

DSPACE

<https://dspace.org/>

On practising psychoanalytic psychotherapy in the absense of explicit transference manifestations : A clinical enquiry

Da Silva, Linda Jean

2008-11-24T09:33:13Z

<http://hdl.handle.net/10539/5840>

ON PRACTICING PSYCHOANALYTIC PSYCHOTHERAPY IN THE ABSENCE OF EXPLICIT TRANSFERENCE MANIFESTATIONS. A CLINICAL ENQUIRY.

LINDA JEAN DA SILVA

0010160E

A research report submitted to the Faculty of Arts of the University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, in partial fulfilment of the degree of Master of Arts in Clinical Psychology.

March 2007

DECLARATION

I declare that this research report is my own unaided work. It is submitted for the degree of Master of Arts in Clinical Psychology in the University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg. It has not been submitted before for any other degree or examination in any other university.

Signed this day of 20

Linda Jean Da Silva

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

My sincere thanks to:

- * Dr Susan van Zyl for supervising this project;
- * The four participating therapists for contributing freely of their time and invaluable clinical experience on a somewhat difficult and tricky topic;
- * My husband Joe, daughters Jessica and Isabella and ‘marvellous’ Mabel;
- * My wonderful family and friends for supporting and encouraging me to complete this work;
- * Susan Williamson my friend and colleague for her continuous encouragement and support.
- * Janet Scott for her friendship and support.

ABSTRACT

The aim of this study involved exploring qualitatively how local therapists practice psychoanalytic psychotherapy in the absence of explicit transference manifestations among the kinds of patients who never make any directly verbal or affectively intense (either positive or negative) references to the figure of the therapist.

Close phenomenological analysis of the work of four therapists revealed striking parallels with the work of internationally based psychoanalysts among similar kinds of patients in analysis centering on the role of the countertransference as a key analytic tool in the seeming absence of explicit transference.

While the findings of this study also revealed striking divergences from classical analysis and convergences with more contemporary psychoanalytic practice, these all emerged on Winnicottian terrain.

The conceptual distinctions between interpreting or working in the transference as transference, interpreting or working in the transference as non-transference and the idea of working with rather than directly in the implicit transference emerged as major findings of this study. HOW transference material is treated and interpreted emerged as playing a key role in understanding how psychoanalytic psychotherapy is practiced among the kinds of patients with whom integrated and intact ego functioning cannot be assumed. The central role of the countertransference when working in the transference as non-transference and interpreting or working with implicit transference material rather than directly in it, emerged as playing a central role not only in doing the kind of work that according to Winnicott involves ‘managing the setting’, but in positioning the therapists to maintain technical neutrality by assuming the very role that involves meeting the patient’s ego needs for symbiosis with interpretations that bring news of sameness. Limitations of this study and implications for further research are discussed.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

DECLARATION	ii
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	iii
ABSTRACT	iv
CHAPTER ONE : INTRODUCTION	1
CHAPTER TWO : LITERATURE REVIEW	16
2.1 Freud – The development of psychoanalysis and the discovery of the transference	16
2.2 Freud – Kinds of transferences and their features	24
2.3 Freud – The transference inside and outside of analysis	26
2.4 Freud – On the nature, role and management of the transference in the classical psychoanalytic situation.	28
2.5 Freud – On the question of analysability	33
2.6 Melanie Klein – On the question of analysability	38
2.7 Winnicott – On the question of analysability	49
2.8 On practicing psychoanalysis in the seeming absence of transference – a review of the contemporary psychoanalytic literature	67
CHAPTER THREE : METHOD	91
3.1 Introduction	91
3.2 Respondents	93
3.3 Data Collection	95

3.3.1	Data-generating questions	95
3.3.2	Data-generating situation	96
3.4	Ethical considerations	97
3.5	Data Analysis	97
3.5.1	Initial reading of the interviews/protocols	97
3.5.2	Determining and delineating the Natural Meaning Units (NMU's)	98
3.5.3	Regrouping of the Natural Meaning Units into themes	98
3.5.4	Central themes in each interview	99
3.5.5	Central themes across the interviews	100
CHAPTER 4	: DATA ANALYSIS	101
	Introduction	101
4.1	The role of theory – Informing assessment and diagnosis of the patient's level of functioning	102
4.2	The centrality of interpreting/working in the transference	103
4.2.1	The centrality of interpreting/working in the transference – A function of the patient's level of functioning	105
4.2.2	The centrality of interpreting/working in the transference – A function of the frequency of weekly sessions	108
4.2.3	The centrality of interpreting/working in the transference – A function of the affective nature of the patient's relation to the figure of the therapist (either positive or negative)	113
4.2.4	The centrality of interpreting/working in the EXPLICIT NEGATIVE transference – A function of HOW the transference is treated and interpreted or worked in	117
4.2.5	The centrality of interpreting or working in the transference - A function of the clarity of the countertransference	119
4.3	On practicing psychoanalytic psychotherapy in the absence of explicit transference manifestations	124
4.3.1	The kinds of patients described	124

4.3.2	Therapeutic aims in the absence of explicit transference manifestations	128
4.4	Therapeutic action and techniques for effecting developmental work in the absence of explicit transference manifestations	129
4.4.1	Establishing the setting as a safe place and functioning as a benign figure	129
4.4.2	Working with ‘other’ material the patient brings as non-transference	131
4.4.3	Containing implicit transference material	135
4.4.4	Maintaining technical neutrality in the absence of explicit transference manifestations	138
4.4.5	The centrality of countertransference analysis and interpretation in the absence of explicit transference manifestations	143
4.5	Extended description of Central Themes	149
CHAPTER 5	: DISCUSSION OF FINDINGS	160
CHAPTER 6	: CONCLUSIONS	189
6.1	Limitations of the present study and implications for further research	195
REFERENCES		198

APPENDICES

Book 2	Appendix 1 – Interview Transcriptions Appendix 2 - Natural Meaning Units Appendix 3 – Interview schedule guideline Appendix 4 – Sample Consent Form
Book 3	Appendix 5 – Individual Analysis of interviews R1, R2, R3, R4 Appendix 6 – Follow-up