

The impact of commercialisation of the media on the content of the conglomerate-owned community newspapers in South Africa: A study of four community newspapers from the Caxton CTP Publishers stable.

Susan W. Mwangi

A research report submitted to the Faculty of Humanities, University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Masters of Journalism and Media Studies.

Johannesburg, 2007

Abstract

This dissertation draws on empirical research in the print media to consider the impact of commercialisation on the content ferried in community newspapers. The central argument of market driven theories (Badalsty, 1992; Howley, 2005; Bagdikian, 2004) is that the negative effects of commercial interests and dependency on advertisers can be felt on the news pages. In light of what Gillmor (2004:4) refers to as “corporatisation of journalism” this research explores the various issues and themes discussed in four Johannesburg-based community newspapers, namely, Alex News, Diepkloof Urban News, Rosebank-Killarney Gazette and Fourways Review.

The research employs both Qualitative and Quantitative Content Analysis research methods to determine the nature of the publications’ content. The findings of this research indicate that at least two thirds of the content ferried in conglomerate-owned community newspapers has a market-driven slant – meaning that they do not carry high proportions of substantive content. Howley (2005:140) argues that news has become a commercial product that is “shaped, packaged and marketed with a constant eye for profits. Newspapers are businesses dedicated to presenting information within the parameters of profitability”. The desire to please advertisers means that newspapers shun controversial issues, politics and debates for fear of alienating readers. He adds that this aversion is a kind of self-censorship that guarantees that political ideas of public interest do not reach the community and the net result of commercialisation make newspapers content banal.

A newspaper operating in a market-driven environment does not, in the words of McManus’ (1994:218), serve the primary purpose of news, which is to explain how the environment is working so that the citizens can make good decisions, particularly civic decisions. The findings of this research have shown that in their current state, conglomerate-owned community newspapers fall short of this journalistic ideal.

Declaration

I declare that this research is my own unaided work. It is submitted for the degree of Masters of Arts (course work) in the University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg. It has not been submitted before for any other degree or examination in any other university.

.....
(Name of candidate)

.....day of 2007

Acknowledgement

... Mwathani arogocwo!

I would like to thank my supervisor Prof. Nixon Kariithi, for his guidance and insightful discussions throughout the course of this project.

It is with boundless gratitude that I acknowledge my family's support – to mum, dad, Geci, Kirika, Dougy and Nimu, who kept the lines of communication and support open, asanteni sana. To my friend Oluwatoyin, esuen ganni.

To the staff at Caxton, thank you for allowing me access to your archives, to newspapers and to much needed information.

Content	Page
Title page	i
Abstract	ii
Declaration	iii
Acknowledgements	iv
Content page	v
List of Tables	vii
Appendices	viii
Chapter 1: Aim and Rationale
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 Aim	1
1.3 Rationale	2
Chapter 2: Theoretical Framework and Literature Review
2.1 Theoretical Framework	4
2.2 Community and community newspapers	10
2.3 Trends in conglomerate-owned community newspaper ownership in South Africa	13
2.4 Advertising in South Africa's Community newspapers	17
2.5 Research Questions	19
Chapter 3 Methodology
3.1 Research Methods	20
3.2 Sampling	21
3.2 Data Collection and Analysis	23
3.3 Limitations of the study	27
Chapter 4 Research Findings and Discussion
4.1 Quantitative Content Analysis of the community newspapers	30
4.1.1 Analysis of newspaper content	30
4.1.2 Analysis of the newshole	33
4.1.3 Analysis of the pictorial elements in the newspapers	34
4.1.4 Analysis of newspaper content	35
4.1.4.1 Analysis of stand-alone pictures, comic strip	35
4.1.4.2 Analysis of vox-pop	37
4.1.4.3 Analysis of sources of news articles	38
4.1.4.4 Analysis of news articles related to police matters	39
4.1.5 Themes/news categories discussed by journalists	39
4.1.6 Analysis of news articles from unspecified sources	44
4.1.7 Analysis of community participation in the newspapers	47
4.1.8 News articles from news agencies and the internet	52
4.1.9 Analysis of community problems	53
4.1.10 Analysis of political and governance issues	55

4.1.11	Analysis of major newspaper advertisers	59
4.1.12	Analysis of the themes in the news articles from all sources	62
4.1.13	A summary of the thematic content in the news articles	63
4.2	Quantitative Content Analysis
4.2.1	Advertiser related stories	66
4.2.2	Homogenisation of content	68
4.2.3	Maintaining journalism standards	71
4.3	Conclusion	72
Chapter 5 Conclusion
5.1	Conclusion	75
5.2	Implication and significance of findings	75
5.3	Suggestions for further research	79
Bibliography		96

List of Tables:	Page
Table 2.4.1: Above the line Ad-spend in the South African media	18
Table 3.1.1: McManus' categories used to rate the "nutrition" of newspapers	28
Table 3.1.2: Operationalised categories used to rate "nutrition" of newspapers	29
Table 4.1.1: Summary (%) of the newspaper content	30
Table 4.1.2: Content Analysis (%) of the Newshole	33
Table 4.1.3: Page one content	34
Table 4.1.4: Distribution (%) of the Newspaper Content	35
Table 4.1.5: Distribution (%) of news articles the themes discussed by journalists	41
Table 4.1.6: Distribution (%) of the themes from unspecified sources	44
Table 4.1.7: Distribution (%) of the news articles from newspaper readers	48
Table 4.1.8: Content from internet sources in Diepkloof Urban News	52
Table 4.1.9: Summary (%) of the Community Problems	53
Table 4.1.10: Distribution (%) of the Political and Governance issues	56
Table 4.1.11: Distribution (%) of the major Advertisers	60
Table 4.1.12: Summary of the themes in news articles from all sources	63
Table 4.1.13: Summary (%) of the thematic content of news articles	64

Appendices:	Page
Appendix A – Newspaper editions that were analysed in the research	81
Appendix B – Operationalised coding sheet to analyse newspaper content	82
Appendix C – Table & Graph 4.1.1A: Newspaper content	83
Appendix D – Table & Graph 4.1.2A: Details of newshole	84
Appendix E – Table & Graph 4.1.3A: Page-one content	85
Appendix F – Table & Graph 4.1.4A: Newspaper content	86
Appendix G – Table & Graph 4.1.5A: News articles from journalists	87
Appendix H – Table & Graph 4.1.6A: News articles from unspecified sources	88
Appendix I – Table & Graph 4.1.7A: Community letters	89
Appendix J – Table & Graph 4.1.8A: News from agencies and the internet	90
Appendix K – Table & Graph 4.1.9A: Community problems	91
Appendix L – Table & Graph 4.1.10A: News articles on Politics and Government	92
Appendix M – Table & Graph 4.1.11A: Articles from various news sources	93
Appendix N – Table & Graph 4.1.12A: Market- vs Journalism-driven news	94
Appendix O – Table & Graph 4.1.13A: Summary of Market- vs Journalism-driven news	95