to numerous statutory exceptions by which it is placed upon the accused. Where the defence bears a statutory duty, it is, unless otherwise expressly provided, to be discharged not to the same degree of certainty as would be required of the State, but upon a balance of probabilities only.

The following phrases in sections creating offences have all been construed as placing the burden of proof upon the accused, to be discharged only negatively upon the probabilities, but not beyond a reasonable doubt: until the contrary is shown.
proved. 22 If it appears to the court, 23 "unless he has reasonable cause," a reasonable cause; 24 "unless he gives a satisfactory account," 25 A statute which makes proof of fact X, prima facie proof of fact Y, means that a case with facts calls for an answer has been made out if the State establishes fact X, and analogous cannot obtain his discharge at the close of the State case because fact Y has not been demonstrated 26 Where a penal statute demands a to be Y, the scope and object of the statute will determine whether this is intended to be conclusive 27 or whether it merely transfers the onus to the accused of showing, upon a balance of probabilities, that Y is not X. 28

The onus of proof in statutory offences, in which the definition is accompanied by exceptions, is sometimes a question which is provided for by section 315(2) of the Criminal Procedure Act, and section 2654(a) and 2654(b) of the Code, relating to documentary evidence, are also discussed elsewhere. 29 Apart from provisions facilitating the State's task of proof in particular cases (as to which see volume II), the Code provides generally for the onus of proof in cases where the accused's possession or action is to be shown; evidence of authority 30 or licence 31 is an element of the offence. Proof of this accused was outside the country may be given in a "documentary form" under section 2654. As to the onus of the proof in taxation statutes or in charges of failing to provide information, see section 287.

In certain political offences created by the Suppression of Communism Act 32 and the Terrorism Act, 33 the onus has been placed upon the accused to prove his innocence beyond a reasonable doubt. 34 Those provisions seem in effect to deprive the accused of his right to require proof from the accused's burden of proving his guilt. (R. v. Goldstein, 1959 A.D. 171; R. v. Aziz, 1959 (1) R.D. 47.) But those cases have been overruled by R. v. Alexander, 1964 (1) S.A. 623 (C). 35 25 R. v. Zeff, 1934 (1) S.A. 44 (R)." Where the court has held to require proof from the accused's burden of proving his guilt. (R. v. Goldstein, 1959 A.D. 171; R. v. Aziz, 1959 (1) R.D. 47.) But those cases have been overruled by R. v. Alexander, 1964 (1) S.A. 623 (C).

Appendix

Appendix

22 R. v. Cloete, 1934 (1) S.A. 44 (R)." Where the court has held to require proof from the accused's burden of proving his guilt. (R. v. Goldstein, 1959 A.D. 171; R. v. Aziz, 1959 (1) R.D. 47.) But those cases have been overruled by R. v. Alexander, 1964 (1) S.A. 623 (C).

Appendix

22 R. v. Cloete, 1934 (1) S.A. 44 (R)." Where the court has held to require proof from the accused's burden of proving his guilt. (R. v. Goldstein, 1959 A.D. 171; R. v. Aziz, 1959 (1) R.D. 47.) But those cases have been overruled by R. v. Alexander, 1964 (1) S.A. 623 (C).
If it is to be related, it must be by evidence in the ordinary way of cross-examination.
and the fact that the defence is faced with the additional and well-recognized difficulty of proving a negative should also be a factor in considering whether it has adduced sufficient evidence to discharge its burden. Conversely, the considerations which have led the courts to develop the cautionary rules of corroboration in regard, for example, to the evidence of a single witness or of an accomplice, do not necessarily apply where the burden of proof rests upon the accused.

E. Burden of Proving Facts in Aggravation or Mitigation of Sentence

Facts relied upon in aggravation of sentence must be proved by the State beyond a reasonable doubt. The defence clearly bears the onus of proving facts in mitigation of sentence beyond a reasonable doubt. As to the degree of proof required, it is settled that the defence must discharge its burden on a balance of probabilities. Shepard's case has, however, been followed in Rhodesia.

II. PRESUMPTIONS

A. Presumptions of Law

A presumption is an inference of fact which the law requires a court to draw from a proved or assumed fact. The factual or logical appropriateness of drawing the particular inference is a matter of the balance of probabilities. A presumption (præsumptio juris et de jure) is, more correctly, a rule of substantive law which imposes a liability on the party against whom it operates. The effect of a rebuttable presumption of law on the burden of proof is not entirely settled. The courts on the whole seem to favour the view that a rebuttable presumption shifts the legal burden of proof to the party against whom it is to be drawn, so that, if he adduces only sufficient evidence to leave the court in doubt as to the truth, the presumption operates. There is, however, some authority, and weighty academic opinion, that it is... only the evidential burden or duty to adduce evidence which is shifted by a presumption. Probably the true position is that some presumptions are of the first kind and others are of the second.\[60\]

Conflicting rebuttable presumptions neutralize each other, leaving the issue to be decided solely on the evidence of the facts.\[60\]

The existence of a presumption is a matter of substantive not adjective law, so that the presumptions of English substantive law have not been imported along with the English law of evidence.\[60\]

B. Some Rebuttable Presumptions\[60\]

In general most of the presumptions operative in civil cases apply also in criminal cases, although the different standards of proof must be borne in mind.

The child of a married woman is presumed to have been fathered by her husband \(\textit{pater est quem nuptiae demonstrat}\).\[60\] The presumption must be rebutted by proof upon a balance of probabilities\[62\] that the mother's husband could not have been the father. In other words, the impossibility—by virtue of his impiety or non-access—must be established by the probabilities; it is insufficient to establish only the improbability of his being the father.\[45\] The common-law prohibition on spouses' evidence of non-access was abolished by statute in 1935.\[60\] The presumption does not apply where the spouses were living apart under a notarial or judicial separation,\[66\] but it is operative even where the child is shown to have been conceived before the date of the marriage.\[67\]

As to the paternity of an illegitimate child, proof of an admission by the alleged father that he had intercourse at any time\[68\] with the mother (or other evidence of the fact) shifts upon him the onus of proving that he could not have been the father.\[68\]

There is a rebuttable presumption that the possessor of a movable is also the owner,\[3\] that a spinster is a virgin,\[2\] that the contents of a notarial document are true.\[3\] As to facts giving rise to a presumption of impiety, see \textit{Hunt v. Hunt}.\[4\]

Section 260 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1955, incorporates the English law as to the sufficiency of proof of appointment to public office,\[8\] The effect is that proof that a person acted in a particular capacity is prima facie evidence of the \[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{60} See Gianville Williams, Criminal Law (The General Part), p. 225.}}\]

\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{61} S. v. Steyn, 1963 (1) S.A. 797 (W.) at 803; G. Phipson on Evidence, 10th ed. (1963), \S\ 103.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{62} Fraenkel v. Godert, 1939 A.D. 16 at 42.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{63} For a more complete compilation, see the discussion in L. K. Hoffmann, South African Law of Evidence, 2nd ed. (1970), pp. 373 ff.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{64} As to the Roman-Dutch law on the point, see Fitzgerald v. Green, 1911 E.D.L. 432 at 461.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{65} Van Luttervelt v. Engels, 1959 (2) S.A. 699 (A.D.); R. v. Jansen, 1954 (1) S.A. 286 (A.D.).}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{66} Lowe v. Lowe, 1933 C.P.D. 407; Fees v. Evers, 1940 T.P.D. 377; R. v. Crouns, 1945 O.P.D. 309. No defence can thereby be founded upon the mother's intercourse with others, as the exception to this consideration does not apply in modern South African law to evidence of other parties. (S. v. Simans, 1965 (3) S.A. 454 (A.D.), and S. v. Boll, 1967 (1) P.H., H. 135 (A.D.), have left the matter open.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{67} See 401 of the General Law Amendment Act, No. 46 of 1934.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{68} Pelt v. Fell, 1938 C.P.D. 293; Venter v. Venter, 1932 N.P.D. 29. An informal separation}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{69} does not prevent the presumption arising: Lowe v. Lowe, 1933 C.P.D. 407.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{70} Wilkinson v. Estate Steyn, 1941 (2) S.A. 740 (C) at 743.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{71} Even if he admits intercourse at a date which could not have caused the pregnancy.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{72} S. v. Swart, 1965 (3) S.A. 454 (A.D.) critically discussed in (1965) 82 S.A.C.J. 444, and in}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{73} Annual Survey of South African Law, 1965, pp. 66-8.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{74} Rusk v. Tidgren, 1962 (3) S.A. 787 (A.D.).}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{75} Sieges v. Jennings (1920) 46 N.L.R. 34; Crouns v. Honey, 1932 C.P.D. 265.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{76} E. E. A. Alexander v. Weller, 1917 A.D. 463 at 467.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{77} 1940 W.L.D. 55.}}\]
\[\text{\footnotesize{\cite{78} See also sec. 252.}}\] validity of his appointment to that office. Under this section the courts have inferred the valid appointment of the officer presiding at an insolvency inquiry or at a headman's court, of a policeman, an administrative official, and of the officer administering the Government. A person purporting to act as a lawfully appointed marriage officer will be presumed to have been so appointed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, but to raise the presumption there must be something more than the mere fact that he officiates. In a marriage case e.g. he must have signed the marriage certificate in his capacity as a marriage officer.

