

https://dspace.org/

Trash, Boer, and Brat – A Redemptive Theatre Performance

Khutsoane, Tshego; Nkosi, Les; Janse Van Vuuren, Petro

2020-07

Arts Research Africa, The Wits School of Arts, University of the Witwatersrand

https://hdl.handle.net/10539/29227

Can an arts-based research enquiry reach into the silences between us as South Africans? This workshop on “Redemptive Theatre” showed how playing with dominant, habitual, and unpopular narratives can disrupt boundaries, challenge stereotypes, and, potentially, redeem us to each other.

Downloaded from a DSpace repository. https://dspace.org/

DOI: https://doi.org/10.17605/OSF.IO/QYEXS

PERFORMANCE-LECTURE

TRASH, BOER, AND BRAT— A REDEMPTIVE THEATRE PERFORMANCE

TSHEGO KHUTSOANE, LES NKOSI, AND PETRO JANSE VAN VUUREN

This article is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International (CC BY 4.0) licence:
https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0

Can an arts-based research enquiry reach into the silences between us as South Africans? This workshop on “Redemptive Theatre” showed how playing with dominant, habitual, and unpopular narratives can disrupt boundaries, challenge stereotypes, and, potentially, redeem us to each other.

Tshego is a theatre director, and lecturer and project manager at the Department of Drama for Life in the Wits School of Arts; tshegokhutsoane@hotmail.com

Les is a Drama for Life alumnus and a professional Applied Theatre practitioner; lesnkosi@gmail.com

Petro is a lecturer and the Head of the Drama for Life department in the Wits School of Arts; petro.jansevanvuuren@wits.ac.za