CONSTRUCTING SEXUAL IDENTITIES WITHIN ‘SUGAR DADDY’ RELATIONSHIPS: A CASE STUDY OF SEXUALITY CONSTRUCTS AMONG STUDENTS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF THE WITWATERSRAND

By
Tola Gbalajobi

A dissertation submitted in partial fulfillment of requirements for the degree of Masters of the Arts at the University of the Witwatersrand
Johannesburg
2010
DECLARATION OF ORIGINALITY

I hereby declare that this thesis, unless specifically indicated to the contrary in the text, is my own original work, and that it has not been submitted for any degree at another university

Adetola Funmilayo Gbalajobi
Department of Anthropology
University of the Witwatersrand
Johannesburg
2010
Acknowledgments

First and foremost, through no ability of my own only could this project have been completed. I thank God for giving me strength particularly through the difficult times.

I wish to thank my mother who is the embodiment of strength, dedication and compassion. Her untiring commitment in providing me with support through this academic and personal journey is eternally appreciated.

To my late father. Words can’t express. Thank you for everything.

I wish to express my genuine appreciation and gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. Terry-Ann Selikow, for providing me with invaluable guidance throughout this project. Also, for motivating me in times of indifference and despair and helping me reach my unrecognized potential.

To Terence, for being there for me in every way that I can conceive and for the ways I cannot. Also, for providing me with knowledge and experiences that have undoubtedly given me a greater insight into love and life.

To all of my family and friends at home in Canada, I truly appreciate the support that you have continuously given. Though absent in person, they are ever-present in mind and spirit. I also thank my friends and ‘family’ here in South Africa for helping me better understand the true meanings of friendship.

I am very grateful for the positive and reinforcing social networks that have shaped me into the person that I claim to be today.

Finally, I wish to extend sincere gratitude to my key informants and all of my participants. Not only have you made this study possible, you have challenged and enlightened me in many invaluable ways. Your enthusiasm throughout this project is greatly appreciated and respected. I hope that this work tells the stories that you eagerly and entrustingly gave to me.
ABSTRACT

This research investigates self-constructs of female sexuality among students at the University of the Witwatersrand who are engaging in ‘sugar daddy’ relationships (SDRs). I shall focus on how young women understand and enact their sexuality within these relationships and how they navigate the social, cultural and economic structures in which these relationships take place. Insights into how individuals conceptualize sex, sexuality, their given meanings and how they situate their sexual selves in these transactional relationships is sought. Further, sexuality is placed in a theoretical framework of structure and agency. How power is being exerted and inhibited on various levels will be explored within a context of vulnerability to HIV/AIDS infection. This research is critical given the high HIV prevalence rate amongst young black women in South Africa. Critical realist discourse analysis will be utilized to analyze narratives. The development of a rapport with young women in SDR has given me an ‘insider’ perspective and privilege to conduct this research.
Table Of Contents

PART I:

Chapter 1: Introductory Chapter  ................................................................................................................. 1
  1.1 Introduction............................................................................................................................................... 1
  1.2 Key Aims of Study ...................................................................................................................................... 4
  1.3 Structure of Thesis .................................................................................................................................... 5

Chapter 2: Literature Review ......................................................................................................................... 6
  2.1 Shifting Paradigms in Sexuality Research ............................................................................................... 6
  2.2 What is Sexuality? ..................................................................................................................................... 7
  2.3 What is Transactional Sex? ..................................................................................................................... 8
    2.3.1 Transactional Sex vs. ‘Prostitution’ ...................................................................................................... 9
    2.3.2 From ‘Survival’ Towards Consumption ............................................................................................ 9
    2.3.3 Defining Transactional Sex and ‘Sugar Daddy’ Relationships ............................................................ 9
  2.4 Beyond the Transaction .......................................................................................................................... 10
  2.5 Social Meanings of Money ..................................................................................................................... 11
  2.6 The ‘Purchase of Intimacy’ ................................................................................................................... 11
  2.7 Structure and Agency ............................................................................................................................. 12
  2.8 Power ....................................................................................................................................................... 14

Chapter 3: Research Methods ......................................................................................................................... 16
  3.1 Aim of Research ....................................................................................................................................... 16
  3.2 Theoretical Framework .......................................................................................................................... 17
  3.3 Research Design and Data Collection ..................................................................................................... 18
    3.3.1 Participants Group and Recruitment ................................................................................................. 18
    3.3.2 Recruitment and Procedure .............................................................................................................. 19
  3.4 Discourse Analysis ................................................................................................................................... 21
  3.5 Ethical Considerations ............................................................................................................................ 21
  3.6 Limitations of Study ............................................................................................................................... 23
  3.7 Moments of Reflexivity............................................................................................................................ 24

PART II:

Chapter 4: Background and Setting of ‘Sugar Daddy’ Relationships at The University  .................................. 25
  4.1 Social Setting ............................................................................................................................................ 26
  4.2 Structural Influences Informing the Sexuality of Young Women ............................................................ 26
    4.2.1 The Political Economy of Sex ........................................................................................................... 27
    4.2.2 The Family ......................................................................................................................................... 27
    4.2.3 Mass Media ....................................................................................................................................... 29
    4.2.4 University Setting and Peer Pressure ............................................................................................... 30
  4.3 Structural Influences Facilitating ‘Sugar Daddy’ Relationships ............................................................... 33
    4.3.1 Independence Away From Home ...................................................................................................... 33
    4.3.2 Financial Dependence ....................................................................................................................... 34

Chapter 5: ‘Sugar Daddy’ Relationships ........................................................................................................ 37
  5.1 Is It ‘Prostitution’? ................................................................................................................................... 37
  5.2 ‘Needs’ vs. Consumption ....................................................................................................................... 40
Chapter 11: Conclusions ........................................................................................................... 105
11.1 Central Findings ............................................................................................................. 105
Bibliography .......................................................................................................................... 116
Appendices .............................................................................................................................
  Appendices A: Map of Participants’ Background Information ............................................. 125
  Appendices B: Subject Information Sheet-Invite to Participate ........................................... 126
  Appendices C: Interview Consent Form ............................................................................. 129
  Appendices D: Audio Recording Consent Form ................................................................. 130