Section 260 represents only one aspect of the maxim regarding the presumption of the regularity and validity of official acts. (As to raising such a presumption by affidavit evidence, see section 239 of the Criminal Code.) Where a sequence of procedures is laid down, the court is entitled to conclude, from the presence of the later acts in the sequence, that the earlier acts were properly performed. Thus, where officials or official bodies are required to follow specified procedures in regard to such matters as the holding of meetings, obtaining authority, acting on request or recommendation, or the promulgation of statutory instruments, the court will presume, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the correct procedure was observed in all respects. In Byers v. Chinn the Appellate Division adopted Wigmore's fourfold test for the applicability of the presumption, namely, whether (a) the matter is more or less in the past and incapable of easily procured evidence; (b) it involves a mere formality or detail of procedure in the routine of a public officer's act or of a litigation; (c) it involves to some extent the security of apparently vested rights; and (d) the circumstances of the particular case add some element of probability. It is not necessary that all four elements be present; in Byers v. Chinn itself Stratford J.A. considered it safe to apply the presumption of regularity where he perceived three of these, and it was applied in S. v. E., 1977 S.A. 151 (T), although only one element—that of probability—was satisfied.

42. A v. K (1929) 4 A.D. 459.
64. A v. K (1929) 4 A.D. 459.
It is the probability element which prevents the presumption of validity or regularity from being applied if there is evidence of irregularity in some other part of the procedure, or where ex facie the later acts of the sequence are improper, for example, if regulations have to be approved by the Administrator of a province personally, but are promulgated expressly as having been approved by the Administrator in Executive Committee. Where a statute permits an act to be done where a Minister or official is satisfied as to the existence of a state of facts, his doing of the act gives rise to the presumption that he was so satisfied, but on the other hand, the act is only permitted if some external fact or circumstance objectively exists; the better view would seem to be that the existence of the pre-...tion must be proved and cannot be presumed. Finally, the presumption of validity is not involved to relieve the prosecution of the onus of proving an essential element in a criminal charge. Thus in charges of perjury it is not to be presumed without proof that the allegedly false statement was made on oath, nor in charges of escaping from lawful custody that the custody had been preceded by a lawful arrest. And in R. v. Adamson, a charge of continued occupation after the cancellation of a licence to occupy, the Court insisted upon proof positive of the cancellation of the licence. Apart from establishing the formal propriety of official acts, omnia praeventa rite esse acta has been applied to establish the formal validity of a will, the details of a marriage ceremony, and the due administration of a deceased estate. In Cape Indian Congress v. Transvaal Indian Congress the Appellate Division applied it also to presume the correct procedures having been observed for the election of the committee of a private voluntary association, and it has also been applied to other non-official matters like the internal functioning of a company and of a building society.

A party wishing to rebut the presumption must prove affirmatively the impropriety or irregularity in the procedure. If he can do no more than produce evidence which leaves the validity or regularity in doubt, he has failed to discharge the onus resting upon him and the presumption operates.

C. Presumptions of Fact

Presumptions of fact (presumptionem horum) are not really presumptions at all, but merely permissible inferences drawn from certain considerations of...
The inference is seen especially in the case of stolen money, which travels faster than goods (Stimpie v. Royal Insurance Co., Ltd. [1970] 3 W.L.R. 217 (C.A.)). circumstantial evidence. Whether the inference is to be drawn in any particular case is a matter for the reasoning and logic of the court. No rules can be laid down to cover the fluctuating facts from which an inference may be supported. "It is in the realm of inference cases," said Holmes, J. in v. v. Secur 4 that the profession has long been plagued by no less about maxims and rather than by presumes, dilemmas, prima facie cases and rebuttals... with due respect to those who favour these pernicious processes of reasoning, I want to suggest that the practical approach is to look at all the facts at the end of the case, including, if it be one of the facts, the absence of any evidence from the person to whom negligence is sought to be imputed... and the inquiry is whether, from that totality of facts, one can draw an inference of negligence— in criminal cases to the exclusion of all other inferences."

The learned Judge was dealing with an argument based on 'novi jus in quo legis'. But precisely the same reasoning applies to a large number of other inferences which have been loosely termed presumptions. Among the most common of these are the 'doctrine of recent possession' (where the accused is found in possession of recently stolen property in appropriate circumstances an inference may be drawn as to his guilt of theft, receiving or housebreaking); prospective or retrospective continuity (where a state of facts is shown to have existed at a particular date it may be inferred that the same state had also existed just before or just after that date; that a letter shown to have been posted, reached the addressee, that a person advanced into middle age is no longer capable of procreation, that a woman participating with her husband or a minor participating with an adult in a criminal activity was coerced by him into doing so. None of the foregoing albeit repugnant and usage have endowed them with names, is a presumption of law, and none transfers any legal burden of disproving them.

---

7 [1947] 2 S.A. 497 (L).
9 [1944] 2 S.A. 166 (J)."
10 [1945] 2 S.A. 166 (J)."
11 [1946] D.R. 423 (C)."
12 [1947] 2 S.A. 768 (C)."
13 [1948] 2 S.A. 768 (C)."
THE SUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE

CHAPTER 29

I. NUMBER OF WITNESSES

The general principle of the common law, that credibility does not depend upon the number of witnesses, has been enacted into statute in South Africa. Section 256 of the Criminal Procedure Act, No. 56 of 1935, provides that except in charges of treason and perjury an accused person may be convicted on the single evidence of any competent and credible witness.

This section applies not only where a solitary State witness is produced whose evidence contains the entire case against the accused, but also to every situation where a fact is to be proved by the testimony of a single witness, notwithstanding the fact that other witnesses are proffered to testify to other co-ordinate facts.¹

¹ Roman law from the time of Constantine, and Romanic systems including the Governments, provided a generous recognition to the authorities cited by Witnesses on Evidence, 3rd ed., VII (1905), 1 (2031), L. H. Hoffmann, South Africa Law of Evidence (1901), p. 472, supra, 3. 496

Thus the section as interpreted (see below) was applied where only one witness implicated the accused in the offence although others testified to his commission by someone, in A. v.
Proof beyond a reasonable doubt may therefore be furnished by the evidence of one witness, who is competent to testify in accordance with the rules discussed above. His credibility is a matter for the jury or other trier of fact, who will be influenced by the witness's demeanor and personality in the light of the 'atmosphere' of the trial, his conduct, the internal consistency and objective probabilities of his testimony, and any interest he may have to misrepresent. Where the witness has been surprised or frightened by the police to induce him to testify, the court may refuse to attach any weight to his statements.

Credibility is not to be prejudged by the witness's recollection, nor by the fact that the court has formed an impression of the witness's veracity or reliability by hearing him testify in other trials, since a man may lie in one case and not in another. Similarly, while the court may legitimately consider that where the witness has been found to be untruthful on one point, no evidence is to be attached to his evidence on other points, this is not a necessary conclusion. He may, for example, have a motive to conceal facts or shift blame in certain parts of his story, which is not operative in other respects. However, apart from the usual factors of credibility, a gloss has been put on section 226 in R. v. Michova, De Villiers J.P. said:

'Not the unrestrained evidence of a single component and credible witness is no doubt declared to be sufficient for a conviction by reason [254], but in my opinion that section should only be relied on where the evidence of the single witness is clear and satisfactory in every material respect. Thus the section ought not to be invoked where, for instance, the witness has an interest of some degree to the accused, where he has been a previous inconsistent statement, where he is for some reason hostile to the witness, where he has been found guilty of the offence involving dishonesty, where he has not had proper opportunities for observation, etc.'

These remarks have been repeatedly approved by the Appellate Division and Mohammed, 1936 (2) S.A. 61 (A.D.) at 69, and in proof of a confession alleged to have been made by the accused, in X v. v. Mallet, 1936 (2) S.A. 471 (A.D.) at 472.

2 See generally, Story, "9: 10

3 [Declares of evidence in Anglo-American law are not a license of weighing proof; they are merely regulations governing the admissibility of proof", as Professor Jefferys notes in 1954.

25 Australian L.J. 139 at 140; Cl. (1917) 28 S.A.L.R. 29.

37 Helman v. Heiman, 1918 A.D. 471 at 477; R v. Heiman, 1923 E.D.L. 245 at 246; R v. Helman, 1947 (2) S.A. 254 (D) at 263.

5 Asher v. R., 1927 (2) P.H. 119 (G).

8 R v. Calvert, 1912 S.A.L.R. 37 at 40; R v. Brown, 1947 (2) S.A. 497 (D) at 498, where the court is in a position to take a comprehensive police officer's testimony.

11 1936 (2) S.A. 471 (A.D.) at 472.

12 1936 (2) S.A. 471 (A.D.) at 472.

13 1936 (2) S.A. 471 (A.D.) at 472.

14 1936 (2) S.A. 471 (A.D.) at 472.

15 1936 (2) S.A. 471 (A.D.) at 472.

16 1936 (2) S.A. 471 (A.D.) at 472.

17 1936 (2) S.A. 471 (A.D.) at 472.

