

https://dspace.org/

Exploring the psychogeographyof serial murderers in South Africa

Collaros, Debbie

2019-03-10
https://hdl.handle.net/10539/28980
Collaros, Debbie Despina (2019) Exploring the Psycho-Geography of serial murderers in South Africa, University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, <http://hdl.handle.net/10539/28980>

Downloaded from a DSpace repository. https://dspace.org/

00 TITLE PAGE - pg 1 (removed Knocker as am graduating as Collaros)

0 INTRO PAGES - pg 1 (removed Knocker as am graduating as Collaros)

1 INTRODUCTION - pgs 7, 8, 9, 10 (edits and rewording)

2. PSYCHOGEOGRAPHY - pgs 18, 23, 28, 31, 32, 37, 38, 39, 40, 53 (edits and rewording). I am happy to retain the detail of my theoretical detail. Examiner's question at the end about what specifically informs an offender to do what they do where they do, is not answered in that chapter. That is simply presenting the general framework of learned human geographical habits. The specifics are answered later by the actual research.

3. GEOGRAPHICAL PROFILING OF SERIAL MURDER - pgs 65, 68,69, 76, 79, 80, 87, 90, 91, 99, 100, 102, 103, 109, 112, 120, 125, 126, 129, 131, 134, 142, 143, 147, 150, 151, 154, 155, 156, 159, 182 (edits and rewording)

4. METHODOLOGY - No Changes

5. RESULTS – pgs 227, 228, 269 (edits)

6. ANALYSIS – pg 326 (the examiner comments about the table listing. I want individuality on such a small sample so chose to list each one – I did arrange the ages in order, however), pg 330 (examiner asked why victim race is of relevance? other than that it gives us more detail about who is most at risk (black women), it also informs us possibly of why since they are the most accessible (in the public domain with walking and public transport) and vulnerable (because they are women) and possibly more desired than children (for sexual purposes), pg 331 (left it as I spoke of percentages in the preceding discussion), pg 334 / 342 (examiner speaks about motives? but that's not the focus of the research), pg 338 (edit), pg 346 (I could certainly summarise this by eliminating the final long paragraph of descriptions of the relevant offenders who moved bodies...but since there were so few and we had the information to give detail of each, I added it), pg 355 (table summary: again, there are so few in the sample PLUS there actually wasn't an overlap in multiple categories here), pg 356 (I appreciate the examiner's view of rudimentary labels but that was the framework I used and so I retained those label names - the offenders in this tiny sample pretty much did fit the categories), pg 374 (edit), pg 392 (valid point and mentioned as such), pgs 396 and 419 (these are maps that I got from police records: not sure how I could make them any clearer? What I did though was just mention that at the outset on pg 377), pgs 414 and 436 (agreed totally with this - added this to my discussion in Chapter 7), pg 434 (edit)

7. FUTURE RECOMMENDATIONS – pgs 436, 438, 441, 447, 449 (edits), pg 450 (the point is added as a discussion to the final recommendations section, in addition to those from chapter 6), pg 456 (edit)

CH 8 REFERENCES: removed Asratyan (under Arksey) on pg 466 as I removed him with one of my changes in Chapter 2

CH 9 APPENDIX 1: changed my surname to Collaros only on pgs 505 and 507