

https://dspace.org/

From liberators to oppressors: how does political psychology analyse the effects of colonialism in post independent Kenya leadership

Moyaba, Lerato

2017
https://hdl.handle.net/10539/25964
Moyaba, Lerato, (2017) From liberators to oppressors :how does political psychology analyse the effects of colonialism in post independent Kenya leadership, University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, https://hdl.handle.net/10539/25964

Downloaded from a DSpace repository. https://dspace.org/

Political Studies

School of Social Sciences • Private Bag 3, Wits, 2050, South Africa • Tel: +27 11 717-4363 • Fax: +27 11 717-4377
E-mail: politics@social.wits.ac.za • Website: http://ssocial.wits.ac.za/politicals.htm

28th of July 2017

To whom it may concern:

I am writing in my capacity as both supervisor and Head of the Department of Political Studies to formally confirm that the outstanding minor revisions mandated by the internal and external examiners for Lerato Moyaba's (911562) MA dissertation have been completed. As the attached cover letter outlines in more depth, the current version of the dissertation satisfactorily addresses any and all outstanding issues as far as revisions are concerned.

I thereby formally confirm that there should now be no further obstacles to Lerato graduating, since the outstanding revisions were the last requirement. Based on both the examiners reports and email correspondence there should be no requirement to send this version of the dissertation back to the examiners.

If you have any further questions please do not hesitate to get in touch.

Sincerely,

Joel Quirk

Professor and Head of Department

Political Studies, School of Social Sciences
University of the Witwatersrand
Private Bag 3, Wits 2050, Johannesburg

P: +27 (0) 11 717 4358
F: +27 (0) 86 579 5499
E: joel.quirk@wits.ac.za or joel.quirk@yahoo.com