18 1936 (2) S.A. 471 (A.D.) at 472.
a rule of practice has thus been formulated which enjoins a court or jury to approach with caution a case thus slenderly founded. The section after all does not say that the evidence of one witness must be treated as being so presumptive as that of many—although in particular cases this may of course be so—and in general the cogency of evidence is increased where the court is presented with several versions of the same facts which can then be checked one against the other.²⁹

The tests enumerated by De Villiers J.P. are not of course exhaustive, nor are they to be applied mechanistically to every case as a touchstone against which a witness's truthfulness and reliability can always be accurately measured.³⁰ Nor, on the other hand, is the single witness required to be flawless, as long as the imperfections he displays are minor ones.³¹ Where the evidence of the single witness is corroborated in any way which would tend to indicate that the whole story was not constructed,³² the caution enjoined may be overcome and the court's acceptance of his version facilitated.³³ But corroboration is not essential.³⁴ Any other feature which increases the confidence of the court in the reliability of the single witness may also overcome the caution, e.g., a defense failure to challenge the witness by cross-examination or to produce evidence in contradiction.³⁵ The rules governing the oath of proof may, however, if the court is faced with a flat contradiction between the evidence on oath of the accused and that of the State witness and the former may reasonably be true, it may hold that the accused's guilt has not been approved beyond a reasonable doubt.³⁶ By the same token, from the mere fact that the State witness is unchallenged it does not necessarily follow that the cautionary rule is satisfied. As long as the oath of proof is on the State, a shrillness in the credibility of the witness may mean that the State has failed to set up even a prima facie case against the accused which calls for an answer.³⁷

In certain situations, a particular likelihood of false incrimination has been recognised, witting either from the type of offence charged,³⁸ the type of the witness, or the nature of the evidence he is to give. In these cases the court is required to be aware of the peculiar dangers inherent in each such set of circumstances. In other words, a directed caution must be exercised, with full consciousness of the special dangers to be guarded against.

[Notes and references omitted for brevity.]

A. CORROBORATION ON A PLEA OF GUILT

Section 258(1) of Act No. 56 of 1955 provides that where the accused has pleaded guilty before a superior court, he may be convicted on that plea alone save where he is charged with murder. To an inferior court, he can only be convicted on the plea alone if the court is of the opinion that the offence is a trivial
one. In all other cases there must be, in addition to the plea of guilty, 'proof, other than the unconfirmed evidence of the accused, that the offence was actually committed'.

Even before section 258(1) and its predecessor, it had been laid down as a matter of practice that a review court should not certify proceedings as in accordance with real and substantial justice unless satisfied, apart from the plea of guilty, that an offence had actually been committed. This rule of practice rapidly hardened into a rule of law by the interpretation of the provision dealing with the corroboration of confessions to cover also pleas of guilty as a form of judicial confession. The 1935 amendment drew a clear distinction between confessions and pleas of guilty and the old equivalence was therefore no longer made.

Section 258(1) has given rise to numerous difficulties of interpretation as variants of the two basic problems it presents: what is 'evidence of the accused' which can be confirmed, and what amounts to 'proof additional to the commise of the offence. A third problem, the nature of the confirmation of evidence of the accused, has thus far hardly been touched on, Schreiner J.A. in R. v.
Nathanson being content to leave open 'whether it could be different from the confirmation in a material respect required to satisfy the accomplice and confusion provisions of Act 56 of 1955'.

The plea of guilty itself is not 'evidence of the accused' but is merely the pre-existent factor which creates the necessity for evidence of the accused plus confirmation, or other proof of the commission of the offence. The better view is that formal admissions by the defence at the trial are not 'evidence of the

---

1 See Section 258 of Act No. 31 of 1917, as substituted by sec. 11 of Act No. 46 of 1923, itself an amendment to sec. 29 of Ordinance No. 12 of 1923 (C).
2 See The Queen v. Srinivasan (1900) 1 S.C. 60; R. v. Dharmlal, 1900 T.I.R. 418 at 419-20; Siligur v. Jones (1913) 34 M.L.R. 211.
3 Sec. 258 of Act No. 31 of 1917, in its original and unamended form, corresponding to sec. 258(1) of Act No. 56 of 1955.
5 Until 1935, Section 258(1) has given rise to numerous difficulties of interpretation as variants of the two basic problems it presents: what is 'evidence of the accused' which can be confirmed, and what amounts to 'proof additional to the commise of the offence. A third problem, the nature of the confirmation of evidence of the accused, has thus far hardly been touched on, Schreiner J.A. in R. v.
Nathanson being content to leave open 'whether it could be different from the confirmation in a material respect required to satisfy the accomplice and confusion provisions of Act 56 of 1955'.
6 The plea of guilty itself is not 'evidence of the accused' but is merely the pre-existent factor which creates the necessity for evidence of the accused plus confirmation, or other proof of the commission of the offence. The better view is that formal admissions by the defence at the trial are not 'evidence of the
The coram question which the section 258(1) gives rise to, in the absence of conclusive evidence the accused, is the nature of the evidence proving the commission of the offence. What is required is proof by admissible and sufficient evidence of every element of the offence except the identity of the offender, which is supplied by the plea of guilty.

In considering whether or not the offence has been proved, the court may clearly employ inferences made by the accused extrajudicially and during the trial, any relevant presumptions, and, where appropriate, judicial notice. Formal admissions by the defence in lieu of evidence of the offence have been held to be incompetent by the Appellate Division,41 despite dicta in some earlier cases that they are permissible where the purpose of section 258(1) is not thereby subverted.42
Where proof of the offence is tendered by way of extrajudicial confessions by the accused, which themselves require corroboration by virtue of section 258(2) of Act No. 56 of 1955, such corroboration is not dispensed with where the accused has pleaded guilty any more than where he has pleaded not guilty,43 and the same presumably applies to the evidence of accomplices requiring corroboration by section 257.44 The plea of guilty makes this difference, however; although the foundation of the offence must still be proved beyond a reasonable doubt,45 this burden is more easily discharged since the plea of guilty has weight in determining whether prima facie proof must be treated as conclusive demonstra-

B. Corroboration of Confessions

The admissibility of a confession is usually justified on the ground that no man is likely to be unjustifiably in making a statement detrimental to his own interests. However, it has been felt to be necessary to provide for those exceptional circumstances where individuals, as a result perhaps of mental unbalance, confess to being guilty of crimes which they never committed.46 In South Africa a safeguard has been provided in section 258(2) of Act No. 56 of 1955: where an accused person is proved to have confessed, he may only be convicted thereon if the confession is confirmed by other evidence or, if it is unconfirmed, on proof by competent evidence that the offence was actually committed.47 A plea of guilty has been held not to be a confession for this purpose,48 but as the same considerations may apply, it too requires corroboration under section 258(1).49

Appropriately the term 'confession' has the same meaning in section 258(2) as in section 254,50 which is discussed above, pp. 285-308. Where the self-incriminatory statement does not amount to a confession, or as a confession is inadmissible, section 258(2) is inapplicable. What is then required is not corroboration of the 41 S. v. Medley, 1960 (4) S.A. 335 (A.D.); (1961) 16 S.A.L.T. 44. But this does not apply if the formal admissions were accepted by the court, even if subsequently thwarted by a plea of guilty. S. v. Carter-Johnson, 1963 (3) S.A. 184 (N); S. v. Petersen, 1959 (6) S.A. 551 (N).

108 (B); R. v. Griswold, 1957 (1) F.H. 164 (C); R. v. Mbele, 1959 (2) S.A. 333 (B).
43 R. v. Nathenius, 1959 (3) S.A. 124 (A.D.) at 130-2; S. v. V. 1964 (2) S.A. 237 (B).
44 G. v. Velle, 1964 (4) S.A. 401 (N); Cather, R. v. S. A.P., 1947 (2) F.H. 47, 162 (O); R. v. v.
Kapp, 1958 (1) F.H. 71, 156 (O); S. v. Petersen, 1962 (4) S.A. 429 (N).
45 R. v. Duma, 1956 (2) S.A. 382 (N).
(N).
47 C. v. v. Ocko, 1959 (4) S.A. 713 (A.D.) at 729; the 6th edition of Gardner and Luttrell, p. 524, refers to instances in South Africa where members of a tribe, in order to protect the larger blood of the tribe, have been driven to confess to a crime for which they were themselves innocent. For the same reason, reference is made to an American case where it was accepted that the evidence of some executive of some tribe was inadmissible since he was not the guilty party.
48 See 1960 (4) S.A. 108 at 114; 1963 (3) S.A. 184 (N).
50 See above, pp. 285-308.
statement, but proof of the accused's guilt in the ordinary way, an onus which the admissions may of course assist in discharging. 8

If the only evidence before the court is the confession, a conviction is not complete. 9 What is required is evidence outside the confession which corroborates it in some material respect. 10 Materiality is a matter of degree as well as kind, but the confession is not necessarily trivial or unimportant just because it does not establish either the complicity of the accused in the offence or the fact that an offence was committed; 11 in other words, the confession itself may still provide the only evidence of the offence and of the identity of the offender. For example, in Re v. Chiltur 12 the accused had confessed to murdering the deceased with arsenic taken from a tin of sheep dip. Proof of his ownership of the tin, and the fact that its contents on analysis were found to be arsenic, were held to be adequate confirmation of the confession. Similarly, in Re v. Sifandane, 13 which concerned a charge of murder by strangling, medical evidence was held to be confirmation of the confession even though it was as consistent with the death having occurred by innocent means.

