

https://dspace.org/

High without respite: a study of drug literature

Kowalska, Eva

2014-06-24
http://hdl.handle.net10539/14829

Downloaded from a DSpace repository. https://dspace.org/

Contents:

Acknowledgements i
Declaration ii
Charles Baudelaire, 'Get High' iii

Feed Your Head: The Making of a Literary Drug Culture
One: History 1
Two: Literature 6
Three: Text and Intertext 13
Four: Studies and Methods 24

So Far Out: Intertextuality and the Opiate Novel
One: Frames of Reference 30
Two: De Quincey's Contrary Confession 33
Three: Trocchi's Anti-Novel 49
Four: The Unwriting of William Lee 61
Five: Exposures and Reflections 69

Subjective Effects: Writing Counterculture and Psychedelia
One: Set and Setting 78
Two: Experiments and Protocols 83
Three: New Drugs, New Journalism 94
Four: Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas 99
Five: The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test 115
Six: Limits and Continuities 127

Excessive Need: The Economics of Addiction
One: Substances and Society 131
Two: Addiction and Autonomy 142
Three: Welsh's Heroin Fictions: Not Wanting Anything 151
Four: Ellis's Cocaine Novels: Wanting Nothing 162
Five: Trade and Text 172

Correspondences: The Poetics of High
One: The Possibilities of Drug Poetry 176
Two: Keats, Wieners, and 'Drug Lovers' 183
Three: Baudelaire, Ginsberg and Transcendence 193
Four: Visions of Icarus 202
Five: Coleridge, Kerouac and Suffering 208
Six: Recreational Writing 213

Deep Water: The Spaces of Drug Literature
One: A Parable 218
Two: Contact Highs 228
Three: The Drug Idiom 231

Bibliography 235