

Acknowledgements and Thanks

The production of this thesis has taken many years to complete. A project of this kind is always supported by a host of others without whom concluding it would have been more difficult if not impossible. Amongst the many, too numerous to mention, who have offered assistance and support, special thanks are due to the following:

- ★ Mary de Haas, anthropologist and violence monitor who introduced me to activists in Mpumalanga township and helped me establish contact with the community.
- ★ Zweli, who was my initial contact in Mpumalanga township, and introduced me to other key activists in the area, ensuring my acceptance and facilitating my access.
- ★ Asha Moodley who facilitated contact with the Azapo activists.
- ★ Muzwi Mkhulisi who facilitated contact with young women in Mpumalanga, as well as, acting as a sounding board for events in Mpumalanga township.
- ★ All the research informants who agreed to be part of interviews or focus groups and gave up their time to participate in this project. Some of them did this at a time when there was a possibility that such participation might jeopardise their personal safety. Special mention needs to be made of Edith Nteta who introduced me to many women, discussed events and dynamics in the township and organised a number of the focus groups.
- ★ The many translators who assisted during the focus group interviews – Mrs Maphalala, Victoria Mbona, Thuli and Dumisa.
- ★ There were a number of others who transcribed and translated interview tapes – Makhosi Dlalisa, Moses Hadebe, Pinky Matabela, Phumzile Mtshali, Pinky Radebe, Lucky Zulu, and Brian Xaba - theirs was a thankless task for which I am endlessly grateful. Pip Austin, in London, transcribed many of the ‘young woman’ interviews; and by doing so enabled me to get on with the writing.
- ★ Alison Todes who directed me to various archival sources on the development of Mpumalanga township.
- ★ Nisha Gokool, from the Pietermaritzburg Archival Repository, who assisted in sourcing material on the Geordedale mission area.
- ★ Gerhard Maré who made the resources of the Natal Room available.
- ★ John Aitchison who permitted access to the database of the Unrest Monitoring Project, and Vaughn John who taught me the skills to use the database.
- ★ Astrid von Kotze who alerted me to the presence of Black Sash records at Killie Campbell, as well as the librarians who allowed me access to the uncatalogued boxes.

- ★ Madelaine Fulhard from the Truth and Reconciliation Commission offices in Cape Town who helped source TRC transcripts and amnesty hearings.
- ★ Glen Thompson, from the KwaZulu-Natal Land Commission, who did his best in assisting me with information on the land claims applications for the Georgedale/Hammarsdale area.
- ★ The Gender Institute at the London School of Economics, which on two occasions gave me space – physical and intellectual - to think and write. And Hazel Johnstone, administrator and coordinator extraordinaire, who ensured I had all the physical resources I needed, support and friendship.
- ★ Nhlanganiso Biyela, Frank Sokolic and Brennan Walsh from the Cartography Laboratory, School of Life and Environmental Sciences, University of KwaZulu-Natal; who dedicated their time to making the maps presented in the thesis.
- ★ Isaac Abboy, the Librarian in the Geography Department, School of Life and Environmental Sciences, University of KwaZulu-Natal who sourced historical maps and aerial photographs of the area.
- ★ Jerry Davidson from Durban Metro Surveying Department who sourced maps of current Mpumalanga boundaries and unit divisions.
- ★ Deanne Collins who proofread and edited, keeping to the very tight deadlines.
- ★ Kelley Rowe who sourced forgotten references from the Archives, located page numbers and did much running around in the last days.
- ★ Vidhya Singh who helped me out with printing, and Arthur Baijnath from Information Technology Department who helped with computer glitches.
- ★ My two dear friends; Jennifer Robinson who listened and advised as I talked through the material I was collecting and also read and commented on various chapters and articles along the way; and, Catherine Campbell who provided recommendations to the Gender Institute, and gave me a place to stay in London, endless support and encouragement.
- ★ Gil Hart who was a continual source of critical advice and encouragement.
- ★ My friends, family and colleagues who were supportive and encouraging during this long journey; particularly valued are Jo Beall, Tovi Fester, Keren Giladi, Mark Hunter, Preben Kaarsholm, Amanda Kinners, Adarsh Maharaj, Gerhard Maré, Monique Marks, Irene Schonenberg, Ari Sitas, Alison Todes, Astrid von Kotze, and Liz Walker.
- ★ Tersia Hunter, my mom, Bheki Mncube, and Nadia Sitas who took over childcare at various crucial times in order to allow me time-out to write.
- ★ My supervisor, Professor Deborah Posel, who over the years pushed and prodded my thinking in new directions.
- ★ The University of Natal Research Fund and The Ernest Oppenheimer Trust provided much needed financial assistance, which assisted with parts of this project.

- ★ Finally, Bheki who provided loving encouragement and support (particularly in the last hectic days) and our daughter Nonku; while you stole my time from it and it stole my time from you, you also gave me the inspiration to push on and complete this project.