In Hindle, even where confirmation is present, the confession must still be ascertained for reliability to ensure that the guilt of the accused has been established beyond a reasonable doubt. 14 This explicit formulation is only beginning to influence the South African rule 15 but our law seems in the result to be the same. The Appellate Division has frequently strained that although the weight of the confession (prohibited is not the fact that the evidence was made by the one witness - this court is not bound to assess the weight of the evidence). The Appellate Division has frequently strained that although the weight of the confession (prohibited is not the fact that the evidence was made by the one witness - this court is not bound to assess the weight of the evidence). The Appellate Division has frequently strained that although the weight of the confession (prohibited is not the fact that the evidence was made by the one witness - this court is not bound to assess the weight of the evidence).

It appears from Re v. Graham and Miller 16 that confirmation by way only of accomplice evidence may in law suffice, 17 despite the fact that such evidence also requires confirmation under section 257. 18

The alternative to confirmation of the confession is proof of guilt of the commission of the offence. What is required here is proof of every element of the 9 at 13; R v. Ramane, 1943 T.P.D. 100 (A.D.) at 101.

10 R v. Abrahams, 1946 S.A. 86 (C) at 87.
11 R v. Abrahams, 1946 S.A. 86 (C) at 87.
12 Proof of the confession by way of an accomplice witness is insufficient; the confirmation required is not of the fact that the confession was made but of facts which indicate that it is true. Re v. Ramane, 1939 B.L.R. 198 at 201 (C). However, see S v. Komarava, 1964 S.A. 442 (C.A.D.) at 445, where the accused's rejection of the confession to someone else, and other admissions made to strangers held to be confirmation.
13 A plea of guilty is not confirmation for this purpose: Re v. Rambale, 1950 S.A. 54.
14 R v. Sifandane, 1955 (2) P.R., N. 233 (A.D.) at 237; Kneze v. S., 1956 (1) P.R., N. 3 (A.D.) at 3.
15 1963 (3) E.A. at 453, 455 (E.A.) at 455, 456 (C.A.D.) at 456, 458 (E.A.) at 458.
19 1955 (2) P.R., N. 233 (A.D.) at 235.
20 1956 (1) P.R., N. 3 (A.D.) at 3.
21 1963 (3) E.A. at 453, 455 (E.A.) at 455, 456 (C.A.D.) at 456, 458 (E.A.) at 458.
22 Re v. Hlophe, 1944 A.D. 502 (A.D.) at 503.
23 Re v. Sifandane, 1955 (2) P.R., N. 233 (A.D.) at 235; S v. Komarava, 1956 (1) P.R., N. 3 (A.D.) at 3.
25 See below, p. 402, 403.
offence except the identity of the offender, which may apparently be established by the confession alone. If the evidence admissible does prove this element as well, it may be of course unnecessary for the court to consider the confession or its admissibility or even to determine whether the case falls within the purview of section 258(2) at all.

Although in R. v. Grosskopf Graham J. stated that the requirement of proof by 'competent evidence' means evidence on oath, this limitation was not accepted by the Appellate Division in R. v. Sikosana, and the offence may be proved by circumstantial evidence, documentary evidence or whatever means are admissible in proof of the particular charge. Formal admission by the defence of the elements of the offence are not competent as a substitute for evidence since they amount to no more than a repetition in court of the accused's extracurial statement.

It should be noted that where the evidence tendered is insufficient to establish the offence, it may still be possible to use it to provide confirmation of the confession.

C. Corroboration of Accomplice Evidence

Section 257 of Act No. 56 of 1955 allows a court or jury to convict any accused of any offence alleged against him on the single evidence of any accomplice, provided that the offence has, by competent evidence other than the single and unconfirmed evidence of the accomplice, been proved to have been actually committed. The provision is curiously conceived, since the false evidence of an accomplice is commonly regarded as more likely to take the form of incriminating the wrong person than imagining the crime charged, and the courts have therefore been influenced by English law to supplement the statutory requirements with a cautionary rule, so that a prosecution founded mainly on accomplice evidence must comply with both types of corroboration requirement.

For the purposes of section 257, said the Appellate Division in S. v. Kalmar, a witness is an accomplice if he was criminally associated with the accused in the commission of the offence. Even if he is not capable of committing the offence himself as a principal, he is an accomplice if he aids or abets the principal offender so as to render himself liable as an accessory. An accessory after the fact was also said not to be an accomplice since he is not a socius criminis in our law, but since he does incur criminal liability for his ex post facto participation, it is submitted that the definition of "accomplice" formulated in Foster's case would require no extension to cover such a new accused.

Where the charge is a statutory offence such as underpaying employees, or unlawfully supplying liquor or drugs, or taking bribes, which in its nature presupposes the doing of a supplementary act, the employee, the person supplied, the Source of the bribe—what is necessary is an analysis of the provisions relating to the offence to determine whether the doing of the supplementary act Intended to be punishable or to be protected. For example, section 14 of the insurance Act, No. 23 of 1997, is intended for the protection of the under-age complainant even if she is in fact a consuming party, and she would not therefore fall within the definition of an accomplice, whereas the under-age person in one of the miscellaneous offences created by section 16 of the same Act would be.

Whether or not a person who participates in the commission of a crime renders himself criminally liable therefor, depends of course on the exact nature of his participation and his intention in so acting. If mere connivance in the offence, an accused's ignorance of the criminal nature of the transaction will not prevent him from being an accomplice.

Assuming the witness in question as an accomplice within the meaning of section 121, the statutory requirement of corroboration means that before his evidence would found a conviction, either that evidence must be confirmed

49. He is certainly regarded as an accomplice for the purpose of the statutory rule: R. v. N. A., 1950 (1) S.A. 512 (A.D.) at 512; see Thembe v. L.A.
50. R. v. Thembe, 1951 (1) S.A. 88; see Thembe v. L.A., 1950 (1) S.A. 512 (A.D.) at 512; see Thembe v. L.A.
51. R. v. Thembe, 1951 (1) S.A. 88; see Thembe v. L.A., 1950 (1) S.A. 512 (A.D.) at 512; see Thembe v. L.A.
52. R. v. Thembe, 1951 (1) S.A. 88; see Thembe v. L.A., 1950 (1) S.A. 512 (A.D.) at 512; see Thembe v. L.A.
53. R. v. Thembe, 1951 (1) S.A. 88; see Thembe v. L.A., 1950 (1) S.A. 512 (A.D.) at 512; see Thembe v. L.A.
54. R. v. Thembe, 1951 (1) S.A. 88; see Thembe v. L.A., 1950 (1) S.A. 512 (A.D.) at 512; see Thembe v. L.A.
55. R. v. Thembe, 1951 (1) S.A. 88; see Thembe v. L.A., 1950 (1) S.A. 512 (A.D.) at 512; see Thembe v. L.A. or the commission of the offence must be otherwise proved. The provisions therefore make the same demands for confirmation as section 257(1) makes for evidence of a confession, and the decisions on either section are relevant to both.19

A conviction is therefore not competent where the only evidence before the court is that of an accomplice even if the accused has pleaded guilty. If it is not the only evidence, and the State relies on proof elicited of the offence, every element of the offence including mens rea must be shown. But it is not necessary under section 257 to prove the identity of the offender,20 i.e., where the State relies on confirmation of the accomplice's testimony, need such confirmation implicate the accused. The other testimony need not go so far as to establish the offence as long as it confirms the accomplice's evidence in a material respect, which does not confer corroborative or to a material ingredient of the offence or as to a material issue in dispute at the trial; it means evidence tending to show that the accomplice is a generally reliable and trustworthy witness.21

There is no restriction in the section on the type of evidence which may furnish such proof or confirmation: It may be found in a confession by the accused22 or in the evidence of another accomplice.23 It may be real evidence, such as, in a murderous charge, the half-facade appearance of a child,24 or circumstantial evidence, or documentary evidence. It may come as evidence from the accused's proved conduct25 or from admissions made by him either during the trial26 or extrajudicially.27 A false statement which supported an unfavourable inference, made by the accused when he knew he was under suspicion, was held to be corroborative in R. v. Baxner,28 as has been his giving of two irreconcilable contradictory stories29 or his failure to give any explanation at all in stipulated dimensions.30 Similarly, the accused's failure to testify in court to a point factual case against him has also been held in appropriate circumstances to be corrobative, especially where he is unrepresented.31 Where the accused states several charges, corroboration of an accomplice on a particular count may be found in the testimony given by the witnesses on the other counts, on the ordinary principles of 'similar fact' evidence, discussed above. The only factors which have been laid not to be corroborative are the completely colourless ones, i.e. those which, in the particular circumstances are equally consistent with the accused's innocence as with his guilt. For example, evidence of the accused's opportunity to commit the crime at the time the accomplice alleged to have been committed, was held not to be corroborative in Nathaloo

v. R.13

It must be remembered of course that section 257 is concerned only with whether there is sufficient evidence in law for a conviction to be competent, which is for the decision of the presiding judicial officer. It remains a matter for the trier of fact to determine whether the sum total of all the evidence leaves no reasonable doubt to the mind so as to warrant a conviction of the accused,2 for the trier may be satisfied and still no conviction will result.3 The extent of corroboration required will therefore depend on the nature and quality of the evidence given by the accomplice, which will vary from case to case. In some circumstances no amount of corroboration will strengthen his evidence sufficiently to persuade a court to act with confidence on his story, for instance, where he is of tender years,4 or has been induced by violence to testify,5 or is shown to be a completely unreliable witness.6 Where the accomplice's evidence is not thoroughly defective but is nevertheless apparently trustworthy or tells an inherently improbable story, naturally more corroboration will be required than in other situations.7 But where the accomplice's testimony is in itself persuasive, the courts have required to find a corroboration even in the testimony of a demonstrably lying witness7 or a child of tender years.8

