CONSTITUTIONAL COURT STATISTICS FOR THE 1997 TERM

INTRODUCTION

This section provides some descriptive statistics on the work of the Constitutional Court in the past year, organized in eight tables. This information should supplement the more substantive analyses presented in the other pages of this issue of the SAJHR. The method of constructing each table is given in the text following the table. These 1997 statistics are primarily drawn from data on the website maintained by the Faculty of Law of the University of the Witwatersrand at <http://www.law.wits.ac.za>. This section covers only cases in which a full written judgment of the Court is produced. Thus, matters disposed of without hearing or by judgment by a single judge – which would be important from the point of view of examining issues such as the control of the Court over its docket – are not included. The objectives and methods of this section are more fully laid out in the 1995 edition of this section.¹

We present these statistics with caution and they should be read likewise. Statistics can often mislead. Furthermore, these statistics describe a small number of cases. Finally, in this section we do not examine the reasoning of judges nor do we examine the facts which the cases present. Thus, the data offered here should be taken as complementary rather than as conclusive and should be interpreted with a high degree of care.

As a whole and as between its members, the Constitutional Court in its 1997 Term exhibited a substantially lower degree of cohesiveness than it did the previous term. Of the decided cases in 1997, including the two provincial certification judgments, 63.2 per cent were unanimous (compared with the 1996 figure of 81.5 per cent) and a further 15.7 per cent had concurrences but no dissent (compared with last year's 14.8 per cent). In 1995, the comparable figures were 57.1 per cent and 21.4 per cent. In 1996, only one case (3.7 per cent) showed any dissent, Du Plessis v De Klerk, a change from the previous year, 1995, where there were three (21.4 per cent). The 1997 figures reveal dissent in four cases (21.1 per cent). Combined with the three cases where concurring judgments were issued, there was debate in seven cases or 36.8 per cent of the decided cases. This indicates that last year's strongly unanimous performance was exceptional. The registration of dissent or significantly differing reasoning in over one-third of the cases counters the perception held in some quarters that the Constitutional Court is void of debate.

The range of agreement rates between judges has also broadened considerably. Amongst the regularly sitting judges, the agreement rates – for full judgment agreement between any two judges – ranged from a low figure of 40 per cent between Didcott J and each of Ackermann J, Mokgoro J and O'Regan J to a high figure of 100 per cent between Chaskalson P and each of Ackermann J and Langa DP. See Table 4. In sum, while broadly cohesive, this Court is characterised by significant internal dialogue.

The Court's docket has shrunk since the previous term, as the total number of cases decided reduced from twenty-seven to nineteen. Criminal cases made up only 31.5 per cent of the total cases decided, indicating a slight increase compared to the previous term (29.6 per cent), but maintaining a substantial decline from 64.3 per cent in the 1995 term. The Court ruled against the prevailing government position in 36.8 per cent of its cases, as compared to last year's 33.3 per cent, and the previous term's 64.3 per cent.

This year's jurisdictional tables still largely concerned cases arising under the interim Constitution (68.4 per cent). The Court dismissed 15.4% of these cases, finding no jurisdiction. The Court granted jurisdiction on the basis of direct access in 21.1% of the cases it heard this year under both constitutions. Perhaps due to the fewer number of cases, the time litigants spent waiting for their cases to be decided as compared with last year decreased from 146.2 days to 120 days.

LIST OF 1997 CASES

Together with the abbreviations used in these tables, the cases decided with written judgments in 1997 are listed here in chronological order of the day the judgment was delivered. Including the two provincial certification cases, there are 19 cases covered by the 1997 statistics.

'L' indicates the leading judgment, containing the decision of the Court on the principal issue. The leading judgment will often but not always contain the order of the Court. Where several issues in different judgments are of significance, two or more judgments may be termed leading.² Reasonable minds can well differ on this identification.

'C' indicates a separate concurrence with reasons with the order of the Court.

'D' indicates a separate dissent with reasons with the order of the Court. A vote to dispose of the case in any manner other than that adopted by the Court in its order is taken as a dissent. Thus, judgments expressing both concurrence and dissent are classified as dissents, for example Madala J's judgment in Du Plessis v De Klerk.

'c' indicates a concurring vote without reasons.

'd' indicates a dissenting vote without reasons.

'–' indicates that the Judge or Acting Judge did not participate in deciding the case.

The two Western Cape provincial constitution certification judgments do not fit easily into these tables. The two judgments were each unanimous and no author was identified. For purposes of these tables, each of the participating judges (Didcott J did not participate in the first certification judgment) is given a 'c'.

2 See 'Constitutional Court Statistics for the 1995 Term' op cit note 1 at 41 for examples and further explanation.

The judges covered in these tables are Chaskalson P (Ch), Langa DP (La), Ackermann J (Ac), Didcott J (Di), Goldstone J (Go), Kriegler J (Kr), Madala J (Md), Mokgoro J (Mo), O'Regan J (OR), Sachs J (Sa), Mahomed DP (Mh), and Kentridge AJ (Ke).

This table is calculated on the same basis as the preceding one.

TABLE 3: UNANIMITY PERCENTAGE – 1997

	Unanimous	With Concurrences	With Dissent	Total
A: Cases (Cert)	12(63.2%)	(Without Dissent) 3(15.7%)	4(21.1%)	19(100%)
B: Cases (No Cert)	10(58.8%)	3(17.6%)	4(23.5%)	17(100%)

In this table, unanimous means that all judges concurred in both the judgment of the Court and the order. With concurrences (without dissent) means that at least one judge wrote separately but concurred in the order of the Court and that no judge dissented. With dissent means that at least one judge would have made a different order.

In this table, the second number represents the total number of cases in which two judges have sat together. The first number represents the number of cases in which the two judges have either fully agreed in a judgment of the other, co-written a judgment, or fully agreed in a judgment of another judge. If a judge writes that she is concurring but only overall or with certain reservations or with any restatement of the other judge's views, this is not classified as full agreement.³ Thus, judgments which are philosophically very similar may well be counted as not agreeing for the purposes of this table.

³ See ibid for further discussion of the method of determining agreement.

TABLE 5: SUBJECT MATTER OF CASES DECIDED – 1997

	Rights	Other	Total
Civil ⁴	7	4	11 (58%)
Criminal ⁵	5	1	6 (31.5%)
Intra-Governmental ⁶	-	2	2 (10.5%)
Total	12 (63.2%)	7	19 (36.8%) (100%)

In this table, cases are classified as 'criminal' when a person is subject to the criminal or penal laws. 'Intra-governmental' cases are those between two organs of government or, as in the certification judgments, ex parte on behalf of one organ. Other cases are 'civil'.

Cases are classified as rights cases if the majority judgment in the principal issue turns on a fundamental right.

In 1995 and 1996, this table and the following were combined into one.

TABLE 6: GOVERNMENT SUCCESS RATE – 1997

	Gov	v Gov
Civil	8 ⁷	3 ⁸
Criminal	3 ⁹	3 ¹⁰
Intra-Governmental	1 ¹¹	1 ¹²
Total	12 (63.2%)	7 (36.8%)

Cases are classified as for the government if a central, provincial or local government or an agency or a person in an official capacity prevails on the principal issue. A case is also counted as for the government if the status quo ante prevails. If the central government opposes another organ of government, the case is classified as for the government if the central government prevails. If agencies or organs of equivalent tiers of government are opposed, the case is counted neither for nor against the government. Due to its relatively formalistic definition, this statistic should be used with particular caution.
