ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I firstly want to acknowledge Professor Phil Bonner, who set me on this road of study with either the idea that Verwoerd had written an antisemitic piece in Die Transvaler, or the suggestion of this being a course of study to fit my interests. I still remember the profound statement he made at the time in that apartheid was about 'separating what was already together.' Next, I acknowledge Professor Milton Shain, whose work and name is synonomous with antisemitism in South Africa, for his support, guidance and keen interest in the research project and for such informative conversations since we share the same topical subject.

Lastly, I owe all my thanks to Professor Lesley Cowling, my supervisor, who took this on even when she had so much on her plate already! She is an absolute marvel and I am incredibly thankful to have benefited from the endless patience, commitment, guidance and thorough attention to my research. I could not have finished it without her 'onwards!'.