Satisfactory corroboration of the accomplice's evidence, however, does not mean his evidence must be accepted. It merely makes it more likely to be acceptable. But the requirements of the cautionary rule have still to be met. It is reasoned that an accomplice is likely to be motivated by treachery or revenge, the desire to exculpate himself or at least minimize his own guilt, or to protect others in their or his own interests. Coupled with this motive is the presupposition that an accomplice, whether because of his own participation in the 3 S.A. 50 (A.D.); v. - , 1953 (4) R.J.O. 101 at 106 (A.D.); R. v. J.C., 1964 (4) R.J.O. 101 at 107;

5 1966 N.P.D. 548.
6 See the collateral support of R. v. Kenter, 1952 (2) S.A. 40 (W.N.) and R. v. Allan, 1956 (2)
7 S.A. 149 (5), as to whether the court can give a discretion to refuse an application for the 12 N.P.D. 158 at 159 and (1956) 1 P.R. 32 at 34 (A.D.), the 15 R. v. White, 1947 W.P.D. 159 at 159.
16 In R. v. Kenter, 1952 E.D.L. 323, the evidence of an 8-year-old was held to provide siffioffence or because of his close association with others so participating, it is in a position to dock his story with a mass of convincing detail and thereby impress a tribunal with his apparent candor and honesty. Indeed, the only inaccuracy in his testimony may be the fact that he is implicating the wrong person or distorting the degrees of guilt of the actual offenders. It is these dangers, against which section 257 so signal a failure to protect the accused, that led the courts to formulate the cautionary rule of privity modelled on that observed by the English courts, and given precise formulation and authoritative stamp by the Appellate Division in R. v. Neuwirth, where Schechter J.A. said: 9

The rule of privity ... is that, even where section [257] has been satisfied, caution in dealing with the evidence of an accomplice is still imprecise. The caution on the part of the jury will often properly acquit in the absence of other evidence connecting the accused with the crime, but it is not of law or practice for the jury to do so. What is required is that the issue of fact should be made to itself, or, if the in is a jury, that it should be warned, of the special danger of convicting on the evidence of an accomplice. This special danger is not met by a corroboration of the accomplice in material respects implicating the accused, or by proof adduced that the crime charged was committed by someone; so that satisfaction of the requirements of section [257] does not sufficiently prevent the accused against the risk of false identification by an accomplice. The risk that he may be convicted wrongly although section [257] has been satisfied will be reduced, and in the most satisfactory way, if there is corroboration implicating the accused. But it will also be reduced if the accused shows himself to be a lying witness or if he does not give evidence in contradiction as explains that of the accomplice. And it will also be reduced, even if the absence of those factors, if the issue of fact underlines the peculiar danger inherent in accomplice evidence and appreciates that acceptance of the accomplice and rejection of the accused is, in such circumstances, only permissible where the results of the former so to witness and the evidence of the latter are beyond question. ... 10

A failure to exercise such caution amounts to an irregularity. 11

What is required, then, is a comparison of the respective merits of the testimony of the accomplice and the accused, and a clear superiority of the former over the latter before the caution should be regarded as safely overcome. In the absence of such clear superiority, corroboration implementing the accused to the extent alleged by the accomplice will achieve the minor result. 12

9 The Cape courts had early formulated the rule and distinguished its requirements from those of sec. 17 of the Evidence Act, 1901, corresponding to sec. 257. See, e.g., R. v. Hoffmann (1903) 46 Q.B. 596; R. v. David (1905) 10 Q.B. 268; R. v. S. (1907) 44 J.S.C. 384; R. v. Daniels (1908) 10 Q.C. 649; Lawrence v. Priaule (1908) 50 K.C. 125; R. v. Daniels (1909) 11 Q.C. 171. In the cases v. Bridges (1895) 5 Q.C. 494; Lawrence v. Priaule (1908) 50 K.C. 125; R. v. Daniels (1909) 11 Q.C. 171, the evidence of the accomplice was held to be of no weight, and the conviction was set aside. In the cases v. Bridges (1895) 5 Q.C. 494; Lawrence v. Priaule (1908) 50 K.C. 125; R. v. Daniels (1909) 11 Q.C. 171, the evidence of the accomplice was held to be of no weight, and the conviction was set aside.

10 The same was held to be the duty of the judge in the case v. Bridges (1895) 5 Q.C. 494; Lawrence v. Priaule (1908) 50 K.C. 125; R. v. Daniels (1909) 11 Q.C. 171.

11 1948 (4) S.A. 597 (A.D.) the rule has been applied in that court to this extent.

Fisher v. R.M. provides a neat illustration of the interaction between the mandatory and the customary rules of corroboration. The accused had been convicted on a charge of knowingly receiving stolen property, and the accomplice who had testified against him was the thief. Confirmation in a material respect, for the purposes of section 227, was found in the fact that the accomplice had been convicted and sentenced for the theft, and that part of the stolen property had been found in the accused's possession and part in the thief's. However, as this possession did not prove the accused's 'meas res', there was no corroboration as to his guilt, and the customary rule being thus satisfied, the conviction for receiving could not stand.

Who is to be treated as an accomplice for the purposes of the customary rule?

No precise definition has been formulated, nor does it seem that any more precision is necessary than can be supplied by the judgment in S. v. Maliego, where Holmes J.A. distinguished the two possible bases operating on accomplice testimony which accounts for the existence of the customary rule: first, the presence of a possible motive to benefit himself by false implication of others; and second, the fact that by reason of his participation in the crime alleged he has a possible position in court to deceive the jury by a plausible account of his only fiction being the deceptive substitution of the accused for the real culprit, or the addition of one or more participants for good measure.

These two factors are present in the case of a particular witness: the customary rule then comes into play, whatever the 'carnal itch' into which the witness may be classified. As an accessory after the fact is undoubtedly such a witness. The fact that the accomplice has already been convicted and sentenced for his participation in the crime does not obviate the need for caution, for although the custom which obviates the hope of obtaining more lenient treatment, the motives of revenge or desire to shield others will be unaffected as will the 'inside knowledge' of the details of the offence.

As in what corroboration is required to overcome the caution, this will again vary from case to case. In R. v. Gumaer it was found in the fact that while implicating the accused the accomplice was, at the same time, implicating a close relative. Where the confessions of the accomplice are not signed, and the accused himself—contradicting giving rise to an adverse inference, extrinsic admissions or his behaviour at the trial—both section 227 and the customary rule may thereby be met. Where the accused is charged on several counts, evidence given on other counts, if relevant to the issue of identity, may again

\[\text{notes:}\]
4. A fact of doubtful admissibility for this purpose.
fulfil a dual function. One limitation on the nature of the confirmatory evidence insisted on by Schechter A.C.J. in R. v. Mapungubwe, that the evidence of an accomplice could not be regarded as sufficient confirmation to overcome the caution required, has since been departed from by the Appellate Division. In S. v. Mapungubwe such corroboration was held to be acceptable subject to the court's awareness of the inherent dangers of convicting on accomplice evidence alone, with its special danger added to by the possibility of a conspiracy between the accomplices falsely to cast the blame on to the accused.

D. _Corroboration of Traps_

According to S. v. Afataga, a trap is a person who, with a view to securing the conviction of another, proposes certain criminal conduct to him, and himself ostensibly takes part therein. In other words, he creates the occasion for someone else to commit the offence. He is clearly to be distinguished from an accomplice, and his evidence is therefore not required to be corroborated in terms of section 237 of Act No. 56 of 1955. However, he has an interest in securing the conviction of the accused, because his employment by the police as a trap, or his remuneration, depends on his efforts yielding a satisfactory result. Even where the trap is a policeman who will receive no additional payments out of the trapping, similar motivation may be present. Accordingly, although a conviction on the uncorroborated testimony of a trap is undoubtedly competent, a cautionary rule, similar to that which has been formulated in relation to accomplice evidence, applies to the evidence in trapping cases. The trap's evidence must be scrutinized and weighed with care amounting to suspicion, and if it is not entirely satisfactory the accused should be given the benefit of the doubt. As with accomplice evidence, substantial corroboration of the trap's evidence, indicating that his story is not concocted, may overweight the caution, or it may be overcome by improbabilities or other deficiencies in the defence, or a failure by the accused to testify at all.

The judiciary has frequently expressed its disapproval of trapping operations, but such disapproval may not be translated into a refusal to convict an accused.

---

2. Hall (4) S.A. 471 (A.D.) at 496.
4. *F.D.C. 1962 (2) S.A. 32 (A.D.) at 32.
10. R. v. Lawrence (3) 1940 C.P.L. 37; R. v. Rose, 1959 (2) S.A. 408 (C) at 413-414.
17. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127. The presence of corroboration may not be sufficient as to overcome the inherent prejudice at 127.
person on evidence undoubtably competent. It may however have the effect that unless the correct procedures were scrupulously observed a conviction will fail. For instance, where the offence consists in a laying or setting of something, any possibility of the trap finding it possible to acquire or dispose of the article either that the mode proposed to be changed, must be guarded against. He should be properly searched before and after the transaction, marked money supplied, and if possible the trap should during the entire operation be kept under observation. A failure to observe these preliminary measures will not always prevent a conviction, provided the evidence and probabilities of the case are sufficiently persuasive. But it is to be remembered that the entire trapping plan is one indivisible operation and all those who participate, in whatever capacity, will therefore have the same risk in their testimony. For this reason De Villiers J.A. doubted in R. v. Booysen that corroborative testimony furnished by the evidence of a follow-trap could ever sufficiently overcome the caution, but presumably not the light of S. v. Hespel, those doubts are now well founded.

There is clearly a difference between a trap and an informant, and between a trap and a private detective, but the cases which have pointed out those differences have also stressed the similarity in the questions to be determined, and the same cautionary rule is therefore applied to all such types of witnesses.

E. CORPORATION OF THE EVIDENCE OF YOUNG CHILDREN

Unlike England, South Africa has no statutory requirement of corroboration of the evidence of young children, whether they testify unsworn or as oaths. Account is taken, however, of the dangers inherent in their evidence—be it their inexperience, their failure always to appreciate the distinction between fact and fancy, and their readiness to suggestions made to them—and a cautionary rule similar to that which applies in the case of accomplices must be observed. The trial court must be aware of the special dangers of relying on such evidence.1

2 See Goldsworthy v. The Queen (1867) 5 H.C. 54; The Queen v. Davis (1890) 13 E.D.A. 149.

In his judgment, Chief Justice Blomfield, at page 360, cited R. v. Booysen, 1954 T.C.A. 148, where it was held that the evidence of a follow-trap was insufficient to establish the identity of the accused. The court emphasized the need for caution in accepting such evidence, and the importance of corroborative testimony. It also noted that the principles applicable to accomplices were also relevant in such cases.

2. See Goldsworthy v. The Queen (1867) 5 H.C. 54; The Queen v. Davis (1890) 13 E.D.A. 149.
There is no rigid requirement of corroboration here any more than in the other customary rules. Each matter as the age and intelligence of the child, the topic on which it testifies, and other circumstances as whether the accused was previously known to the child so as to reduce the risk of mistaken identity, will all be taken into account in weighing the evidence against the accused. If the nature of the child's evidence is such that it is easily within the comprehension of a child of that age and understanding, corroboration need not be insisted on; if not, corroboration will be required to the degree that the child's evidence is unsatisfactory and confusing. If the child is extremely young, such extensive corroboration will be required to persuade the court to act on its evidence that a conviction may not be obtained; or it may in fact not be worth calling the child at all if this can be avoided.

While there seems to be nothing in principle to prevent the evidence of one child being corroborated by that of another, who also presumably may be sworn or unsworn,39 even substantial corroboration furnished in this manner may be insufficient to overcome the caution.40 The corroboration applicable to this cautionary rule is evidence to confirm the child's story on that ingredient of guilt which happens to be in dispute—the commission of the offence, the identity of the offender, or whatever other point is in issue in the particular case. Thus in R. v. C.41 where the accused denied the 14-year-old complainant's whole story, the Appellate Division sifted the evidence to discern corroboration in separate stages, first as to the commission of the act and second as to identification of the offender.42 In regard to the argument that proof of facts consistent with the innocence of the accused can never be corroborative, the Court also stated:

A fact could be a polestar towards the probability of another fact without being, by itself, anything more than an independent circumstance of such a fact, nothing to any weight in itself, would, I submit, be called corroboration. ... The cumulative effect of a number of points of consistency from different angles was very much greater than the mere totality of those weights taken in isolation.

P. CORROBORATION IN SEXUAL CHARGES

Where the offence charged is of a sexual nature and the complainant is an unmarried, or left unremembered defence, or her evidence requires corroboration.

39 R. v. Macleod, 1921 R. & M. 898 (E. C.) at 899. Further that a child is capable of understanding was based on the theory that a child aged at least 6 is capable of understanding.
199

... under the rules relating to the testimony of accomplices, discussed above. If the complainant is an accomplice, as in charges of rape, under-age rape, incestual assault, or eavesdropping, section 251 is of no application, but because of the nature of the charge, a cautionary note similar to that applied to accomplices must be observed. The reasons for the rule are: the fact that charges of indecent omissions are easy to formulate and particularly hard to refute; that jealousy, the desire for revenge, and sexual disturbances or fear-based hysteria find their most obvious outlet in the formulation of such omissions; and that an unwanted pregnancy is easily attributed to acts allegedly not consensual or to persons who, if fixed with pregnancy, will be able financially to provide for the child. The reasons given here for the most part have been formulated in situations where the complainant is a woman or young girl, but the rule applies equally irrespective of the age or sex of the complainant.

It is clear that a conviction for a sexual offence on the uncorroborated evidence of the complainant is competent, for the rule is not one of law but of practice. But however convincing her testimony, the court is required to warn itself of the special dangers inherent in relying on it alone. The mere existence of ourosis may not suffice. For example, in R. v. W. the Appellate Division set aside a conviction where the magistrate had been aware of the need for caution on account of the youth of the complainant but did not appear to have directed his attention to the additional dangers arising out of the particular nature of the charge.

Beating these dangers in mind, her evidence may be sufficiently correlative to persuade the court to convict on it alone. If it is not, corroboration in a material degree may augment it enough to convince the court of her honesty and accuracy. The corroboration here required need not necessarily relate to the implication of the accused, but it must go to whatever is in dispute in the case. Whether the evidence is a denial of the commission of the act charged, or turns on the issue of consent or on the identity of the offender, it is to that aspect that the confirmation must be directed. And the presence of substantial corroboration may yet be insufficient, for the court must still be persuaded as to its

20 [R. v. Wil, 1949 (2) S.A. 772 (A.D.) at 780.]
21 The impression of the complainant's nervousness and grief which led her to consider that her husband was absent from the house in Elizabeth v. R. (1948) N.P.D. 1, and her nervousness in giving evidence, illustrates one of the main dangers against which the rule is directed, to wit that the evidence is unseasoned and unconvincing. The real victim, however, too often in such cases is the innocent man, for the innocent man is usually less likely to either face the sentence or to commit it.
22 [R. v. M., 1947 (4) S.A. 489 (N.) at 491.] A witness was Elizabeth, in idem, and, 354 (N.) at 395.
23 [R. v. R., 1949 (2) S.A. 772 (A.D.) at 780.]
24 [R. v. R., 1949 (2) S.A. 772 (A.D.) at 780.]
25 [R. v. R., 1949 (2) S.A. 772 (A.D.) at 780.]
weight, which remains ultimately a requirement of cogent credibility and probability.

What is corroborative naturally varies according to the circumstances of each case. Proof of a contemporaneous complaint is not corroboration since it is not admissible as an exception to the hearsay rule, i.e., for the truth of its contents, but is merely relevant to the consistency of the complainant's present testimony with her conduct at the time. It follows that her distress at the time also is not corroboration if it forms part of the complaint, but if not, may be regarded as having some corroborative value if there is no reason to suspect that the distress was simulated. The general principle applies so to sexual cases as to all others, that evidence which is entirely consistent with the innocence of the accused has no corroborative effect. On the other hand, where the accused admits a fact deposed by the complainant but gives it an innocent explanation—a situation which has arisen in several cases—it has been held that he is not deprived of his admission of its corroborative character, since the court may still, in drawing its own inferences from the admitted facts, accept the complainant's version rather than the accused's of the facts' significance in the occurrence.

G. CORROBORATION OF IDENTITY EVIDENCE

It is well recognized that the identification of an accused person as the criminal is a matter notoriously fraught with error, and in recent years the Appellate Division has frequently directed trial courts to exercise extreme caution in testing identity evidence. To this end, matters such as the identifying witness's previous acquaintance with the accused, the distinctiveness of the alleged criminal's appearance or clothing, the opportunities for observation or recognition, and the time lapse between the occurrence and the trial, should be investigated in detail, since without such careful investigation a reasonable doubt as to the identity of the accused must persist.

---

9. In C. v. R., 1970 (2) S.A. 214 (N.), a charge of rape involving a charge of armed robbery was set aside on the ground that the evidence of the accused was not corroborated by the evidence of the co-accused.

10. See, e.g., R. v. M., 1962 (S.A. 164 (D.R.);

11. See, e.g., R. v. M., 1962 (S.A. 164 (D.R.);

12. See, e.g., R. v. M., 1962 (S.A. 164 (D.R.);

The direction of the inquiry enjoined will be dictated by the circumstances, but for a witness... describe in detail the particular features of the criminal may be of demonstrable value where the latter was not previously known to him, but where he was so known, it would be more significant to test the opportunities for recognition. In this inquiry the honesty of the identifying witness may be of subsidiary importance. The court is concerned not so much with his sincerity as with his accuracy.

The fact that the witness has previously identified the accused as the criminal may be given weight in evaluating his evidence, but if this prior identification occurred at an identification parade lack of proper safeguards in its supervision may cast suspicion on the evidence. Examples of such a lack would be the fact that the accused was the only person on the parade dressed in the manner earlier described by the complainant or the fact that a number of persons called to identify were given the opportunity to compare and collate their several recollections of the criminal's features, or the failure on the part of the police to warn the prospective witnesses that the alleged criminal might not be on the parade (a precaution necessary to remove any impression that there was a duty in point out somebody).

A voice identification parade may be of use when the criminal's voice was sufficiently distinctive in timbre, pitch or accent, and the usual safeguards in running the parade should be observed.

If no identification parade was held, the fact that the witness is identifying the accused as the criminal for the first time at the trial will also weaken his evidence, as the corroborating effect of seeing the accused in the dock can hardly be overestimated. Naturally, where the witness showed himself unable to identify the accused at a parade, his evidence is similarly deprived of value.

In all the cautionary rule relating to identification evidence has been particularly insisted on where the charge relates to faction fighting or inter-tribal feuds, apparently influenced by the early practice in this regard of the Native High Court. In these cases there will usually be a motive to libel indiscriminately any member of the opposing tribe as a participant, and the opportunities for observation will in the nature of things have been limited, because of the degree of activity and the numbers of persons involved. Trials in such circumstances should nevertheless be treated as extreme cases calling for the stringent... application of the general principle, and not as sui generis requiring the formulation of particular rules.\(^{10}\)

H. CORROBORATION OF THE EVIDENCE OF PROSTITUTES

The Transvaal courts almost from the earliest times laid down, as a matter of practice, a requirement of caution where the court is faced with the evidence of prostitutes.\(^{11}\) All the reported cases have turned on matters as to which the witness may have had a motive to misrepresent—e.g., charges of living on the proceeds of prostitution—even if she was not technically to be brought within the ken of the accomplice rules of corroboration.\(^{12}\) But the harsh glare of suspicion directed at this kind of witness seems to have been generated not so much by this consideration as purely by instinctive moral disapproval. Thus, in R. v. Christo\(^{13}\) Welzels J. regarded the unreliability of the prosti± witness as increased by the fact of her drunken habits.

However, Ceullives C.J., dealing in R. v. George\(^{14}\) with a charge of murder, considered that the witness's profession, and her addiction to drink, would not per se impugn her credibility in the absence of any motive or other motive for implicating the accused.\(^{15}\)

II. THE BEST EVIDENCE RULE

Once considered to be the basic principle of the law of evidence, the best evidence rule has in modern times lost most of its general importance.\(^{16}\)

This eclipse relates particularly to the inclusionary aspect of the rule, so that it can no longer be argued that evidence normally inadmissible should be received where none other can be obtained.\(^{17}\) Nor is a party any longer obliged to produce the best evidence available to him by lesser evidence being held inadmissible.\(^{18}\) Thus circumstantial evidence may be led even where direct evidence could have been brought, and the production of real evidence is not a prerequisite to the reception of oral testimony concerning it.\(^{19}\) However, a 12 See Selman's case at 594; Weinberg's case at 654.

---

13 R. v. H. 1949 T.P.D. 420 at 422, A.421-2. The learned Judge said: "This is not a matter of yesterday; it is an experience that dates back thousands of years. We know that these persons are unreliable, that they are often spiritless and malicious, and would not hesitate to bring a false charge against a person who had crossed their path...".
14 R. v. E. 1933 (3) S.A. 387 (A.D.) at 393.
15 In the only other Appellate Division case where the matter has arisen, R. v. Zeefie, 1932 (1) S.A. 409 (A.D.), the fact that the witness was a prostitute was held to affect the credibility of her story where the accused was charged with having insulted her to evince a sexual offence. In these circumstances logically the probabilities of the case would always be affected by her calling. See esp. the judgment of Selman J.A. at 402.
18 A peculiarly South African example is R. v. Adel, 1948 (1) S.A. 654 (A.D.), where Ceullives J.A. held, at 668-9, that while proof of descent is the best evidence of a person's race, evidence of reports and the real evidence of his appearance is nevertheless admissible.
The court should not question the accused about his age if he does not volunteer evidence or make an unsworn statement, as pointed out in S. v. Groten, 1970 (1) S.A. 368 (C)). party's failure to offer the best evidence he can is likely to cause an unfavourable judicial comment on the weight of that which he does produce.

In a few decisions the continued application of the rule can be seen where the evidence tendered was considered so unreliable that it was excluded entirely. For example, in R. v. Tepper, evidence that the accused had been tracked and identified by police dogs was held inadmissible, on the ground that the process was too uncertain to justify the drawing of any legal inference therefrom.

The best evidence rule survives most rigorously in relation to proof of marriage and proof of age, where such facts are closely in issue, as for example in charges of bigamy on the one hand, and of under-age rape on the other. Secondary evidence will be received only where these facts are purely collateral and not of vital issue in the case.

The best proof of age is the evidence of the mother or of witnesses to the birth. A witness's statement of his own age is immissible as hearsay.

Hebdomal certificates and birth certificates are the best, but the latter (with marriage and death certificates) have expressly been made inadmissible by statute. Where no such evidence is available, in the case of a child the judicial officer is empowered by section 368 of the Criminal Procedure Act to estimate the age from the child's appearance. Where this is done it must be set out in full on the record, and wherever possible medical evidence should be obtained to supplement the court's observation.

The best evidence of marriage, apart from that of the officiating officer or of witnesses to the ceremony, is a duly authenticated marriage certificate, and only if this is unobtainable may secondary evidence of cohabitation and reports be led.

A birth or marriage certificate is admissible where it was executed from a register kept in the form in the foreign country, and certified by the proper officer in whose custody the register was.

The best evidence rule is also said to uphold the rule relating to proof of age.
documents, but the insistence in this regard on primary evidence, viz., the production of the document itself, historically long antedates the formulation of the best evidence rule. For further discussion, see above under Documentary Evidence.

III. CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A criminal charge raises two main questions: first, the corpus delicti—has the crime alleged been committed? and secondly, was the accused its perpetrator? It is the establishment of the latter which in general involves the greatest demands upon the machinery of the administration of justice, but the former may also cause difficulties.

In simpler cases, these two questions may be established by direct evidence. The accused may have been observed, by someone familiar with his appearance, in the act of committing the dence, whose body has been examined and identified. Where however such relatively straightforward evidence is not available, any aspect of fact which could have been proved directly may in general be proved by circumstantial evidence. For instance, in a murder trial the offender's criminal intention may be inferred from the nature of the weapon or from the nature of the act, and the cause of death from the sta the situation of the body. It is not even necessary that the body should have been found, if the alleged victim's death is a fair inference in the circumstances from his disappearance. Similarly, in a charge of theft the fact that the goods were stolen may be proved circumstantially. The circumstantial evidence may also indicate the identity of the criminal. Thus the accused may be linked with the offence by his motive to commit it, by his previous threats to commit it, by his absence from the vicinity of the crime, or by the nature of the weapon or the nature of the act.

Where it is necessary to rely on circumstantial evidence, proof may be facilitated by the existence of a presumption of law, so that on proof of one fact the court is required or entitled to draw a conclusion as to another fact subject usually to evidence in rebuttal. Where no such presumption applies the inference to be drawn from the facts is a matter of logic, because the danger of a wrong judicial inference is added to the always present danger of misheads or disinterested witnesses. Two cardinal rules of logical inference as laid down by Waterman J.A. in R. v. Roese must be observed:

1. The inference sought to be drawn must be consistent with the proved facts; if it is not, the inference cannot be drawn.
2. The proved facts should be such that they exclude every reasonable inference from them save the one sought to be drawn. If they do not exclude other reasonable inferences, then there must be a doubt whether the inference sought to be drawn is correct.

For further reading:
- R. v. Linke, 1939 A.D. 182 at 211.
The second rule is of course a statement of the criminal standard of proof, simply another way of saying that where the incriminatory facts are as compatible with the innocence of the accused as with his guilt, the inference of guilt should not be drawn. Thus proof that the accused, a burglar, was suddenly in possession of money does not set up even a prima facie case that he was the thief, in the absence of further evidence that he alone had had the opportunity to steal, or some evidence linking the numbers of the stolen banknotes with those in the accused's possession. Similarly, the fact that stock in transit does not prove it was stolen unless the possibility that it strayed has been excluded. Again, the mere presence of the accused's fingerprint on the car he was alleged to have stolen and stripped was held not to justify conviction since the print might have been placed on the car in a number of ways of which the possibility that he was unlawfully working on the car was only one.

It has been said in the Appellate Division that each separate innocent possibility need not be considered separately as long as the aggregate of these possibilities remains negligible, but as Scheiner J.A. has since commented, the weight of the collective hypothesis cannot be more than the sum of their individual likelihood.

False statements by the accused or suspects contrived by him, such as suggesting to have produced evidence given on his behalf, can of course be used to assist in drawing the inference of his guilt, as may his failure to testify or to advance an innocent explanation. However, it should be remembered that such factors are essentially insubstantial, and may be accompanied for innocently, so that the inference of guilt should not be based largely on these considerations. See above, p. ***.

---

65 See above, p. 390. 17
69 De Flesse v. Wolfenden, 1917 A.D. 296 at 301.
70 R. v. de Flesse, 1924 A.D. 325 at 331.
71 J. v. Smith, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
72 Ex parte Suber, 1923 (2) A. 524 at 532.
73 Ex parte Suber, 1923 (2) A. 524 at 532.
74 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
75 R. v. Smith, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
76 R. v. Smith, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
77 Ex parte Suber, 1923 (2) A. 524 at 532.
78 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
79 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
80 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
81 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
82 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
83 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
84 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
85 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
86 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
87 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
88 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
89 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
90 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
91 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
92 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
93 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
94 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
95 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
96 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
97 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
98 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
99 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
100 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
101 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
102 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
103 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
104 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
105 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
106 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
107 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
108 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
109 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
110 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
111 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
112 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
113 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
114 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
115 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
116 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
117 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
118 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
119 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
120 Ex parte Suber and Petition, 1925 A.D. 325 at 329, approving Ex parte Suber and Petition.
INDEX

Accomplice compellability  29
  competency  30-1
  corroboration of  50, 139, 190-6
  indemnity  30 statements by  125-6, 127-8, 137 who is  190-1, 193-4

Accused character (see Character)  207-9 competency for prosecution  20, 149-95
  cross-examination as to credit  175 silence of [and see Prima Facie case]  175 sworn evidence  205, 207 as witness  23, 27, 28 when pleading guilty  186

Accused's spouse
  compellability  31
  competency  31
  who is  31

Admissibility evidence on commission  39, 138, 139, 143
  how determined  39
  interrogatories  36

Admissions formal  6-9, 186 informal  116
  by consent  116, 124
  freely and voluntarily made  119 intoxication  119 proof of  120 alibi  125
  statements in presence of a party  125 vicious  48

Admission  39, 144, 166

Affidavit  48

Affirmation  95

Afterthought, imputation of  81, 117, 203

Age, proof of <table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Bankers' books</th>
<th>110</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Best evidence rule</td>
<td>42-4, 82, 202</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Burden of proof</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>aggravation of sentence</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>balance of probabilities</td>
<td>172</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>beyond reasonable doubt</td>
<td>172</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>evidential burden</td>
<td>172</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>foreign law</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>generally</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>mitigation of sentence</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>prima facie case</td>
<td>176, 204-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>statutory alterations</td>
<td>176</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Certificates</td>
<td>38-9, 107, 109, 203</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Character</td>
<td>73-80, 149-55</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>of accused</td>
<td>56, 152</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>of complainant</td>
<td>64-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>of witness</td>
<td>86, 181, 204-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Circumstantial evidence</td>
<td>122, 124, 137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Co-accused [see also under Accomplice]</td>
<td>27</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>confrontation of</td>
<td>26, 153</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>cross-examination of</td>
<td>27, 125-6, 127, 137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>evidence for or against</td>
<td>24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>extra-judicial statement of</td>
<td>26-9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>unsworn statement</td>
<td>127-8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>witness for prosecution</td>
<td>127-8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Co-accusals, statements by</td>
<td>37-8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Commission</td>
<td>127-8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Common purpose</td>
<td>25, 11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Competency</td>
<td>21</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>accused</td>
<td>22-3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>deaf-mutes</td>
<td>22-3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>judicial officers</td>
<td>20-4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>mental impairment</td>
<td>21-2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>young children</td>
<td>56-9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Complaints</td>
<td>188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Confessions</td>
<td>135-7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>corroboration of</td>
<td>137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>free and voluntary</td>
<td>160</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>false officer</td>
<td>135</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>preparatory examination</td>
<td>134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>proof of</td>
<td>129-32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>sound and sober senses</td>
<td>129-32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>that are</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Topic</td>
<td>Page(s)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>---------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Corroboration</td>
<td>185, 190-6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- accomplice evidence</td>
<td>185</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- confessions</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- identity</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- plea of guilty</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- prostitutes</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- single witness</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- sexual charges</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- theft</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- young children</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Credibility (see also Witness, impeachment of)</td>
<td>191</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Credit, cross-examination as to</td>
<td>62-7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cross-examination</td>
<td>62 ff</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- contradicting answers in</td>
<td>63</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- failure to</td>
<td>64-6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- of accused</td>
<td>149-55</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Court, questions by</td>
<td>24, 59, 67-8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Deceased persons, hearsay declarations by</td>
<td>94-107</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Declarations against interest</td>
<td>97</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Declarations as to prejudice</td>
<td>102, 143</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Declarations as to public rights</td>
<td>103</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Declarations in course of duty</td>
<td>95</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Discretion of judge</td>
<td>1, 5, 135</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Documents</td>
<td>40, 42-6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- ancient documents</td>
<td>40-6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- bankers' best evidence rule</td>
<td>40-4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- companies', associations', etc. previous inconsistent statement</td>
<td>111</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- proof of</td>
<td>65-6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- public documents</td>
<td>107</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- refreshing memory</td>
<td>35-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- stamping of</td>
<td>46</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dying declarations</td>
<td>100</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Electronic instruments 42

English law as foreign law 15
as source of law of evidence 4

Evidence aggravation of sentence 37, 178 before trial 37, 112 commission 37-8 definition 35 given in open court 37, 178 mitigation of sentence 112 prior proceedings 36 oral

Evidence in chief impeaching own witness 48 leading questions 49

Expert evidence affidavit 44 opinion 44-7 when necessary 15, 42, 46-7 who is expert 15, 144

Foreign law, proof of 15-16

Handwriting, proof of 46-7, 124

Hearsey admissions 116
confessions 126
declarations by deceased persons 96-307 implied assertions 112
prior proceedings 109
public documents 86
res gesta 109 statutory exceptions to hearsay rule 60-3 what is 51

Hostile witness
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Topic</th>
<th>Page(s)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Identification of person</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>-corroboration</td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>previous</td>
<td>55</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Illegally obtained evidence</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Imputations on character of prosecution witnesses</td>
<td>62, 152</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Inadmissible evidence consent to admit</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>elicited by defence</td>
<td>60, 61, 134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Inspection in loco, by court</td>
<td>36, 43-2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Intention, proof of</td>
<td>69, 91-2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interpreter</td>
<td>47, 65</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interrogatories</td>
<td>58</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Judge</td>
<td>1, 2, 5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>discretion to exclude evidence</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>inspection in loco</td>
<td>55</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>private inspection of evidence</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Judges' Rules</td>
<td>120-2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Judgments as evidence</td>
<td>147</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Judicial notice</td>
<td>8-15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ascertainable facts</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>custom</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>local matters</td>
<td>10-11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>public matters</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>S.A. law</td>
<td>12-14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Law, proof of</td>
<td>12-14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>South African</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>foreign</td>
<td>127, 142</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>opinion evidence of</td>
<td>49</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Leading questions</td>
<td>125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Letters, failure to answer</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marriage, proof of</td>
<td>87, 142, 203</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mechanical instruments</td>
<td>52</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Topic</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oaths</td>
<td>47-8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Opinion evidence</td>
<td>142</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>of expert</td>
<td>144</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>of laymen</td>
<td>145</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oral evidence</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>cross-examination</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>evidence in chief</td>
<td>56 ff</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>examination of witnesses on oath</td>
<td>48 ff</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>re-examination</td>
<td>47</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Photographs</td>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Peace officer, confessions to</td>
<td>137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Plea of guilty, corroboration of</td>
<td>136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pointing out by accused</td>
<td>141</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Physical condition, statements to prove</td>
<td>139</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Preparatory examinations</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>confessions at</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>evidence in</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Presumptions, generally</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>of fact</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>foreign law same as domestic</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>notarial accuracy</td>
<td>172</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>omnia praesumuntur rite esse non</td>
<td>180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ownership</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>paternity</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>possession</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>res ipsa loquitur</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>virginity</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Previous acquittal of accused</td>
<td>178, 204</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Previous consistent statements</td>
<td>181, 204</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Previous convictions</td>
<td>147</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>generally</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>of accused</td>
<td>79</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>of witness</td>
<td>64</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Previous inconsistent statements</td>
<td>65</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>by opponent's witness</td>
<td>66</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>privileged</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>by own witness</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Prime facial proof accused's alibi Certificate
Generally
Prior proceedings, evidence in Privilege against self-incrimination income tax matters informer judicial matters professional State what is Prosecutor, function of Public documents
Public matters hearsay declarations of judicial notice of Real evidence pointed out by accused Re-examination
Refreshing memory
Racial similarity, proof of Reference Reputation of accused generally of public matters of witness Testimony hearsay previous consistent statement Sexual cases complaints corroboration
Single witnesses
Sources of law of evidence
Spontaneous exclamations 3-5
Statements from the Bar 92
Statements in presence of a party 37
Statistical evidence 122
Tape recordings 82
Testamentary declarations 41
Traps 4-20

Unsworn statement of accused — see under Accused

Witnesses
compellability 19
competency [see also under Competency] 17-19 failure to call 176
Failure to cross-examine 59 hostile 51
how determined 18
impeaching, by opponent 62 ff impeaching, by party calling 49-50 single 184 refusal to testify 19-2

Young children competency as witnesses 21-2 corroboration of 197
unsworn 48